One Clause Keeps GSI And Union In Dispute

Both Sides Agree To Proposals of Mediator; Rehiring Issue Contested

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

Only one disputed clause stands in the way of settling the GSI cafeteria strike, the two parties and the mediator agreed yesterday following a hearing on the dispute by a House Labor Subcommittee.

Local 471, United Cafeteria and Restaurant Workers (UPW-CIO), whose members are picketing 40 GSI cafeterias in Government buildings, agreed last week to accept specific proposals made by George E. Strong, mediator, and agreed to one of two changes in the proposal requested by GSI, it was revealed.

Strong, who came under the fire of Subcommittee Chairman Clare E. Hoffman (R., Mich.) at yesterday's hearing, said later he believed the union and the management were "pretty close" to agreement.

Rehiring in Dispute

The only point at issue is whether Strong or arbitrators from the American Arbitration Association would make decisions in disputes over rehiring of striking workers. The agreement would provide that such rehiring would be on the basis of the relative efficiency of individual striking employes as against the efficiency of those hired since the strike.

All other provisions of the proposed agreement, offered by Strong after more than two months of striking by the cafeteria workers, have been approved by the GSI board and by the local union, both GSI President U. S. Grant, 3d, and Alfred Bernstein of the UPW international, said yesterday.

Subcommittee Assailed

General Grant said that under the proposed agreement, vacancies would be filled as they occurred from the ranks of the strikers, who would have preference over those who have never belonged to the union.

Bernstein, who said the subcommitter acted "outrageously" in "not even notifying the union" of yesterday's hearing, said the GSI arbitration proposal on rehiring was "obviously aimed at causing undue delay and would prevent the strikers from returning to work." The union, he said, has "perfect confidence" in Strong as an arbitrator.

Clashes between Representative Hoffman and Strong featured the hearing yesterday, as Hoffman repeatedly asked the mediator why he would negotiate with Bernstein, who, he said, "under oath refused to tell us whether he was affiliated with an organization which seeks the overthrow of the Government of the United States." Strong replied he was not in a

Congress Given $6000 Value on $8700 GI Homes

An independent appraiser, working for a congressional committee, has set a value of $6000 on the homes being sold to GIs at Viers Mill Village for $8700, it was learned yesterday.

As a result, a subcommittee of the House Committee on Executive Expenditures soon will hold a full-dress inquiry into the Montgomery County 1400-dwelling project.

The subcommittee, headed by Representative Clair E. Hoffman (R., Mich.) will meet tomorrow to name a specific date for the hearing.

The House committee wants to learn if and why FHA and VA have permitted the construction of overvalued, substandard housing with Government financing.

Art Taken From Nazis to Be Shown Here

RAPHAEL MASTERPIECE—Raphael's famed Umbrian panel, "Madonna and Child With the Little Saint John," is included in a collection of priceless art treasures, removed from a German salt mine early in 1945, which will be shown at the National Gallery, March 17 through April 18. $80,000,000 Show

Washingtonians to Get View Of Seized German Paintings

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

Two hundred world-famous paintings removed from Germany in 1945 by the American Army, will be shown to Washingtonians starting March 17—then returned to Germany.

The works of art, valued by one estimate at 80 million dollars, will not be shown anywhere else in the United States. They will be exhibited at the National Gallery of Art from Wednesday, March 27, through Sunday, April 18.

The decision, announced by Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall, ended a controversy in political and art circles over whether the United States had a right to remove the art in the first place, whether the works should be exhibited in this country, and whether they should be returned.

The collection includes such masters as Raphael, Rembrandt, Titian, Fra Angelico, Peter Breughel the Elder, Vermeer and Rubens.

The exhibit is expected to bring record Easter vacation crowds to the National Gallery, where the paintings have been stored since they were brought here for safekeeping by the United States Army in 1945.

The paintings were discovered

Sen. Lucas May Support GOP Tax Cut

'If Reduction Is Reasonable,' Says Democratic Whip

By the United Press

Senate Democratic Whip Scott W. Lucas said yesterday he will support the Republican tax-reduction program if the amount of the cut is "reasonable."

His support would make it probable that a majority of Democratic members of the Senate Finance Committee would side with the Republicans—and against President Truman—on cutting taxes.

Senator Johnson (D., Colo.) said he will vote for the GOP tax-cutting plan if the reduction is held down to between $4,500,000,000 and five million. This is the amount Senate Republicans have decided on.

Johnson predicted Congress would override a presidential veto of such a bill. Republican Senators also are counting on the votes of two other Democratic members of the committee, George (Ga.) and Byrd (Va.)

The committee comprises seven Republicans and six Democrats. It is scheduled to finish hearings Wednesday on the House-approved bill to cut personal income taxes $6,500,000,000.

Lucas of Illinois, said he believed around four billion dollars would be a "reasonable" tax reduction. But he indicated he might go a little higher.

Merger of Parties Sought in Hungary

Budapest, Hungary, March 6 (U.P.).—Deputy Prime Minister and Party Leader Arpad Szakasits today asked the Social Democratic convention for authority to start negotiations to merge the party with the Communists under the name United Workers Party.

'You're Fired,' Long Tells La. Senator-Elect

Baton Rouge, La., March 6 (U.P.). Governor-Designate Earl K. Long, brother of Huey (Kingfish), slapped a State Senator-elect across the chest today and told him angrily: 'You're fired, right here and now.'

The incident occurred on the floor of the State House of Representatives after a heated argument between Long and Senator-elect John O'Connor of New Orleans. The argument started after a meeting of the State Central Democratic Committee.

Long was heard by dozens of politicians to shout at O'Connor: "You, your brother and your father have been on the payroll all your life. You are fired, right here and now."

With that, Long slapped O'Connor across the chest with his open hand. O'Connor was led away by a friend.

Funds Withheld

Richmond, Va., March 6 (AP).—The Democratic State Central Committee today condemned President Truman's civil rights proposals, requested that funds be withheld from the national committee and commended Governor Tuck for his "courageous stand" against the Truman proposals.

The strongly worded resolution adopted by unanimous vote deplored what it termed the "patent effort on the part of the President and the national Democratic leaders to out-Wallace Wallace."

A Virginia Democratic convention was called to meet in Richmond at noon on Friday, July 2, and the basis of representation was fixed at one delegate for each 100 votes or major fraction thereof cast by counties and cities in the 1945 gubernatorial election.

The State executive committee, meeting immediately after the central committee adjourned, voted to hold the funds raised at the Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner here with other party funds until further action by the two com-

Larry Kelly Is Dead, Says Ex-Shipmate

GW Student Tells Of Seeing Missing Union Head Buried On Pacific Island

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

A possible key to the strange disappearance of Larry Kelly, Washington labor leader, is offered in a sworn statement of a George Washington University student who disclosed yesterday he may have attended Kelly's funeral in New Guinea.

Lewis G. Stubbs of 1105 20th st., S. Arlington, Va., said he was purser during the war of the SS Clarence Darrow, the ship aboard which a man with Kelly's name and description died while on duty as a second cook in June, 1944.

Kelly had been head of the Local 74, International Hod Carriers and Building Laborers' Union here. He is still a central figure in a conspiracy trial soon to be held in District Court involving illegal embezzlement of union funds.

Traced to West Coast

It was through Kelly that thousands of dollars of union funds were spent illegally, according to charges. Other defendants in the trial include Joseph V. Moreschi, John Garvey and Archilles Persian, who head the international union. Preliminary argument in the trial will be held Friday.

Shortly before his indictment in 1944, Kelly suddenly disappeared from his Berwyn, Md. home, which the indictment charges was built with union funds. The FBI traced Kelly to San Francisco and then lost him.

Kelly was next discovered at sea, according to evidence. He was a cook aboard the Clarence Darrow. It is at this point that Stubbs becomes important to the case.

Stubbs signed a death report of a man named Larry Kelly, 52, but with the serial number of another man. The serial number was of a man named Alton Minger, a night cook aboard the Clarence Darrow. Minger's name was just below Kelly's on the ship roster.

Conflicting Evidence

But, according to Leo A. Rover, special assistant to the Attorney General, and the man who will prosecute the labor leaders, there is other evidence that Kelly is still alive.

Rover says, however, that he also has received an affidavit from Stubbs which bears out the information received by The Washington Post.

But, says Rover:

"There are some people who say they have seen Larry Kelly alive in Washington since 1945. These people are members of Local 74, Kelly's union. I do not say I know they saw Kelly, but that is what they say. That and the difference in serial numbers is why I have not suggested to District Court that Kelly is dead, to eliminate him from the trial."

Stubbs' affidavit says:

"During the time I was employed on the ship, I became acquainted with a Mr. Larry Kelly, second cook, and I became pretty friendly with him, during which time I learned that he was from the same

The Gallup Poll

Survey Brings Forth a Secret: How to Be Happy Though Wed

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., March 5.—What is the most important quality needed in a good wife?

Faithfulness? Devotion? Sex appeal?

The average American man—single or married—says it's none of these. He wants his wife to possess above everything else the ability to create pleasant surroundings in his home and to be a neat housekeeper and above average talents in the kitchen.

What do American women think is the most important quality a husband should have? Intelligence? Attractiveness? Kindness?

These are important, no doubt, but the average woman gives No. 1 priority to "being an accomplished breadwinner, providing a good living for the family."

These "Americana" sidelights are revealed in a survey of thousands of married people and single men and women in every section of the country. Field reporters for the institute asked these representative people:

"What would you say is the most important quality in a good husband (wife")? The answers follow:

Committee Calls for End

D. C. Bar Due to Act Tuesday On Arrests for Investigation

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

A recommendation calling for an immediate end to the police practice of arrests for investigation will be placed before the District Bar Association Tuesday evening.

The recommendation was adopted by 9-to-4 vote of the civil rights committee in January, but was officially made public for the first time yesterday.

The committee also urged a study by a bar subcommittee of possible new legislation dealing with arrests for investigation.

The committee's recommendations are based on a report filed by a special subcommittee headed by Burr Tracy Ansell. Minority reports calling, in effect, for further study and consideration of the matter were submitted by Milton S. Kronheim, jr., and Hilary W. Costello.

The Ansell subcommittee report resulted from a survey made last fall by The Washington Post.

The survey disclosed that between October 1 and November 10 almost 900 arrests "for investigation" had been made by the police here, excluding some 300 such arrests that were later changed to arrests for specific crimes.

The 900 arrested for investigation, the subcommittee report states, "were detained by the po-

50-Year Pact Framed; Big Three Clear Way For Zone Federation

Conferees Agree To Internationalize Ruhr, Put Zones Into Marshall Plan

London, March 6 (U.P.).—The United States, Britain, and France ended an "extraordinarily successful" conference on Germany today by agreeing to include the western zones in the Marshall Plan, to internationalize the Ruhr and to establish—eventually—a federated Germany.

The Benelux states—Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg—were represented at the conference.

The Soviet Union was not invited.

Most important of the results was that the Big Three moved a step closer to establishing a federal western Germany as a part of an envisioned economic union of free western European nations.

Spurred by Red Moves

Admittedly spurred by Communist moves in Czechoslovakia and Finland, the Big Three conferees agreed to recommend to their respective governments:

1. That western Germany have a full part in the Marshall Plan in order to assure the "political well-being of the countries of western Europe." American sources said occupation authorities would represent Germany "for the time being."

2. That the Ruhr be placed under international control, with Germany given a voice in its administration. There would be safeguards to see that its industrial production would never again be used for a war of aggression.

3. That merger of the American, British and French zones under "a federal form of government" with "adequate central authority is best adapted for eventual re-establishment of German unity, at present disrupted."

For the present, the western powers recommend prompt coordination of economic policies among the three zones, including such items as foreign and interzonal trade, customs, freedom of movement for persons and goods.

Douglas Enthusiastic

"Within 10 days more progress has been made than during the preceding three years," Lewis Douglas, Ambassador to Britain and chief American delegate said.

"It was an extraordinarily successful and fruitful meeting."

American sources said "the recent changes in Europe influenced everybody's mind."

The conference did not adjourn, but recessed so that the 16 Mar-

Sen. Bridges Asks:

What's Basic U. S. Policy On Russia?

By The Associated Press

Senator Bridges (R., N. H[illegible] last night the Administr[illegible] going to have to speak [illegible] "basic policy toward Ru[illegible] fore any foreign relief [illegible] appropriated.

Bridges, chairman [illegible] Appropriations Committee, [illegible] porters: "We have to find out what the basic policy is toward Russia and what we are going to do under certain contingencies."

Bridges' committee must pass on all the Administration's requests for funds to help foreign countries. These include the $5,300,000,000 European Recovery Program which the Senate now is debating; 570 million dollars for China; 275 million more for Greece and Turkey, and 20 million dollars for Trieste.

Bridges said the committee has to have "some deadline so as to know how to proceed."

He said that, for example, the committee must know what the Administration plans to do if Greece and Turkey are attacked. He said the committee also wants to know what the Administration has in mind if the Communists take over Italy.

Bridges said he concurs with Chairman Vandenberg (R., Mich.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that the ERP should be speedily enacted. He added he will vote for the $5,300,000,000 authorization.

But at the same time Bridges made it clear the Administration will have to justify that amount before the actual appropriation, in another bill, is approved by his committee.

He said the Appropriations Committee staff has already started work on the details of the amount

Western European Union Committed To Democratic Ideas, Armed Aid

Brussels, Belgium, March 6 (AP).—The political and legal basis on a western European economic and military union [illegible] laid down tonight.

[illegible]urces said there was gen[illegible]ent on the basic princi[illegible]-year pact binding Bri[illegible]ce, Belgium, the Nether[illegible]and Luxembourg, but con[illegible]erable work remained before [illegible]e basic agreements can be phrased. The conference, which opened last Thursday, is expected to continue until next Wednesday or Thursday.

British delegates said the structure agreed upon here will be a union committed to Western ideas of democracy to which no totalitarian could subscribe.

Mutual Defense Agreed

Sir George Rendel, British Ambassador to Belgium, said it will definitely commit the western union to mutual armed defense, but will make no attempt to detail defense provisions.

The political basis of the pact was reached at tonight's session. Gladwyn Jebb of the British Foreign Office said one of the main points of political discussion was the attitude toward states outside the pact. He indicated all parties agreed the pact must unequivocally favor Western ideas of liberty.

An unofficial Belgian source also reported the pact included a statement committing its signers to freedom of the press.

Outlining the problem presented by the attitude toward other countries, Jebb said, "We wouldn't exactly be eager to have General Franco join it tomorrow morning."

Because of the desire to finish the pact before the 16-nation Marshall Plan conference in Paris on March 15, it was bel[illegible]d some details may be passed o[illegible] for later settlement, particularly implementation of the military agreement.

The future of the pact and its wider implications "will work itself out," Sir George explained. "It will depend on how keen the support for it is."

Expressing general optimism, Jebb said "This is quite a change from other conferences I have attended. There the question was how to work out formulas that would bridge basic differences. Here we are looking for the best way to express basic agreements."

The last session of the week tonight was devoted to "political and juridical questions," Pierre Elvinger, the Luexmbourg delegate, said. He left when the ses-

U. S. Gets Hint Second Nation Owns A-Bomb

But Only This Country Has Enough for War, Canadian Tells Forum

New York, March 6 (AP).—A. G. L. McNaughton, head of Canada's delegation to the United Nations, hinted today it is known that another country besides the United States has atomic bombs although not enough of them to wage atomic war.

"The prohibition of the use and manufacture of the atomic bomb at the present time would merely seriously reduce the military strength of the United States, the only Nation now in possession of atomic bombs, at least on any scale which would suffice to make atomic war," General McNaughton said in an address for the New York Herald Tribune Forum for high schools.

The general, formerly Canada's representative on the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission, did not elaborate.

He said there was hope that Russia will agree to international control of atomic energy but declared Russia was not yet prepared to yield on certain points which other countries held essential.

". . . It is not too much to hope that eventually a way will be found to traverse the opposition of those who presently control the policy of the Soviet," said General McNaughton.

Roxas Outlaws Huks; Captured Red Flags Shown

Manila, March 6 (AP).—President Manuel A. Roxas told a special press conference today he was formally outlawing the Hukbalahap guerilla organization and its affiliated National Peasants Union.

The Phillipines President charged the "Huks" plotted to assassinate him in 1946. He also reiterated assertions the group was Communist-led and aimed at forcible overthrow of his government.

He displayed documents and red flags which he said had been captured by government forces in 95 clashes with the guerillas since April, 1946.

Roxas quoted Huk leaders as having said they wanted to establish a Communist government and were "expecting Russia to arrive in the Philippines to help us accomplish this end."

4 Alleged Reds Freed on Bond In Deportations

New York, March 6 (AP).—Federal Judge William Bondy today ordered four alleged alien Communists released in bail of $3500 each, pending argument on their appeal from dismissal of habeas corpus writs.

The four are Gerhart Eisler, described by a congressional committee as America's No. 1 Communist; John Williamson, labor secretary of the Communist Party; Ferdinand Smith, secretary of the CIO National Maritime Union, and Charles A. Doyle, an official of the CIO United Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers.

Arguments are scheduled to be heard by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals Monday.

The judge acted after he had dismissed petitions for the habeas corpus writs by the four, who have been on a hunger strike at the Ellis Island detention quarters. They have been awaiting deportation proceedings.

'Terrible Situation' Seen

Reds Build War in Every Act Of Aggression, Churchill Says

London, March 6 (NYHT).—Winston Churchill today declared "the menace of a third world war rolls towards us with every act of Russian imperialist aggression and Communist violence and intrigue."

The Conservative leader made the statement to the Tory candidate in next week's crucial North Croydon by-election. He said "we are moving into a terrible situation at home and abroad," and "the march of events in the near future will inexorably dominate party politics at home."

The Conservatives held the North Croydon seat in the 1945 general election, but the entry of Air Vice Marshal Donald C. T. Bennett as a Liberal candidate may split the vote and give Harold Nicholson, Laborite, a victory.

Herbert Morrison, Labor Party leader in Commons, joined Churchill in declaiming against the Communist coup. Of the assertion by Prime Minister Klement Gottwald of Czechoslovakia that he heads a "truly democratic state," Morrison said:

The truth is that if you expel all who are not Communists or their tools from the police, and arm the rest with rifles: If you organize and arm a party militia: if you, for no reason of industrial dispute but as a mere gesture of blackmail, call a general strike: if you commandeer, or suppress, or censor news and newspapers and order the expulsion of individual journalists from their union: if you

obert J. Coffey and Brian Blades

e most recent blast at Gallinger Hospital's present ad[illegible]istartion originated from two of the institution's top surgeons, Drs. Robert J. Coffey and Brian Blades.

Last Tuesday, the pair issued a sweeping indictment of the hospital administration, and urged removal of the District Health Department's ten-year control.

The two medicos, who also head the surgical staffs of Georgetown and George Washington Universities, respectively, called for a separate agency, known as the hospital department, to control Gallinger. They found fault with existing space, equipment, and even the 40-hour week.

District Health Officer George C. Ruhland, "astounded" at their criticisms and "mud-slinging," yesterday fought back. He called upon the District Medical Society to make an investigation of Gallinger. The criticism has had a bad effect on the patients, employes and the public, he said.

The two doctors whose criticisms may prove the straw that broke the camel's back are widely known surgeons, both in civil and military practice.

Dr. Coffey, 39, served in the Navy Medical Corps during the war, both at Bethesda and later as surgeon aboard the battleship Iowa.

Dr. Blades, 42, was chief of thoracic surgery at Walter Reed during World War II, and also consultant to the Army Surgeon General.

Dr. Coffey, a native of Elmira, N. Y., was appointed professor of surgery at Georgetown in April, 1947. He had been a member of that school's medical staff before the war.

Dr. Blades, born in Salina, Kans., joined George Washington's staff as professor of surgery in early 1946, after separation from the Army. Head of the Army's first thoracic surgery section, he was awarded the Legion of Merit.

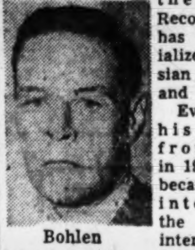
An M.D. graduate of Georgetown in 1932, Dr. Coffey also holds a Ph.D. in Surgery from the University of Minnesota.

Dr. Blades was graduated from Kansas University and Washington University in St. Louis, where he was associate professor of surgery for a time.

Married and the father of a daughter, Dr. Coffey makes his home at 3259 P st. nw.

Dr. Blades, married and the father of two girls and a son, lives at 117 Albemarle st., Westmoreland Hills.

Charles E. Bohlen



Bohlen

Charles E. (Chip) Bohlen, who called on western European nations yesterday to consolidate against Communist opposition to the European Recovery Plan, has long specialized in Russian customs and politics.

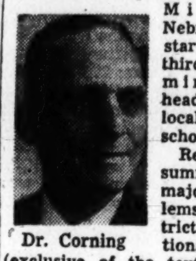
Even before his graduation from Harvard in 1927, Bohlen became deeply interested in the Soviet—an interest that later led to his assignment on the staff of William C. Bullitt when the latter was Ambasador to Russia.

At the Yalta and Teheran conference he acted as President Roosevelt's interpreter.

Still lithe as he was when he played on the scrub football team at Harvard, Bohlen carries his six-foot-one 175-pound frame with a youthful air that belies his 43 years.

The nickname "Chipper" later shortened to "Chip" was bestowed on him by fellow members of the exclusive Porcellian Club at Harvard. A resident of Georgetown, Bohlen is married and is the father of two children.

Dr. Hobart M. Corning



Dr. Corning

Dr. Hobart M. Corning, District school superintendent, who yesterday rowed again about school books with Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.), is just starting his third year as administrative head of the local public school system.

Recently he summed up the major problems of the District's educational system (exclusive of the textbook feud) as being the teacher shortage, lack of buildings, and the prospect of changes proposed by the Auchincloss home-rule plan.

A native of Ohio, Dr. Corning moved to the District at an early age, attended elementary school and was graduated from Central High. He was awarded a scholarship to Dickinson College, Pa., where he received his master's degree in English in 1912. Later, he received his master's degree in school administration and his school superintendent's diploma from Columbia University.

Serving first as a Johnstown, Pa. high school teacher, Dr. Corning moved up to school superintendencies in Pennslyvania and Colorado before, in 1940, he assumed a similar post in Omaha, Nebr.

Since he has been in Washington (he was appointed for a three-year term beginning March 1, 1946) Dr. Corning has called repeatedly for more and better schools here, and has estimated it will take 50 million dollars to keep local schools up to accepted educational standards.

West May Seek U. S. Rainmaker

Ely, Nev., March 6 (AP).—The drought-stricken West may ask the Federal Government to try its hand at artificial rain-making over a seven-State area.

Northern California and western Nevada, especially, have been suffering from a drought so severe that electrical power has been reduced drastically.

U. S. Scholarship Grants Proposed

Studebaker Asks Program to Take Up Slack When GI Training Drops Off

By The Associated Press

Education Commissioner John W. Studebaker proposed yesterday that Federal scholarships take up the slack when the GI educational program begins to taper off.

Studebaker said, in the annual report of the Office of Education, that a permanent scholarship program should be developed before 1950. That is the year veterans training is expected to start a steep decline.

"National conservation of our human resources is imperative in any integrated national security program," Studebaker said.

"To cite but one example, there is an urgent need to make up wartime arrears in the training of scientists. Many more highly trained scientists are needed to expand the research activities upon which our future national security and industrial progress so largely depend.

"By a system of Federal scholarships the national interests in the further strengthening and democratization of higher educational opportunities can be permanently assured. To strengthen education is to contribute mightily to a healthy economy, improved physical and mental health, an understanding of democracy, and a greater sense of personal responsibility for its success."

Studebaker also called for general Federal aid to education.

"Year after year the deplorable results of educational discrepancies between richer and poorer States, between urban and rural communities, and between schools for white and for Negro children have been pointed out," he said.

The report said the exodus of teachers from public schools since 1940 has been without parallel in American history.

"This situation has become a national hazard," the report said. The main reasons given for the withdrawals: inadequate salaries and heavy overloads of work.

AFL Backs Air Editorial in 'Compromise'

By The Associated Press

The Federal Communications Commission yesterday sifted clashing views of 35 witnesses on letting the radio industry editorialize.

A spokesman for the American Federation of Labor, one of the final witnesses as Chairman Wayne Coy recessed hearings until April 19, proposed a compromise.

Let radio networks and stations broadcast their own "editorials," said AFL Economist Boris Shishkin. But require that they also give "full and equal opportunity" to others to present contrary views.

Three major networks and a number of stations have asked complete editorial freedom, with no strings attached. They told FCC that radio is entitled to full freedom of speech under the Constitution, and said there was "discrimination" in favor of newspapers otherwise.

The industry view was supported by John W. Studebaker, United States Commissioner of Education. He filed a statement Friday calling attention to FCC's own rule requiring broadcasters to treat public issues "fairly, objectively and without bias." Such an obligation, he said, implies that a station owner should present his own views when that is necessary to balance other opinions broadcast by his station.

Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, held that "no instrument of expression, including the radio, should be restricted, openly or indirectly, in the exercise of free speech."

Almedia, Wife Arrested in Bank Holdup

By the United Press

FBI agents yesterday arrested David F. Almeida, 33, and his wife, Anna, 31, at Cleveland for the robbery of the Hibernia National Bank at New Orleans, January 9, the Justice Department announced.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover said the agents found more than $20,000 of the loot in paper bags in a suitcase in Almeida's apartment, and two loaded revolvers.

The arrests culminated an intensive Nation-wide search for the couple. Almeida was indicted January 29 at New Orleans on a charge of violating the Federal bank robbery statute. Mrs. Almeida was charged with the same offense in a complaint filed at New Orleans January 12.

The arrests completed the round-up of six persons wanted for the $114,000 robbery.

The FBI said Almeida and one of the others seized for the robbery—James Francis Smith—had been sought for the year-old murder of Cecil Ingling, Philadelphia policeman. Ingling was shot in a holdup of a Philadelphia market January 30, 1947.

The FBI said Almeida, Smith and George Washington Ricketts, Thomas Ricketts and John Calvin Hasselbeck forced their way into the mid-city branch of the Hibernia National Bank before it opened for the day. When the bank employes arrived for work, they were commanded to stand against the wall at the rear of the bank.

The FBI said Mrs. Almeida participated in the planning of the robbery, bought the bags the loot was placed in and was present when the money obtained in the robbery was divided.

FTC Lawyer Tells of Steel Power Boast

By The Associated Press

A Government official testified yesterday that an attorney for a big steel company told him "it looks like we have to do something about you, or we will have to cut off the Federal Trade Commission's appropriations."

The FTC currently is checking on the steel industry's method of establishing basic steel prices. The witness, L. C. Paulson, is an FTC attorney who is spearheading the action against the industry.

Paulson told a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee that the attorney, whom he did not name, told him last Tuesday:

"Well, it looks like we have to do something about you. Either you have to go up or down, or we will have to cut off the Federal Trade Commission's appropriations."

Paulson said the conversation occurred the day the joint Congressional Committee on the Economic Report was inquiring into recent steel price increases.

John F. Sonnett, head of the Justice Department's antitrust division, was asked if he could tell anything about the result of the inquiry. He said he couldn't because it is not finished.

The FBI investigation was started at the request of President Truman. It followed a general increase of about $5 a ton in some semifinished steel items.

Clark to Talk With Lane on Resignation

Annapolis, Md., March 6 (AP).—Governor Lane and John E. Clark, chairman of the Tidewater Fisheries Commission, will meet Monday to discuss Clark's resignation which the Chief Executive has demanded.

Lane said Clark asked for the conference in a letter. The Governor emphasized, "I have given no thought to, nor do I contemplate withdrawing my request for his resignation."

Meanwhile, a commercial seafood operators organization in Crisfield, Md., said it will try to "get rid of" Clark and one other member of the Fisheries Commission, Allan A. Sollers.

Earle Dize, president of the Crisfield Seafood Association, said he and his associates "will bring all the pressure we can to get rid of Clark—and Sollers, too, if we can."

Lane's request last week for Clark's resignation came as the result of an open dispute between Clark and the third member of the commission, George T. Harrison. Harrison is president of a Tilghman's Island seafood packing company.

The dispute developed over the status of Capt. Amos Creighton, long-time commander of the Tidewater Fisheries patrol fleet.

Sollers has been a silent "noncombatant" in the controversy.

Political observers here speculated today on the possibility that David H. Wallace, executive secretary of the Tidewater Fisheries Commission, may succeed Clark as its chairman.

New German 'Senate' Holds Secret Session

Frankfort, Germany, March 6 (AP). — Western Germany's new "Senate" startled Allied officials yesterday by holding a secret session.

The officials, charged with teaching the Germans what democracy means, said they would investigate how the press and public happened to be barred.

A spokesman for the Schleswig-Holstein delegation said the "Senate" ratified the election of Dr. Hermann Puender as chief executive for western Germany.

Georgia Governor Is Accused Of Abusing Klan's Confidence

Atlanta, March 6 (AP).—The grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan today virtually accused the Governor of Georgia, M. E. Thompson, of a double-cross.

Dr. Samuel Green, the klan chief, was hurt because Thompson had some harsh words to say yesterday about klan "meetings of intimidation."

Green wrote the Governor:

"In 1946 when you were begging for klan support for lieutenant governor . . . and you were elected, you thought the klan was a respectable organization. . . .

"The thousands of klansmen who voted for you in 1946 . . . will certainly feel that their confidence in you was misplaced."

Thompson chuckled and then sniffed. "I never sought klan support. I never attended a klan meeting and I am not a member."

As an after thought, the Governor added dryly, "And I never expect to join."

The quarrel between Thompson and Green started when the Governor ordered four prisoners removed from the State prison at Reidsville and returned to the jurisdiction of Emanuel County authorities.

The four were accused of killing a State police agent and Governor Thompson said he feared people would say Georgia was afraid of mob violence and had to keep them in the stronghold at Reidsville.

The prisoners were transferred today without incident. Thompson used the occasion to berate the klan for holding "intimidation" meetings at Wrightsville and klan at Swainsboro . . ."

It was to Swainsboro that the prisoners were transferred.

Dr. Green's comment on the transfers of prisoners was:

"Melvin (the Governor's first name), you knew full well when you moved those prisoners . . . You were secure from mob violence due to the fact there was a Klan at Swainsboro . . ."

Falkland Isle Protests Filed

Port Stanley, Falkland Islands, March 6 (AP).—Britain has delivered a protest to Argentina and received one in return in the dispute over the Antarctic Falkland Island dependencies.

The British protest was delivered by Miles Clifford, Governor of the Falkland Islands, who arrived at Deception Island Thursday aboard the British cruiser Nigeria, messages received here today said.

Clifford, accompanied by an officer from the Nigeria, went to the Argentine camp at Pourquoi Pas Bay and delivered a note protesting Argentina's "unauthorized occupation."

Government officials here said Lieut. Cabrera, leader of the Argentine detachment, immediately protested presence of the Nigeria "in Argentine territorial waters without authority of the Argentine government."

Later the lieutenant visited the Nigeria.

Six-Week Search For Missing Plane In Bay Is Futile

Baltimore, March 6 (AP).—A six-week search for a missing Washington-bound plane with four men aboard believed to have crashed into Chesapeake Bay was officially ended today.

Commodore J. E. Whitbeck, commander of the Fifth Coast Guard District, called off the search for the Lockheed Lodestar. It was last heard from over Baltimore Municipal Airport January 24, during a swirling snow storm.

Port Capt. George E. McCabe said "not one iota of evidence as to the plane's fate has been found. Searchers have covered practically every square foot of bottom from Fort McHenry to Sparrows Point."

Weather Bureau Warns of Flood Threats in Iowa

Chicago, March 6 (AP).—Heavy snow swirled across Iowa toward Minnesota and northern Wisconsin today. The Weather Bureau warned that flood threats were building up in Iowa.

Snow on the ground ranged up to 30 inches in parts of Iowa and a thaw was forecast for the week-end.

Heavy rains drenched the South and the Mississippi Valley. Nearly 10 inches of rain fell in New Orleans in 24 hours—heaviest on record for March. High winds, ranging up to 45 miles an hour, swept southern Florida.

World Wheat Price Agreement Signed

Wheat Leads Drop

Grain Prices Tumble on Trade Board

Chicago, March 6 (AP).—Grain prices took a tumble on the Board of Trade with the May wheat contract leading the way. Final quotations were just about at the day's lows.

Failure of the Government to announce acceptance of flour offers was the main reason for the slump, particularly in May wheat. That contract spurted most when the Agriculture Department first called for offers on flour equal to 9,300,000 bushels of wheat this week.

Other contributing factors in the slump were more snow and rain in the Southwest and a weaker tone in the spot markets, where recent high premiums paid for both cash oats and corn were shaved.

Wheat closed ¾ to 5 cents lower; May $2.44½-$2.44. Corn was 2¾ to 4¾ lower, May $2.24¼ to $2.24. Oats were 1¾ lower to 1 cent higher, the inactive March contract showing the advance. May oats closed at $1.14¾. Soybeans dropped 8 cents, March $3.66.

The Agriculture Department announced acceptance of flour offers would not be made known until after the close Monday. Originally, it was planned to wire confirmations to mills today. The department said the delay was caused by heavy offerings, confirming trade rumors the department was swamped by mills to get orders to keep their plants going.

An official announcement from the International Wheat Conference at Washington, confirming yesterday's rumors that an agreement had been made on export prices, had little influence on prices. It had been expected. Furthermore, the agreement must receive the approval of all participating nations. Some opposition is expected in the American Congress.

Lard was influenced by the action of grains and ended 15 to 18 cents a hundred pounds lower, March $22.30.

Congress Battle Looms Over Pact By 36 Countries

A world-wide agreement, setting maximum and minimum prices for wheat in world trade for the next five years, will be submitted to Congress this week.

The agreement was signed yesterday by representatives of the three countries with wheat for export, the United States, Canada and Australia, and by 33 importing countries throughout the world. It does not become binding until ratified by Congress.

Already opposition is appearing in Congress, particularly among members from the wheat producing States. The agreement, reached after months of negotiations sets a maximum or "ceiling" price of $2 a bushel—about 50 cents a bushel under present prices in this country. (May wheat yesterday at 2.44½ and guarantees a "floor" or a minimum price of $1.50 a bushel for the first year of the agreement. The minimum then will drop 10 cents a bushel each year until in 1952 it will be $1.10.

In return for price assurances, the 33 importing countries promise to buy at least 500 million bushels of wheat a year from the three exporting countries. These exports would be divided as follows: Canada, long a heavy wheat exporter, 230 million bushels; the United States 185 million and Australia 85 million.

Immediate opposition was sounded by Senator Young (R., N. Dak.). Young favors waiting a few years before acting on such a proposal. Chairman Clifford R. Hope (R., Kans.) of the House Agriculture Committee, declined to take any position. Hope said he was "open-minded.

N. E. Dodd, Undersecretary of Agriculture, and chief United States delegate, said last night that plans for submission of the agreement have not yet been decided upon by the State Department, which will transmit it to Congress. If submitted as a treaty, it will require two-thirds vote by the Senate. As an international agreement, it will have to be passed by simple majority vote of both houses.

The agreement would virtually guarantee maintaining this country's wheat exports at about 300 million bushels a year—far above prewar figures, but from 150 to 200 million bushels below the present rate of exports.

Unfrocked Priest Of Vatican Sought In Swindle Case

Rome, March 6 (AP).—The independent and rightist press charged today that an unfrocked Vatican priest, sought in connection with "swindles and falsehoods," had served as a Yugoslav spy while working in the Vatican secretariat of state.

An attache of the Yugoslav legation declined to confirm or deny that the former priest, Eduardo Prettner, has taken refuge in Yugoslav territory with important church documents.

Prettner had used the surname Cippico, a prominent Trieste name.

Italian police announced yesterday they are investigating the loss of $450,000 worth of jewels in connection with Prettner's disappearance.

Prettner was unfrocked so that he might be arrested.

U. S. Navy Photo

NOW YOU SEE IT—Navy's new liquid-fueled rocket, pictured as it was launched at the White Sands Proving Grounds, was soon out of sight on its 78-mile spurt into the sky at a speed of 3000 miles an hour

Navy Rocket Sets U. S. Record For Velocity and Altitude

By the United Press

A new Navy rocket, simple in design and inexpensive to build, has set two new records for American-built rockets—it flew 3000 miles an hour and reached an altitude of 78 miles.

The rocket is named the Aerobee. It was launched successfully Friday at the White Sands, N. Mex., proving ground, the Army and Navy said in a joint announcement.

The Aerobee eclipsed the previous records of 34 miles in altitude and 2100 miles an hour in speed for United States rockets established last year by the Army's rocket, "Wac Corporal."

But it fell far short of the record of 114-mile altitude and 3500 miles an hour speed set by the Army in tests with captured German V-2 rockets.

Yesterday's flight of the Aerobee was the first in a series. Twenty similar rockets are to be fired under a program developed by the Army and Navy.

The services said the Aerobee's design is based on a previous development sponsored by the Army Ordnance Department. They gave no indication how big the rocket is.

They did say, however, that it uses liquid fuel, is simple in design, is comparatively cheap to build and is launched by a "small technical team with minimum facilities."

The Aerobee is designed primarily for reasearch in the upper atmosphere. The one fired yesterday carried 150 pounds of scientific instruments in its nose, including devices to record cosmic rays, those extremely penetrating subatomic particles from outer space.

Aerobee rockets to be fired later will be equipped with other instruments to continue experiments in the upper air started last year with the German V-2's.

The Aerobee was developed for the Navy's Bureau of Ordnance by the Aerojet Engineering Corp., Azusa, Calif., and the Douglas Aircraft Co., Santa Monica, Calif., under technical supervision of the Johns Hopkins Laboratory of Applied Physics at Silver Spring, Md.

Nation-Wide Study of Cancer With Atomic Energy Planned

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Atomic Energy Commission last night announced a three million dollar nation-wide program for the study and treatment of cancer with atomic energy.

The long-range plan involves research and treatment at four Atomic Energy laboratories, and also at private hospitals and universities in all sections of the country. The program has four points. It includes:

1. Cancer research facilities, including a limited amount of hospital space, at four Atomic Energy laboratories. These facilities will be established at: Oak Ridge Hospital, Oak Ridge, Tenn.; Brookhaven National Laboratory, Long Island, N. Y.; Argonne National Laboratory, Chicago; and Los Alamos Laboratory, Los Alamos, N. M.

2. Government support for selected cancer research projects in hospitals and universities in various sections of the country. Four such projects, AEC announced, are already under way with Government support, at Memorial Hospital for Treatment of Cancer and Allied Diseases, New York City; Harvard University; the University of Rochester, New York, and the University of California. More are being contemplated at other cities.

3. Radioisotopes for cancer treatment and research, after April 1, will be furnished without cost, except for handling and transportation, to qualified American scientists and physicians.

4. Support of cancer research by the Committee on Atomic Casualties of the National Research Council.

The program, AEC pointed out, was adopted after months of study of how best to make atomic energy available to cancer sufferers without duplicating the work of the United States Public Health Service and other Government agencies, the American Cancer Society and privately endowed foundations and medical research centers.

By removing charges for isotopes, the commission hopes to encourage "qualified investigators and physicians" in searching "for basic knowledge about cancer."

In encouraging wider use of radiosotopes for research, AEC warned that "radioisotopes have not been found generally useful in cancer treatment as developed at the present time."

In other words, AEC feels that more can be accomplished at present by using the materials for diagnosis and research than through treatment.

The removal of charges for isotopes may save some investigators and some patients as much as several hundred dollars.

Committee to Subpena Four On Its Charge Against Condon

The House Un-American Activities Committee lined up more witnesses yesterday to support its charge that Dr. Edward U. Condon is "one of the weakest links in our atomic security."

Committee members said the group plans to summon four persons to testify at hearings on a subcommittee's report that the Government scientist associated "knowingly or unknowingly" with alleged Russian spies. The witnesses being supenaed were not named.

The blast at the director of the Government's Bureau of Standards was loosed earlier this week. Condon, who has worked on a number of this country's secret wartime weapons, promptly denied it.

One committee member said today he hopes the group will give Condon his chance "at the earliest possible date."

"If Condon wants a hearing," said Representative McDowell (R., Penna.), "he should have it as soon as possible. If he's been put upon, I'd rather the committee took a shellacking than to have the public continue uncertain."

But, McDowell added, "unless the committee's information is completely wrong, he's in a very bad spot. I have just gone over our material for the first time. In view of what's in it, the doctor is going to have to talk awfully fast."

Not all that material has been made public yet. Representative Nixon (R., Calif.) said yesterday it contains information relating to a New York grand jury investigation of spying by Americans and aliens.

Southern States Plan for Walkout

Strength Test

Gov. Dewey, Stassen in N.H. Primary

By The Associated Press

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and Harold E. Stassen go before New Hampshire voters Tuesday in an indirect test of strength for the Republican presidential nomination.

It is the presidential primary of 1948. Fourteen or 15 other States will name GOP convention delegates in this manner in the next three months.

The name of President Truman, meanwhile, was entered as a Democratic candidate for President in the April 27 Pennsylvania primary.

J. Warren Mickle, Democratic State chairman, personally filed petitions from 67 counties to place the President's name on the ballot. Under Pennsylvania law a candidate may be entered in the presidential preference primary without personally signing the petitions.

The New Hampshire voting has been advertised by the Dewey and Stassen camps as of "national significance." Although only eight Republican delegates will be elected, it is argued that whoever wins a majority will have a psychological boost in future primaries.

Five of the 25 GOP delegate candidates are formally pledged, two to Dewey, one to Stassen, and two to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, despite the latter's statement that he could not accept the nomination. The other 20 may have Presidential preferences, but they will not show on the ballot.

Only one slate of Democratic delegate candidates is entered in New Hampshire. They are pledged to President Truman's nomination.

In Wisconsin next month, Dewey, Stassen, and Gen. Douglas MacArthur will have full slates of delegates in a primary. Also in April there will be preference balloting in Nebraska for these three and four othres. In Orgon a May primary will provide another—and fuller test—between Dewey and Stassen.

In a telegram to Wisconsin supporters, Dewey said a "quarreling" Truman Administration threatens the Nation with "ruinous inflation" by profligate waste" of public funds.

Democratic convention arrangements will be discussed here on Thursday and Friday of next week by the newly appointed 16-member executive committee of the Democratic National Committee. They will meet with Chairman J. Howard McGrath.

The group also may discuss informally some of the party's troubles, including the Southern revolt against the Truman "civil rights" program. Three Southerners are on the committee.

A keynoter for the Demacratic convention also may be discussed, but a selection is expected to be deferred for some time to await developments in the Dixie "rebellion."

Southern Governors meet here next Saturday to hear a committee report on the meeting held with McGrath here February 23. At that time McGrath refused a demand for withdrawal of tht "civil rights" proposals.

Carroll Reece said at Philadelphia yesterday Republicans "have a good chance" of carrying at least five Southern States in the 1948 presidential election.

The chairman of the Republican National Committee said in an interview that GOP interest in the South is "at an all-time high."

"We have a good chance of carrying the border States and might even pick up some in the deep South," he added. Reece listed the border States as Oklahoma, Virginia, North Carolina, Kentucky and Tennessee.

The first of seven Wallace-for-President State conventions in March and April comes off at York, Pa., tomorrow, with the former Vice President as keynote speaker. Wallace aires say committees are now preparing to place his name on the ballot in 28 States. Preparations are under way in others.

May Buy Waterworks

Shepherdstown, W. Va., March 6 (Spl).—The Town Council here is studying proposals to buy the municipal waterworks system from the Potomac Light and Power Co. for $40,000, council spokesmen announced yesterday.

6 Believed Ready For Anti-Truman Convention Action

By The Associated Press

Some Southern delegations are being primed to take a walk at the Democratic national convention if President Truman is nominated, leaders said yesterday.

Dixie lawmakers who declined to be quoted by name said it now seems almost certain that delegates in a half dozen States will be ready for this drastic action if some unforeseen compromise is not reached in the battle over civil rights.

These legislators said some delegations may be sent to the July Philadelphia meeting with explicit instructions to walk out if the party adopts a plank for enforced changes in race relations and picks Mr. Truman to head the ticket.

Ready for Anything

Senator McClellan (D., Ark.), who already has been chosen as a delegate to the convention, would not comment on the take-a-walk reports. But he told a reporter that the Arkansas delegation of 20 "will be ready for anything that happens."

Four Governors who sat down with Democratic Chairman McGrath will report on the conference to their Southern colleagues at a meeting here next Saturday. They have indicated they got little satisfaction out of their talk with the chairman.

Before that time, McGrath is expected to discuss the Southern rebellion informally with members of his newly named executive committee. They will meet here at midweek to go over plans for the Philadelphia convention.

Due to Be Ready Soon

Meanwhile, 21 Southern Senators laid tentative plans for a filibuster against any of the civil rights measures that may be brought up.

Republicans indicated that some of these will be ready soon for Senate action. But none is expected to be brought up until after the Senate acts on the European Recovery Program and a House-approved tax-cutting bill.

Chairman Brooks (R., Ill.) said the Senate Rules Committee may pass along early in the week a bill to ban the collection of State poll taxes in Federal elections. It already has been passed by the House.

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) said a Judiciary Subcommittee is about ready to act on an antilynching bill. The same measure is expected to get early House clearance.

The Southerners arranged to post one of their members as a guard at all future Senate sessions to resist any sudden attempt to bring up any of these measures.

Firm Says Soviet Has Made Copy Of Interned B-29

Seattle, March 6 (U.P.).—The Boeing Aircraft Co. said today that Russia has succeeded in producing a 72-passenger transport plane copied from Boeing B-29 bombers interned during World War II.

In the company magazine a spokesman said the new Russian TU-70 shows "at least 20 items that are exact duplicates of B-29 parts." The article recalled that the Russian government recently attempted to buy B-29 tires, wheels and brake assemblies from an American firm. The request was rejected.

The Boeing publication said the order indicates that Russian engineers have not yet been able to produce a long-range airplane as advanced as the B-29, which has already been superseded in this country by the B-50.

Vinson, Potter Named To Phi Beta Kappa

lice and subsequently released without any charge of violation against them." Of these, 126 were held for more than 24 hours, 679 for an indeterminate period.

The Superintendent of Police defends the practice, the report said, apparently on the ground that such arrests protect an arrested person whose innocence is subsequently established against the "stigma" of having been charged with the commission of a crime, and save the arrested person from having to procure a bondsman to obtain his release from confinement.

These "reasons," the subcommittee said, "accomplish nothing toward removing the taint of illegality from the practice."

Kronheim's minority report stated there are legal processes available to persons illegally arrested and detained.

". . . Persons detained by the Police Department have substantial rights," Kronheim said. "From my experience with the law, lawyers, the courts, the United States Marshal's office, the office of the prosecuting attorney, the public, yes, and the Police Department, all are aware of these rights and conscientious in their protection."

Costello argued in his minority report that the Bar Association should be reluctant to make any recommendation affecting law enforcement "unless it is based upon a thorough and impartial investigation of the facts made by one of its own committees."

He said that the majority report was based "for the most part upon information furnished by a reporter of The Washington Post" and from a 1939 civil rights report, also declaring arrests for investigation illegal.

The majority recommendation, Costello said, is too broad in scope "and if adopted by the police department would impose a barrier that would be detrimental to effective law enforcement in the District." He added:

"With crimes of violence on the upsurge al lover the country, the Bar Association should be slow to make any recommendation that would have the effect of unreasonably circumscribing the efforts of a diligent law enforcement agency and could be construed as affording aid and comfort to a law violator."

Virginia House Hears Demand For Education, Welfare Study

Richmond, Va., March 6 (AP). Delegate E. O. McCue of Charlottesville launched a bitter attack on the State Departments of Education and Public Welfare today.

In an hour-long speech in the House of Delegates, McCue offered resolutions for a thorough Virginia Advisory Legislative Council study of both departments. The Albemarle delegate is chairman of the VALC. McCue said another department also would draw his fire unless it did better—the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries.

McCue's speech enlivened an otherwise routine session of the General Assembly. Both houses ran through their calendars preparatory to entering their final week on Monday with several pieces of major legislation still before them.

The delegate from Albemarle said the State had been pouring money into the Department of Education for years and getting nothing from it. He contended the advance in the pay of teachers has failed to keep pace with that of salaries in the department.

Raps Hiring of Non-Residents

McCue censured employment of non-residents for higher paid positions. The Virginia Education Association, he said, is always criticizing salaries paid teachers and thus hurting the profession. He asserted he was going to suggest to the VALC that 30 days notice be given before positions in the department can be filled "so some Virginians can apply."

He charged localities fail to support schools and said the State sends much money to them without getting proper support from them—or at least some of them.

He read from a table of percentage of local support, giving Fairfax 178 per cent at the top and Scott 26 per cent at the bottom. As to cities, he said Williamsburg was at the top with 349 per cent and an unnamed city at the bottom with 68 per cent.

McCue termed vocational training as "hobby shops." He said Connecticut is rated below Virginia in financial assistance to schools by the National Education Association, but its schools are better than Virginia's.

Delegate J. W. Bland of Brunswick termed McCue's attack unwarranted. He praised the work of agricultural high schools in vocational agriculture and home economics.

Contradiction Is Charged

"He protests about non-residents being employed yet says we ought to go outside to find out how to run our schools," Bland said.

Other action in the House today included adoption of a joint resolution memoralizing Congress to amend the "Hatch Act" to loosen some restrictions on political activities of Federal employes.

Also sent to the Senate was the Boatwright-Daniel-Triplett bill which would carry out recommendations of a legislative commission that a school of veterinary medicine be established at Virginia Tech. The bill carried the recommendation that a conditional appropriation of $800,000 be set up for the school. Delegate Boatwright headed the group which made the study of veterinary medicine in the State.

3 City Scientists Flying to Bangkok To Study Eclipse

Three Washington scientists left Washington yesterday by plane for Bangkok, where they will study eclipse of the sun in May.

They are Garder O. Johnson, 4559 MacArthur blvd.; W. Robert Moore, 3210 15th st. nw., and Ernest J. Rubin, 1413 Euclid st. nw.

The expedition is under the auspices of the National Geographic Society and is one of seven expeditions that will participate in checking the eclipse of the sun along a 5420-mile arc from southern Burma to the Aleutian Islands.

The eclipse is to take place May 8-9. All seven expeditions are expected to have reached their observation posts by early April.

Jury Urges Ban Of Baroudi's Pilot

Chicago, March 6 (U.P.).—A blue ribbon coroner's jury recommended today that Manager Mike Spinelli and Trainer Al Warner be barred from boxing for life in connection with the ring death of their fighter, Sam Baroudi of Akron, Ohio.

The jury returned a verdict of acidental death and exonerated Baroudi's opponent, Ezzard Charles of Cincinnati, who knocked out Baroudi in a bout here February 20.

However, it issued a scathing denunciation of the conduct of boxing in Illinois stating that "it is of a character so unsavory and disreputable as to warrant wholesale revision of regulations and ethics."

shall Plan countries could prepare for their conference in Paris beginning March 15. Big Three talks will be resumed on Germany in April, at which time the question of security and territorial claims and possibly reparations will be discussed.

Protest Expected

Diplomatic authorities here expect a violent protest from Russia against the agreement in Germany announced in London yesterday.

The Russians will not only protest the decisions taken without them but will also demand a share in the international control of the Ruhr, it was believed.

The State Department appeared pleased by the speed and extent of the London agreement. Authorities here believe the agreements have pretty well removed the last barriers to a decision by the French to join their zone of western Germany with the already merged British and American zones.

Russia Accused

Berlin, March 6 (U.P.).—Russia is converting I. G. Farbenindustrie plants in the Soviet zone of Germany into Soviet trusts, in violation of four-power agreements, the American member of the Allied Control Council's coordinating committee in Germany charged today.

Maj. Gen. George P. Hays replied to Soviet charges the Western powers are conspiring to incorporate Farben interests in their zones into a Western war potential.

The dispute grew out of a Soviet request to liquidate the Farben trust.

Sir George said the conference would "really get going" on Monday when detailed economic provisions are taken up. The general points were discussed tonight, Count Jean de Hautecloque of the French Foreign Office, said.

The session began work on a common draft and tomorrow will be spent in consulting the various capitals and in private meetings to work out particulars.

Asked how the western European union's economic cooperation would fit into the Marshall Plan, a Belgian delegate said, "We are looking forward to something a good deal more permanent."

Business as Usual Is Hope of Prague

By Marshall Aide

Union Held Essential for West Europe

New York, March 6 .—An aide of Secretary Marshall called on western Europe today to close ranks against Communist foes of European recovery.

Charles E. Bohlen, State Department counselor, said the Marshall Plan of European self-help can succeed only if bolstered by the determination of free nations.

"It must be protected against the forces seeking to wreck it," Bohlen told the Herald Tribune youth forum. He restated Marshall's indorsement of a proposed western European union now under consideration by a five-nation conference at Brussels.

"While this program is not the whole story in the attempt to bring peace and stability into the world," Bohlen said. "It is an absolutely vital link without which there is little prospect of success.

"If accompanied by the determination of the free nations of Europe to protect themselves against the totalitarian forces who see in this program the greatest obstacle to their designs, free Europe will be restored and preserved."

"The Communist opposition to this program is the result of a deliberate decision to wreck it and thereby to prevent the recovery and survival of a free Europe," he declared, and added: "We cannot and do not intend to be deterred."

Replying to the repeated Soviet charge that the United States has imperialistic motives, Bohlen said:

"Imperialism never seeks, as does this measure, the economic independence of countries dependent upon a great power for assistance."

And on the charge that American aid is a step toward war, he said:

"Any such allegation could only be based upon the thesis that the restoration of economic health, political stability and the preservation of free institutions in the free areas of Europe would be so intolerable to the Soviet Union and international communism as to bring about an armed assault on these surviving free nations.

"If that is the case, it would be well for those who charge militaristic intent in this program to state this specifically."

Czech Envoy Surprised by 'Revolution'

New York, March 6 (AP).—Dr. Juraj Slavik, who resigned Wednesday as the Czechoslovak Ambassador, says the use of "revolutionary methods" in the Communist coup in his country came as a complete surprise to the democratic parties."

"All that the democratic parties had in mind was democratic methods, and they didn't believe it could happen in Czechoslovakia," Dr. Slavik said last night.

He held a news conference before addressing the American-Czechoslovak Society on the ninety-eighth anniversary of the birth of Thomas Masaryk, founder of the Czechoslovakian Republic.

Asked if the Communist seizure of power had altered his attitude toward Russian-approved policies, which he supported in the United Nations, Dr. Slavik replied he had become convinced his country's "only possible policy" was to mediate between East and West.

"But I cannot agree with the terror, the pressure and the rifles," Dr. Slavik added. "I want to be a free man and my nation a community of free men."

Jan Papanek, permanent representative of Czechoslovakia to the U. N., told the society he believed his nation will conquor the present crisis. Papanek left the meeting before Dr. Slavik spoke. He said he had no comment on the latter's resignation.

Economic Reaction From ERP Nations Feared by Czechs

By Seymour Friedin

Prague, March 6 (NYHT.).—The Communist-controlled government of Czechoslovakia said today it hoped to continue a business-as-usual policy with the countries participating in the Marshall Plan.

Through Foreign Trade Minister Antonin Gregor, a Communist who supplanted Dr. Hubert Ripka, a Czech National Socialist, the government gave the impression that it was quite apprehensive of any economic measures that might be taken against Czechoslovakia by participants in the European Recovery Program.

As Gregor spoke, the Communist Party newspaper "Rude Pravo" said the Communist sweep to power was safer than American Fourth of July celebrations.

Talking to foreign correspondents, Gregor said Czech foreign trade would be nationalized. He said the government did not contemplate any revaluation of the Czech crown.

Emphasize Russia's Role

Both Gregor and the ministry's foreign trade expert, Evzen Lobl, underlined the hope that negotiations with and commitments to western Europe would not be impaired. They emphasized, however, the role of the Soviet Union and eastern Europe in Czechoslovakia's economic relations. The majority of the country's foreign trade is with western Europe.

Lobl and Gregor had some heavy going in today's news conference. At least half the conference boiled down to the extent of American and Russian aid to Czechoslovakia. Gregor was asked whether drought relief had come from the west or from Russia.

Gregor replied that Russia, through shipments of grain, had of course come to Czechoslovakia's rescue.

Then an American correspondent asked whether the United States, which has contributed 200 million dollars of the 262 million dollars poured into Czechoslovakia through UNRRA, had given les aid to the country than had Russia through the wheat transactions.

No Politics in UNRRA

Lobl replied that UNRRA had been a United Nations undertaking and the American people had been a tremendous factor in helping restore the country to its economic feet. He said UNRRA also had been a project which did not attach any political commitments to its aid.

He was immediately asked if the Soviet Union had attached political strings to the grain deliveries. Lobl said no.

Gregor added: "I have no wish to minimize UNRRA help, but it must be understood that the skin is closer than the coat. The question of our food program arose recently and it is natural that we stres sthe aid given by Russia."

The Social Democrats, who were catapulted into co-operation with the Communists last week, replied today to the British Labor Party's recent denunciation of their stand. Addressing the Labor Party as "dear comrades," the Social Democrats here said they had found it necessary to help smash "high treason by the reaction."

Point to Benes' Acceptance

They also noted that President Eduard Benes had accepted the new government and that he is "the personification of the democratic methods and basis of the Czechoslovak republic, not only by his constitutional position but also by his moral authority."

The general situation in Czechoslovakia on the eve of the ninety-eighth birthday of the late Thomas G. Masaryk, its founder and first president, was roughly this: Government—The cabinet rushed through 11 major decisions without opposition at yesterday's meeting.

"Parliament—The Communists expect 208 sure votes in the reorganized Constituent Assembly, compared to a bare majority of 153 which they obtained previously by merging with the Social Democrats. A total of 229 deputies signed the Gottwald government's loyalty pledge, but some signers may lose their seats.

The average man—unless he had been active in anto-Communist politics, the Czechoslovak-in-the-street had been little affected. His job had gone on much as usual—except that now he may be working for an active committee instead of the former employer. Industry and transportation were back almost to normal, and the heavy police squads have been withdrawn.

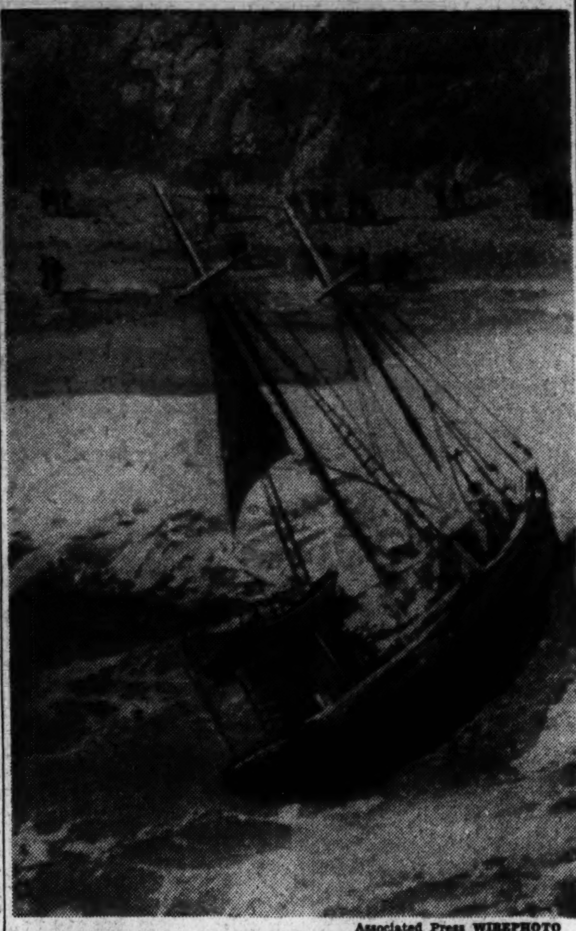
Breeches Buoy Saves Five Off Coast of Massachusetts



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

WRECK ON CAPE COD—Villagers line the beach to aid in the rescue of fishermen from the Cape Ann, grounded on the coast of Nauset on Cape Cod. Five fishermen were hauled to safety

Nauset on Cape Cod, Mass., March 6 (AP).—A breeches buoy hauled five fishermen to safety across roaring surf from their breaking dragger today as the ancient alarm of "wreck" raised villagers to help Coast Guardsmen on this ships' graveyard coast.

Four other crewmen on the New Bedford fisherman, Cape Ann, stayed with the ice-coated, pitching vessel to guard a $4000 cargo of scallops, most of which was saved. They "stepped off" to safety after the tide pushed the split-astern vessel up on the beach.

The breeches buoy — historic lifeline of coast-wrecked sailors—was rigged for the first time in 28 years on this wintry beach by Coast Guardsmen and townsmen who turned out from three seaside villages.

The five rescued rocked one at a time in a canvas bucket across 100 yards of heaving surf shortly after daybreak in near-zero temperature and 30-mile-an-hour winds.

The Coast Guard had sent the breeches buoy back for its sixth rescue run when the four aboard, including Capt. Alex Nerland, 50, yelled they were staying with the ship "on account of the cargo."

The four played cards while waiting.

A hardy cook, they said, stood waist deep in water in the galley to cook them bacon and eggs.

The Coast Guard quoted the captain as saying the Cape Ann went aground about three a. m. after Nauset light had been mistaken for a lightship.

Dr. Kemp Suggests Grasses to Aid Land

By The Associated Press

Dr. W. B. Kemp, director of the University of Maryland agricultural experimental station, yesterday suggested planting a combination of grasses and legumes on pasture land to increase the nutrients.

In a speech to the Vansville Farmers Club in Landover, Md., Dr. Kemp recommended orchard grass, Ladino clover and sometimes lestedesa and alfalfa for pasture land.

50-Year Aid Pact Is Framed By 5 Western Europe Nations

Helsinki, March 6 (AP).—Many Finnish-speaking Karelians today were reported trying to flee across Finland's far northern border into Sweden. These stateless people were alarmed by prospects of Finnish-Russian treaty negotiations.

Press dispatches telling of the flights reached Helsinki as government sources predicted that Finland would reach a decision Monday on the question of opening negotiations for a treaty with Russia.

The extent of the Karelians' exodus was not revealed. One account said a group of 30 Karelian men, women and children was stopped at the frontier last night.

Fear Seizure by Russians

Formerly Russian citizens, the Karelians moved to Finland around 1920. Because they have not received Finnish citizenship they fear Finland may be forced to turn them over to Russia if a Finnish-Soviet agreement is reached, informants said.

[The Stockholm newspaper Expressen said 600 refugees had passed into Sweden during the last month and are now concentrated at a camp at Haparanda. The flow of refugees has increased during the last 10 days, it said.

[The Stockholm newspaper Tidningen reported several hundred persons arrived at the northern Finnish-Swedish frontier yesterday and 100 to 200 succeeded in eluding guards and crossed into Sweden. The majority were stopped by Finnish frontier guards.]

President Juho Paasikivi conferred for two hours today with the Finnish government's six-man foreign affairs committee on Russia's request for a treaty.

Cabinet to Convene

Government sources said the committee would meet again Monday morning to formulate its recommendation. Following that session, the 18-man cabinet will convene to give the issue final consideration. The cabinet has been advised to stand by for a possible emergency session.

Informants indicated the government probably would appoint a delegation to meet with the Russians but its powers would be strictly limited.

It was believed such a delegation would seek a full outline of what Russia wants before taking the next step. A majority of the Finnish Parliament opposes any military tie-up with Russia.

A government minister said: "We realize fully that if we accept the Stalin proposal we would formally belong to Russia's eastern bloc. That is something we should like to avoid."

Paasikivi Cool to Alliance

Paasikivi himself was reliably reported to be unenthusiastic about a military alliance.

Three of the six members of the foreign affairs committee are members of the Communist-dominated Popular Front, which favors the treaty. They are Premier Mauno Pekkala, interior minister; Yrjo Leino and Vice Foreign Minister Reinhold Svento.

Foreign Minister Carl Enckell's stand is uncertain. He is an independent. Social Affairs Minister Lennart Heljas is expected to oppose any negotiations since he is an Agrarian,. Education Minister Gino Kilpi is expected to follow the Social Democratic line for negotiations but against a military alliance.

Kilpi's wife, Sylvi, is a leading member of the Popular Front, while Kilpi was conferring with Paasikivi she was speaking in support of the pact at a Popular Front rally.

Another Wife a Communist

Leino's wife, Hertta Kuusinen, is a Communist. She has been addressing Popular Front rallies for the treaty.

[The United Press was informed the Russian cultural attache in Helsinki had refused to receive the draft of a proposed Finnish-Russian cultural treaty which was presented by the Finnish-Russian Society.

[Mrs. Kilpi, chairman of the society, was reported to have visited the Russian cultural attache Tuesday to present the draft.

[The attache refused to discuss it, the report said, because "no cultural treaty can be discussed unless other treaties included in the Russian proposal are accepted."]

Thorp, Lie Address N. Y. Youth Forum

New York, March 6 (AP).—Willard L. Thorp, Assistant Secretary of State for Economic Affairs, said today the agreement just announced in London does not commit the United States Government to international ownership of the Ruhr.

The United States, Britain and France announced in London they had agreed upon international control of the Ruhr, but specific recommendations were not made public.

Thorp and Trygve Lie, secretary-general of the United Nations, were among a dozen speakers at the New York Herald Tribune Youth Forum, attended by 2800 students from 780 New York area high schools.

Thorp said the United States does not favor detaching the Ruhr industrial area from Germany as a step to assure peace. Instead, he said, this country prefers "positive action designe dto curb Germany's warmaking power."

Lie told the forum the U. N. "Is not what it was intended to be."

"Its members are not doing all they could be doing to make work," Lie said.

"We have failed to take definite action on problems of great and urgent importance—the control of atomic energy, the provision of armed forces to serve the United Nations, the reduction and control of conventional armaments."

On the credit side, the secretary-general said the U. N. had served as a forum "in which the nations can air their differences" and as a place "to which any nation, large or small, is able to bring complaints against other nations and to demand satisfaction."

Court Martial Begins Tomorrow In Assault Case

Pvt. George L. Barrow, charged in the alleged attempted rape of a Government girl here, will be tried by a general court martial, beginning tomorrow at 9 a. m. at Fort Myer.

Barrow, attached to the 7001st Area Service Unit, at Fort Myer's South Post, will be tried on charges of violation of the ninety-third Article of War. He is accused of assaulting the woman at Arlington Ridge rd., Arlington Farms, with intent to commit rape, on February 11.

The soldier was linked to the alleged crime by a lipstick-stained glove found near the scene. According to the Army's criminal investigation division, Barrow later was found in ac afeteria with only one glove and he himself identified the missing glove as his.

White House Correspondents Hosts to Notables at Dinner

Seven hundred White House reporters, President Truman, top Government officials, publishers and editors joined last night in banter and political slapstick at the twenty-fifth annual dinner of the White House Correspondents Association at the Statler Hotel.

Fun was the motif, but the meeting had other highlights.

President Truman presented the $500 Raymond Clapper Memorial Award for outstanding Washington reporting to Nat Finney, correspondent for the Minneapolis Star and Tribune and the Des Moines Register and Tribune.

Honorable mention citations went to Alfred Friendly of The Washington Post and Bert Andrews of the New York Herald Tribune.

Ernest B. Vaccaro, Associated Press reporter, was installed as president of the association, succeeding Felix Belair, jr., of the New York Times.

Other installations included those of Robert G. Nixon, International News Service, as vice president, and Paul Wooton, New Orleans Times-Picayune, as secretary-treasurer.

The entertainment, under direction of Spike Jones, band leader, was headlined "Virgin Islands Vertigo, or Haphazard Harmonies of 1948," and featured burlesqued popular songs in the zany fashion which Jones has popularized.

The guests heard music by the United States Navy Band under the direction of Lieut. Comdr. Charles Brendler.

The menu consisted of croustade of crabflakes neptune, potage Du Barry, hearts of celery, green olives, grilled breast of capon on ham, with fresh mushroom sauce, bouquet of broccoli polonaise, potatoes olivette, hearts of lettuce, bombe panache, and petit fours with demi tasse.

Providence Editor Heads Press Group

New York, March 6 (AP).—Sevellon Brown, editor and publisher of the Providence (R. I.) Journal and Bulletin, will head the American Press Institute's advisory board for the 1948-49 academic year.

Brown was elected chairman to succeed Grove Patterson, editor of the Toledo Blade, who had accepted the post on a temporary [illegible]rath. The Toledo editor will con[illegible]ence to [illegible] board member.

[illegible] institute sponsors seminar sess[illegible] at Columbia University for picked groups of newspapermen.

The board reelected these four members for the 1948-51 term: Brown; John H. Carter, Lancaster Papers, Inc., Lancaster, Pa.; A. H. Kirchhofer, Buffalo (N. Y.) Evening News; and Louis B. Seltzer, Cleveland (Ohio) Press.

Paul C. Smith, editor and general manager of the San Francisco Chronicle, was elected a member of the board for the 1947-50 term. He succeeds E. Z. Dimitman, formerly of the Chicago Sun.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, who will become president of Columbia University June 6, and Dean Carl W. Ackerman of the Columbia Graduate School of Journalism, were named ex-officio members of the board.

Elected to membership in the group of institute "founders" were these newspapers: Africo-American Newspapers, Baltimore; Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal and Times; Gannett Newspapers, Rochester, N. Y.; and the Christian Science Monitor.

Floyd Taylor, director of the American Press Institute, was elected board secretary.

Jewish Leaders To Attend Parley

Richmond, Va., March 6 (AP).—Jewish leaders from over the State will atteend the Virginia regional conference of the United Jewish Appeal here tomorrow at 10:30 a. m.

Emanuel E. Falk of Newport News, who will preside over the conference, announced that the drop in help for displaced persons of Europe since UNRRA aid was cut off will have disastrous effects on the 1,500,000 Jewish survivors.

Besides Falk, leaders of the conference will be David Grossman, Lexington; Max Kantor, Hampton; Abe Levine, Saltville; Nathan Potolsky, Galax; Mrs. David Rooklin, Covington; Monroe I. Schecter, Culpepper, and Emanuel Weinberg, Farmville.

School Board to Meet

Manassas, Va., March 6 (Spl.).—The Prince William County School Board will consider a budget for the next school year March 17. The board has invited the county supervisors to attend to hear the report of a survey of county school building neds. Annual visits to county schools is set for April 7 and 14.

Wife Solves Theft When Detective, Busy, Won't Listen

Hagerstown, Md., March 6 (AP).—Detective Sergt. Wayne A. Sellman had the solution of an auto theft right in his back yard for two days, but it was the curiosity of his wife that settled the case.

For two days, Mrs. Sellman insisted he should check on a strange car parked in the rear of their house. But Sellman said he had more important things to do.

So the detective's wife took matters in her own hands and investigated the car herself. She found it was the same one described in newspaper stories as having been stolen.

"I'll give her credit on this one," Sellman said.

Condon to Discuss Charges Over WINX

Dr. Edward U. Condon, chief of the Bureau of Standards, will discuss the effect on American science and national security of the recent charges made against him by the House Un-American Affairs Committee on Ed Hart's program, "Is Congress Doing Its Job?" over WINX today at 12:15 p. m.

Lengthy Debate on ERP Dims Hopes for Vote by March 15

each of the 16 western European nations, are slated to receive during the 12 months covered by the authorization. The Foreeign Relations Committee, Bridges said, made only a "superficial" study of that aspect of the program.

Won't Delay Hearings

Bridges said he expects to start hearings as soon as it is feasible to do so, and he wil not wait for the House appropriations group to act first.

But the first week of Senate debate on the authorization bill dimmed hopes for final action on it by March 15.

That's the Administration's target date. The flow of supplies to Italy, France and Austria may dwindle to a trickle a few weeks later, and Italy's important election is coming up next month.

One of the many supporters of ERP, Senator Lucas (D., Ill.), told a reporter he would challenge opponents in the coming week either to "present a concrete alternative or begin voting."

But leaders on both sides said a long list of speaking reservations threatens the plan of Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), floor leader for the bill, to complete action quickly.

More than a dozen amendments have been introduced in the Senate, most of them from critics of the plan. But there has not been a vote on any phase of the multi-billion-dollar four-year program for the 16 western European nations and western Germany.

Lucas said the opposition to date has centered upon a "morass of arithmetic or quibbles over technical details."

Senator Wherry (R., Nebr.), as acting Republican leader, has been scheduling the speeches and has a long list of applications. He also is a coleader in a group of Republicans seeking sweeping changes in the program.

So far, Vandenberg has listened patiently to the lengthy talking or let Senator Lodge (R., Mass.) answer critics. But as the March 15 target approaches, it is expected Vandenberg will apply pressure for some voting.

area as I, or fairly close, Baltimore.

"When the ship was laid up at Lae, New Guinea, I recall an incident that happened one morning in June, 1944, when the steward, Mr. Gracie, woke me up and told me that Kelly was dead and asked me to come down to Kelly's bunk and look at him. "I went down to Kelly's bunk with Mr. Gracie and found him blue, without pulse or heartbeat, and cold, because I examined him . . . I then saw the body of Larry Kelly put in a Stokes basket and wrapped and it was taken ashore.

"I believe it was a couple of days later that Larry Kelly was buried. I attended the services along with about 20 other shipmates. The service was plain but with military honors, officiated by an Army chaplain.

"I know that there was some question about the wrong serial number beng assigned to Larry Kelly on some papers relating to his death but I did not know anything about this until my attention was called to it by the FBI in Washington. I have looked at a picture of Larry Kelly shown me by the FBI and I have identified his photograph as being the man who was my shipmate on the Clarence Darrow and who was buried at Lae, New Guinea.

"I remember Alton Minger, a night cook aboard the Clarence Darrow. Minger was a big fellow, blond and quite the opposite of Larry Kelly in stature and appearance. I know that Minger was aboard the ship with us until the end of that voyage, which was in December, 1944."

Dorothy Bond Kelly, widow of the labor leader, has been made administratrix of his estate by a decree of the Orphans Court, Prince Georges County. The Matson Navigation Co., which owned the Clarence Darrow, has paid her his wages due.

But the Justice Department so far has refused to concede that Kelly, the labor leader, is the man whose name is on a grave marker in New Guinea.

position to tell either the local union or the GSI what negotiators they might choose.

At a January 27 hearing, Bernstein had told Hoffman he had never refused to take a loyalty test, and that he ha dproved his loyalty in the jungle.

Following more questions from Hoffman, Strong told the subcommittee chairman:

"You're trying to get me out of this, is that it? I'll be very glad to have Ching (Cyrus S. Ching, director of the United States Conciliation Service) assign one of his conciliators."

He said later he had phoned Ching, whose position was unchanged, in that the Conciliation Service would not mediate with a management which will only "discuss" rather than "negotiate."

New Cheltenham Managers Start Study of School

The newly appointed board of managers for Cheltenham School for Boys, in Upper Marlboro, Prince Georges County, yesterday began a detailed study of the institution.

The new board held its first meeting Friday with Governor Lane. Dr. William E. Henry, president of Bowie State Teachers College, was elected to head the group. Edward Wilson, Morgan State College registrar, was appointed temporary secretary.

Dr. Henry's first act as head of the all-Negro panel was the appointment of seven committees to tour and study specific areas of the training school for delinquent Negro boys.

Rep. Hays Stresses Christian Faith As Need of Time

Legislative skill and military power alone are inadequate without Christian faith, Representative Brooks Hays (D., Ark.) said here Friday.

For the church should be fully utilized in "saving our civilization" from the "materialists of the East," Hays told more than 350 members of the Vaughn Bible class of the Calvary Baptist Church.

Hays, a Baptist Bible and Sunday school teacher for 15 years in Little Rock, Ark., spoke at the group's fifty-seventh annual dinner in the auditorium of the church, 8th and H sts. nw.

The important question before Congress today is not what is "expedient, attractive or profitable," he said, but "what is morally right."

Edward A. Keck, Veterans Administration Attorney, Severely Burned in Fire at Home

FIREMEN GIVE FIRST AID—Seated on the sidewalk and leaning against the trunk of a tree, Edward A. Keck, 54, Veterans Administration attorney, gets first aid treatment for serious burns. He was burned yesterday while sitting in an overstuffed chair in the living room of his residence, 804 Quintana pl. nw. A visitor saved Keck from more serious injuries

Edward A. Keck, 54, a Veterans Administration attorney, suffered second degree burns in a fire at his residence, 805 Quintana pl. nw. yesterday.

The blaze was discovered by William M. Batts, 29, a plumber whose office at 804 Quintana pl. is directly across from Keck's residence. Batts, who lives at 1620 B st. ne., said he saw flames coming out of the first floor living room. Then, he said, he saw Keck come out on his porch and start to reenter his home. Batts pulled him back to safety.

The residence, a two-story frame shingle, was owned by Keck, who had bought it late last year. He lived alone in the house, neighbors said. He was taken to Emergency Hospital where doctors said a third of his body had been burned.

Cause of the fire was not determined. Firemen said the living room of the home was ruined and that Keck apparently had been sitting in an overstuffed chair in the room.

In another blaze early yesterday, a 12-room house in the Westmoreland Hills section of Montgomery County, Md., was virtually destroyed by what nearby residents described as an explosion, followed by a big flash of fire.

The home, an abandoned farm house recently restored by a local real estate firm, was to have been offered for rent. It is located between Westmoreland Hills and Army Map Service Building off Albemarle st.

Montgomery County detectives are investigating cause of the blaze. The house did not have any facilities for gas.

Cafritz Sells Park Central For 2 Million

The 320-unit Park Central Apartments, 1900 F st. nw., has been sold for approximately two million dollars by Morris Cafritz to a group of local investors represented by Shannon & Luchs Co., it was learned last night.

Frank Luchs said the new owners are in possession. No policy changes are expected, he added. Industrial property near Queens Chapel and Bladensburg rds. ne., was included in the sales price.

The Park Central is the third largest elevator-type apartment building in the District, the Westchester and Dorchester House being first and second. The structure was erected by Cafritz in 1930.

Luchs reported the transaction was arranged within the last three weeks. His firm arranged the syndicate and financing for purchase of stock of Park Central Hotel, Inc., and will be rental agents for the property. Luchs is vice president and treasurer of the corporation.

Cafritz is now erecting 200 homes at 15th and Crittenden sts. ne., and a 600-unit garden-type apartment development at South Capitol and Galveston sts. se.

Schuman Majority Drops to 13 in Test

'Civic Example'

Peron Plans To Leave Bed To Cast Vote

Buenos Aires, Argentina, March 6 (AP).—President Juan Peron today said he would set a civic example by leaving the hospital to vote in the congressional elections.

Mrs. Peron, speaking from the hospital where her husband underwent an emergency operation for appendicitis earlier in the week, predicted a sweeping victory for administration candidates. It was the closing speech of the campaign by Peron supporters.

It will be the first nation-wide election since Peron was chosen President February 24, 1946. At stake are 83 seats in the lower house. The Senate, where the Peron forces occupy 28 of 30 seats, is not involved.

The opposition hopes to reduce the government's heavy majority in the lower chamber. Of 158 seats, Peron's supporters have 109. This two thirds majority is enough to amend the constitution and many Peronistas have spoken of amending it to permit Peron to succeed himself in 1952.

The results are not expected to be known for a week.

Opposition parties reiterated charges they had not been given equal opportunity to present their case in the campaign.

The Communists have entered candidates in the capital and all provinces save San Luis, and the size of their vote will be watched. The party wa sillegal until 1946.

Stiff Anti-Inflation Measure Opposed By Some Rightists

Paris, March 6 (AP).—Premier Robert Schuman's majority support in the National Assembly dwindled today in a series of votes on his anti-inflation measure.

Parliamentary observers said they did not believe the cabinet was in immediate danger, but the "political climate is bad and an accident might happen."

The assembly was acting on 64 proposed amendments to the government bill to compel Frenchmen to invest heavily in government reconstruction bonds or pay an even heavier super-tax. Schuman was pitted against the right as well as the left, for many conservatives oppose the bill as too harsh.

[When the Assembly adjounred for the night Schuman had won 50 separate ballots, the United Press said.]

One Communist-proposed amendment was beaten by 304 to 290, a margin of only 14 votes for Schuman. A Communist motion to reject the measure entirely was beaten by only 13 votes, 301 to 288. Schuman did not formally pose a question of confidence, though he said he would resign if the Communist motion was accepted. The government squeezed through an earlier test with only 16 votes to spare.

Observers said the "accident" might be failure of the government to muster a majority on one of the numerous amendments.

The Communists were joined by 102 other deputies on the vote to scrap the entire measure. Among them were 11 members of Finance Minister Rene Mayer's own Radical Socialist Party, mittees. The exectuive committee, whose sole function is to handle money, had been requested by the national committee not to turn the $13,000 raised over to the national committee until further instruction.

The anti-civil rights resolution said the committee was aware of the political pressure on the President from "the radical elements within and without" the Democratic Party.

Cities Party Principles

It added "while many of these policies and proposals have long appeared in the platforms of the Communist and the Republican parties, they are contrary to the fundamental principles of the party of Jefferson and Jackson, and in violation of the rights reserved to the States in the Federal Constitution."

It asserted that the people of the South have not borne the brunt of battles for the Democratic Party "to be made a sacrifice on the altar of political expediency," and called on national Democratic leaders interested in the success of the party at the polls to refrain from any action which would jeopardize its succes in the South.

Virginia Representatives in the Congress were asked to oppose and seek defeat of the President's proposals by every means in their power. Copies of the resolution were ordered sent to them, and to Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath.

House Group Wants American Industry in British Colonies

By The Associated Press

A House committee yesterday said American ndustry should have a chance to operate in British colonies.

This would help provide dollars for British use in international trade, the committee added.

"Colonial exclusiveness," the group said, "is not compatible with the basic interests of the United States in fostering the freest development of world resources."

The committee, composed of Representative Kunkel (R., Pa.) and is one of several study units that have been analyzing the factors involved in European recovery. Hunkel and Walter dealt specifically with the United Kingdom.

In their report, the legislators also said:

Western hemisphere nations should meet to decide how they can give the most aid to United Kingdom recovery.

Western European nations should include defensive and political agreements in their joint recovery efforts.

In suggesting that the colonies be opened to business backed by American private capital, Kunkel and Walter said:

"Up to the present time the British attitude has been one of dealing with the development of her colonies alone."

Czechoslovak Events Make Denmark Worry

Copenhagen, Denmark, March 6 (AP).—Danish Premier Hans Hedtoft said today events in Czechoslovakia have caused grave concern in Denmark.

Premier Hedtoft spoke at a Labor Party meeting in Skive. He said "to Communists, democracy is nothing but a means to power . . . It is our duty to prevent Communism from ever rising to power in Denmark."

Pope to Require Pledge of Michael

Rome, March 6 (NYHT.)—The Vatican disclosed officially tonight that Pope Pius XII will not grant permission to former King Michael of Romania to wed Princess Anne of Bourbon-Parma unless any children born of the marriage are reared as Catholics.

The Pope gave this decision to the mothers of Michael and Princess Anne when they visited him recently to obtain permission for the wedding. Michael is a member of the Romanian Orthodox Church. Princess Anne is a Catholic.

Eugene Cardinal Tisserant, head of the Vatican's oriental rites section, tonight said Michael had not replied.

Should Anne marry Michael without the Pope's dispensation, she will be excommunicated, Cardinal Tisserant added.

Cardinal Tisserant said the Romanian constitution provides the King and his male descendants must keep the Greek Orthodox faith. Michael abdicated December 30, but this week repudiated his action.

Cardinal Tisserant said the Pope's ruling was based on explicit provisions of the Catholic Church's basic law.

If a non-Catholic promises to raise children born of the marriage as Catholics and also pledges not to interfere with the religion of his or her mate, church officials of the rank of bishop or higher are authorized to grant dispensation. Cases involving royal marriages generally are handled by the Pope.

Cardinal Tisserant said he did not recall any royal marriage that had been obstructed by this church law, but there are many cases involving commoners.

Royal partners to mixed marriages have given the necessary word to the Vatican and then have broken it, the cardinal said.

Arab Leader, Aides Confer In Palestine

Jerusalem, March 6 (AP).—Fawzi Bey al Kaukji, field commander of the Arab Peoples Army in northern Palestine, conferred with his staff officers on Palestine soil at newly established headquarters north of Nablus today.

The activities of Al Kaukji raised reports that a broadened Arab attack was imminent. Although the Arab League has decided to make no large-scale attack while British troops are here, his arrival from Syria suggested the tempo of Arab operations would be increased.

Dispatches from Damascus, Syria, said two batteries of "heavy artillery"—probably French 75's—moved into Palestine today to support the Arab army.

Jerusalem had one of its quietest days, although the Haifa port area was ripped by heavy fire from 3-inch Jewish mortars from the slopes of Mount Carmel. Police said five Arabs were killed.

The death toll since November 29 mounted to 1616.

In Jerusalem a station wagon belonging to the United States consulate was held up and stolen by a band of armed Arabs.

More than 2000 British soldiers and civilians sailed from Haifa today.

[The United Press said all Arab civilians in Palestine were ordered today to wear bedouin headgear or fezzes, such as Arabs have worn during their previous fights with the Jews.]

Arms Cache Found In Paris Garage

Paris, March 6 (U.P.).—Five tons of arms and munitions believed to have been destined for Jewish forces in Palestine was found today in a pre-dawn raid on a Paris garage. Seven persons, including one American, were arrested.

The arms included bazookas, heavy machineguns, sub-machineguns, grenades and anti-personnel mines.

N. Y. Party Chief Asks Truman to Lift Embargo

By The Associated Press

Democratic National Committee heads have agreed to pass on to President Truman a plea by New York party leaders that he take more affirmative action on the Palestine issue.

Paul E. Fitzpatrick, New York State Democratic chairman, yesterday told Chairman J. Howard McGrath and executive director, Gael Sullivan, that the New York committee wanted the Palestine arms embargo lifted and a United Nations or volunteer force created to maintain order there.

Peck, Charteris Safe on Cruiser in Florida

Miami, Fla., March 6 (AP).—The cruiser Tonga, with Gregory Peck, movie star, and mystery story writer Leslie Charteris on board, was located in a safe anchorage today after passage of a storm in which two boats carrying six persons disappeared.

Both men were accompanied by their wives.

The Coast Guard located the Tonga near Craig, in the Florida keys, after an alert had been sounded.

Last Ditch Fight for Palestine Settlement Starts in U. N. Parleys Tomorrow

By Peter Kihss

Lake Success, Long Island, March 6 (NYHT).—One more effort at peaceful settlement of the Paletsine problem appeared likely to mark opening of consultations Monday.

Three of the four nations due to attend—the United States, France and China—stood for anew effort at conciliatoin between Palestine Jews and Arabs, down to the last stage of voting. They mustered six votes for and none against this clause, one shor of the needed majority, with five nations abstaining.

The Soviet Union, the other participant in the talks, was one of the abstainers, holding this was a task which already has been entrusted to the U. N. Palestine Commission.

The British delegation still planne dto stay away from the initial talks.

The Jewish Agency for Paletsine maintained today its rejection of new conciliation attempts.

Isa Nakhleh, United Nations representative of the Arab Higher Committee of Palestine, said:

"We have not been officially approached on any conciliation or otherwise."

Big-power positions today stacked up like this:

United States—favors partition, and is willing to consult on military force if evidence shows a threat to peace or aggression in the Holy Land. Believes the Council's latest resolution to be "broad enough" to cover both determination of the peace threat or new conciliation.

Soviet Union—backs partition, but otherwise mysterious about its course.

France—originally reluctant to accept partition, but now argue assembly recommendations are morally binding on all U. N. organs, including the Security Council. Considers both sides in "open revolt" against U. N. prestige and authority, and favors conciliation—if any possibility is found.

China—originally an abstainer on the Assembly partition plan and still anxious to find a peaceful settlement. Likely to leave it to others to find the way to preserve that peace.

[The United Press reported that reliable sources said the United Nations Palestine Commission "probably" would act within 25 days to establish a provisional government for the Jewish state of Palestine at Lake Success.

[The action would establish the Jewish state as a legal entity. The Palestine Commission doubtless would report to the Security Council its inability to form a similar body for the Arab state. Under the partition program, the commission is supposed to set up provisional councils for both halves of the Holy Land by April 1.]

4 Pints of Wine Are No Substitute For Train Ticket

Baltimore, March 6 (AP).—Paul D. Gormley, 43, boarded a train yesterday in New Haven, Conn., for Baltimore. The conductor soon learned Gormley didn't have money for a ticket, but he did have four pints of wine.

Gormley made it to Baltimore without a ticket, but it didn't pay.

The coach fare—$8.75—doesn't equal a fine of $75; $25 for traveling without a ticket and $50 for disorderly conduct. He's thinking it over in the Central District jail.

Sewage Bids Asked

Winchester, Va., March 6 (Spl). City Council yesterday asked for bids on a new sewage treatment plant and for extension of sewer and water mains in the northeastern section. Residents approved a $650,000 bond issue last year for the project. Bids will be opened at 2 p. m. April 15.

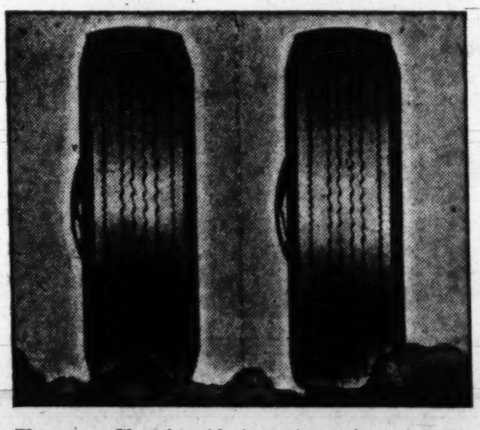
Another "first" from Chrysler

the Safety Level-Ride

Completely, relaxingly different in its road-leveling smoothness, in its cat-footed stability, in your greater control of the car—that's Chrysler's new Safety Level-Ride! Chrysler engineers achieved it through a combination of design improvements that goes clear through from the steering mechanism to the tires and wheels of the car. It's the sensational ride news of 1948—and one more example of how you get the good things first from Chrysler!

smoothest, safest ride you've ever known!



The new Chrysler ride is engineered to give you the maximum benefits of the greatest tire improvement in 20 years—the amazing low-pressure Super-Cushion tires. Bigger and softer than ordinary tires, they smother both lateral and vertical road bumps like a feather pillow. As you'd expect, Chrysler is the first to see that you enjoy the full benefits of such a tire.

The exclusive Chrysler Safety-Rim clamps the tire in place even if a blowout occurs at high speed. You make a safe, controlled stop, and there's much less chance of ruining the tire. Designed with an ingenious tire-gripping device, the Chrysler Safety-Rim Wheel gives you protection no other car can match.

And now at last you'll ride level while the low-pressure tires and specially-designed shock absorbers cushion the irregularities of the road. The Safety Level-Ride, to a surprising extent, eliminates bounce and steering strains. To make all this possible called for major engineering advances—the kind of engineering that makes the beautiful Chrysler so satisfying to own!

Deafened People May Now Hear Clearly

Science has now made it possible for the deafened to hear faint sounds. It is a hearing device so small that it fits in the hand and enables thousands to enjoy sermons, music and friendly companionship. Accepted by the Council on Physical Medicine of the American Medical Association. This device does not require separate battery pack, battery wire, case or garment to bulge or weigh you down. The tone is clear and powerful. So made that you can adjust it yourself to suit your hearing as your hearing changes. The makers of Beltone, Dept. 6 1450 West 19th St., Chicago 8, Ill., are so proud of their achievement that they will gladly send free descriptive booklet and explain how you may get a full demonstration of this remarkable hearing device in your own home without risking a penny. This Week Due To Bring Rises In Food Prices

More food items will carry higher price tags here this week, reflecting boosts on the Nation's commodity markets.

During the past week, flour increased 30 cents a hundred pounds here at wholesale; pork loins and fresh and smoked hams climbed one to three cents a pound, and beef and lamb rose an average of a cent a pound to local dealers.

Normally, these rises would have been passed on to the housewife almost immediately, retailers said, but the increases generally have been "absorbed" by the retailer because of the present "price-consciousness" of the public.

On the average, advertised retaile food listings are near the same level this weekend as they were a week or two weeks ago.

Price drops following the market "break" in early February were sensational in that they came suddenly. Price gains during the jast week have been at a far lower rate.

A spokesman for a leading meat wholesaler here discounted the claims of some retailers that prices have nearly returned to the prebreak level.

"Most meats broke about 10 cents a pound," he declared, "while they've only regained a couple of cents."

The operator of one large food market said, "My prices are the same as they have been for the past two weeks, even though I'm paying more for some foods. I just don't want to be the first one to raise them."

The flour price rise of 30 cents a hundred pounds at wholesale will mean a retail increase of at least three cents for a ten-pound bag. Some stores reported, however, that they have contracts for flour at the previou rate, and would not raise prices for some time.

Family Life To Be Subject Of Conference

A "definite drift away from the Christian ideals of marriage" will be discussed at the sixteenth annual convention of the National Catholic Conference on Family Life which opens here tomorrow.

The conference sponsored by the National Catholic Welfare Conference, will be addressed by Catholic dignitaries, among them the Rev. Eugene M. Burke, the Rev. Edmond G. Benard of Catholic University and Dr. Anton Lang. jr., of Georgetown University.

Dr. Edgar R. Schmiedeler, director of the family life bureau of the NCWC, who defined the "drift away from the Christian ideals of marriage," said there is "hardly need for justifying the sponsoring of a family life conference at this time. Anyone who has even a cursory knowledge of what is transpiring in American family life generally appreciates that fact.

"There has been a decided breakdown in the traditional moral code. Statements and statistics on suc dread evils as child delinquency and parental irresponsibility, divorce and other forms of disintegrated family life, have been multiplied and mounted consistently."

Most Courteous Post Carrier To Be Chosen by Subscribers

The Washington Post

CARRIER COURTESY—James F. Greene, jr., a carrier for The Washington Post, thanks Justice Henry A. Schweinhaut for the letter he wrote praising "Jimmy's" conduct as a paper boy. The associate justice of United States District Court lives at 6502 Maple ave., Chevy Chase, Md.

Who is the most courteous carrier of The Washington Post?

The Washington Post is sponsoring a campaign—paralleling the general courtesy contest sponsored by the Greater National Capital Committee of the Washington Board of Trade—to honor the most outstanding carrier.

Subscribers who feel their carrier deserves special mention for courtesy and service are asked to send their nominations to The Washington Post.

The boy selected from among the 1200 carriers of the paper will receive a $50 Government saving bond.

Your Chance to Help

Will you help discover the carrier most deserving of special recognition?

Here's what you do: Put your name and address on the coupon below and mail or bring it to The Washington Post, 1337 E st. nw., Washington 4, D. C.

(The carrier's name is not needed. He can be identified from your address, so be sure to print it clearly and completely.)

Then add a sentence or two about the boy, telling what special act of service or courtesy on his part prompts you to nominate him for the prize.

This is your opportunity to reward good service and outstanding courtesy, and to encourage it among other boys. Take a minute and do it today. All nominations must be in by midnight, March 18.

What Does He Do?

What does a courteous carrier do?

He delivers each subscriber's paper early and regularly each morning—rain or shine.

He puts the paper on the porch, back of the screen door, or by the door knob, wherever the subscriber wants it.

He goes about his route quietly each morning in order that he will not awaken subscribers who are asleep while he does his early morning job.

He is thoughtful and does not walk across freshly seeded lawns, or leave trash or rubbish on the corner.

He is polite when he visits subscribers' homes, he doffs his hat, says "good evening," and if he comes at an inopportune time indicates that he will be glad to call again, asking when it will be conveenient for him to return, and yas. "Yes, sir," and "No, sir," and Thank you."

He is neat in his appearance as well as polite in his manner when he calls on newcomers in the neighborhood who want to subscribe to The Washington Post.

One Given Praise

Among carriers recently praised in letters to The Washington Post is James F. Greene, jr., 16, of 7105 Chatham rd., Chevy Chase, Md., a carrier for the past five years.

Associate Justice Henry A. Schweinhault of the United States District Court praised the service given by Greene, a Woodrow Wilson High School sophomore, during the recent snowy weather as "well done."

How did your carrier do?

Schools Drop 5 History Books For Pro-Communist Outlok

The District school system has ordered five history textbooks, under attack by a House Subcommittee and the Veterans of Foreign Wars, removed from its library shelves.

The ban, disclosed yesterday, affects the following supplementary texts for elementary schools: "The Building of America," "Man at Work—His Industries," "Man and His Changing Society—Mankind Throughout the Ages," "Man at Work—His Arts and Crafts," "Peoples and Countries."

Coauthors of the works are Harold Rugg and Louise Kreuger, both of whom have been denounced by the House Committee on Un-American Activities for membership in Communist-front organizations and an outlook sympathetic toward communism.

Early last month, a House District Subcommittee, headed by Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.), issued a report declaring the works of the two authors "have no place in the school system of the District."

Last week, School Supt. Hobart W. Corning wrote Representative Miller that as result of a special inquiry, officials of the schools decedide to remove the books from the library shelves, and place them in "dead storage."

"At the close of the year, these books, and any others that have been found unsuitable, will be reported by the . . . principals for condemnation," Dr. Corning said.

In reply, Chairman Miller wrote yesterday that several District text books, including one by Rugg, had been attacked by patriotic societies back in 1937, and had come under criticism in appropriations hearings.

Miller urged the school officials to read the report on the 1937 hearings "as it might keep you and your text book committee out of future trouble."

See "People in the News" on Page 2 for sketch of Corning.

Entrance 14th St.,
between E Street and Constitution Ave. N.W.
This meeting has been called to discuss resolutions adopted by the Board of Directors on Feb. 25, 1948, to the following effect:
(1) to present a report on the status of the sustaining fund;
(2) to hear and consider a report on resolution No. 1 adopted because it has been reported to the board of directors that there exists in the community:
(a) criticism of the board and its administration of the association's affairs;
(b) opposition to Dr. Kindler as musical director and conductor of the orchestra; and that
(c) this agitation threatens the success of the sustaining fund campaign.
The board in resolution No. 1 has expressed its feeling that Dr. Kindler's work in the past seventeen years is an extraordinary monument to his musicianship and unswerving fidelity to his high standards of music and art.
Association members are those who have contributed $25 or more to the sustaining fund for the present season ending May 14th, 1948, or groups of persons who have contributed amount as above.
All friends of the orchestra are urged to be present!
This advertisement is being paid for by a friend of the orchestra.

U. S. Engineers Claim Site of Girls' School

Efforts to get a new Children's Receiving Home and National Training School for Girls here struck another snag yesterday.

The Army Engineers put in a claim for the institution's 19-acre tract at MacArthur blvd. and Little Falls and Loughborough rds.

This followed a proposa a week ago before the House District welfare subcommittee to sell the land and use the proceeds to erect new buildings.

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West at that time said the land might belong to the District, but records indicated it possibly was Federal Government property.

The present buildings on the site have been termed a "firetrap" by subcommittee members.

Army Claims Land

A letter from Col. D. G. White, District Army Engineer, addressed to Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.), subcommittee chairman, staking the Army's claim, declared the land occupied by the present school and receiving home is property of the Washington aqueduct water supply system.

White asserted the two institutions, in effect, were located on "borrowed land." He said he had notified the District as long ago as 1944 that the land is needed for expansion of the water system.

Bill Under Discussion

Representative Miller's subcommittee has been considering a bill to expand the scope of the National Training School for Girls, a detention home for Negro girl delinquents. Residents in the area has protested the move, and have urged transfer of both school and home from the section.

Raymond L. Clapp, acting welfare director, has announced the District intends to move the school to Jolly Acres, near Laurel, Md., but funds are not available.

Parking Rules Are Changed To Avert Jams

Six changes in Northwest area parking and traffic regulations were announced yesterday by the Commissioners.

They are designed to cut possible congestion resulting from Capital Transit Co.'s forthcoming change from streetcar to bus service on the eastern section of Rosslyn-Benning line, they said.

They will become effective on March 28, or as soon thereafter as bus service begins.

Traffic will move one-way eastbound on I st. nw., between 10th and 11th sts., instead of 10th and 13th sts. No parking will be permitted at any time on the south side of I st., from 11th to 13th sts. No standing will be allowed on the north side from 7 to 9:30 a. m. and 4 to 6:30 p. m. One-hour parking is authorized on the north side from 9:30 a. m. to 4 p. m.

Parking will be banned on the north side of Q st. nw., between Florida and Rhode Island aves., from 7 to 9:30 a. m. and 4 to 6:30 p. m. A similar ban will apply on the south side of R st. nw., from Florida ave. to 7th st.

Traffic signs will be erected to stop 8th st. nw traffic at Q and R sts.

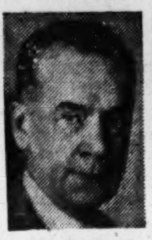
Gallinger Control Fight Lines Drawn

Surgeons' Blast Touches Off Battle Of Health Unit and Medical Schools

Another battle for control of Gallinger Hospital is under way.

This time the city's two medical schools, at Georgetown and George Washington Universities, are lined up against the District Health Department.



Dr. Ruhland

The latest struggle was touched off Tuesday when the two top surgeons at the city institution issued a sweeping criticism of the current administration and urged removal of the Health Department's 10-year control. The critics, Dr. Brian Blades and Dr. Robert J. Coffey, also head the surgical staffs of George Washington University and Georgetown University, respectively.

Urged Separate Agency

They urged that control of the hospital, which cares for most of the city's indigent cases, be shifted to a separate agency—directly under the District Commissioners—to be known as the hospital department. They also recommended that the medical officer system now in operation at the hospital be abolished.

At present, six departments at the hispital are headed by chief medical officers. Their jobs, paid for by the District Government, are largely administrative. In medical matters, Dr. Blades and Dr. Coffey have the final say.

The two physicians suggested that, instead of chief medical officers, the two universities with which they are associated appoint chief residents.

This suggestion was roundly condemned by Health Officer George C. Ruhland, who claimed that prior to institution of the medical officer system the hospital was an "interne-run institution."

"It isn't fair to let internes and residents determine the importance of surgery," he declared.

Praises Department Heads

Dr. Ruhland praised the men who now head the hospital's departments and lambasted his critics for their "astounding poor taste" in presenting their case to the newspapers without first laying it before "the proper authorities."

He held that the criticisms consisted largely of "generalizations" and contended that the "hospital is doing a good job in spite of difficulties." Most of its troubles are due to inadequate funds, he said.

Of the proposal to shift control of the hospital to a separate department, he said:

"That would be a step back."

Prior to 1937, control of the hospital was in the hands of the Board of Public Welfare. So severely was the board's management assailed then that the Health Department was ordered to take over.

Other voices joined in the latest combat.

Dr. Ross T. McIntire, chairman of the Washington Metropolitan Health Council, urged an "overhauling" of Gallinger's administrative system "from the top."

Calling for a modified version of the plan proposed by Dr. Blades and Dr. Coffey, h suggested that hospital control be turned over to a "hospital bureau" under the Health Department rather than a separate department under the District Commissioners.

"Trying to run the hospital the way they're doing now doesn't give the kind of administration we want in a big hospital such as this one," Dr. McIntire asserted.

He declined, however, to take a position on the proposal to abandon the chief medical officer system, although he held the Dr. Coffey and Dr. Blades "may have a pretty good point."

Also entering the dispute, Assistant Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger came forth with strong praise for the current administrative system at Gallinger, together with the practice of using chief medical officers.

Sees Delay Reduced

Dr. Seckinger emphasized that transfer of Gallinger's administration to the Health Department and institution of the chief officer system both were ordered because of failure of earlier systems.

Appointment of chief medical officers "unquestionably helped to avoid unnecessary delays and to get immediate diagnosis and treatment," he said. Both Dr. Blades and Dr. Coffey had contended overhauling of the present system was needed to keep patients from serious and unnecessary delays while awaiting surgery.

"There is no doubt," Dr. Seckinger said, "that the present administration of the hospital is as good as it can be under the circumstances." Departments having chief medical officers, he said, are: Surgery, internal medicine, psychiatry, gynecology and obstetrics, tuberculosis and pediatrics.

William R. Castle, president of the National Capitol Area Hospital Council and also president of the board of directors at Garfield Hospital, lent his voice to the chorus.

He urged that the universities be given a "free hand" in running the hospital, adding:

"And I don't see why the chief medical officers should not be from the universities."

For "the sake of training future doctors," he contended, "the house staff should be given a pretty free hand. That's the only way they can learn."

Castle held that chief medical officers serve a very "useful" function and help to win "public confidence in a hospital." They can "assist the resident staff a lot and teach them a lot," he declared.

He declined to take a position on proposed shifting of administrative control.

Dr. Alvin R. Sweeney, superintendent of Gallinger, whose ouster was recently demanded, defended the medical officer system and contended that the men who head his departments are "doing an awfully good job." Simultaneously, he praised the administration of the Health Department.

The whole question, meantime, has been placed in the lap of the District Medical Society. It was put there by Dr. Ruhland "because I think the medical profession should speak."

The health officer, in a letter to Medical Society President Raymond T. Holden, suggested that the organization appoint a committee to probe needs of the institution, quality of service, costs of operation and management of the hospital.

"The unfortunate publicity which for quite some time now has again centered on Gallinger Hospital naturally has had a very disturbing effect on the patients, employes and the public in general," Dr. Ruhland asserted.

He pointed out that public reaction to such charges usually is to "refuse" to go to the hospital. "I hope," he added, "that the medical profession will do a good job in the investigation; the public is entitled to know."

Aide to Chief

New Yorker Gets GWU Hospital Post

Avery M. Millard, administrative assistant at St. Luke's Hospital, New York, was named assistant superintendent of George Washington University's new hospital here yesterday.

Millard

At the same time, university officials announced a two-week postponement of the scheduled opening day of the hospital, at 23d st. nw. and Washington circle. Opening ceremonies will be celebrated March 22 and 23.

Millard, who served also as director of clinics at St. Luke's, will take over his duties here tomorrow. He received his bachelor of arts degree from Colgate University in 1940, and completed one year at Cornell University Medical College before entering the Naval Air Corps in 1941.

After four years with the Navy he took graduate work in hospital administration at the University of Chicago, 1945-46, and spent the following year as administration intern with Dr. Claude W. Munger, director, St. Luke's. He will receive a master of business administration degree from the University of Chicago this year.

Millard, who will serve under Superintendent Leo G. Schmelzer will move here with his wife and 9-month-old daughter to the Everglades Apartments, 2223 H st. nw.

Boy, 5, Burned By Steam After Falling Into Ditch

Joseph Brennan, 5, of 2702 Webster st., Mount Rainier, Md., was seriously burned yesterday when he fel linto an open ditch in Kaywood Gardens and was scalded by steam beeing used in cleaning apartment steam pipe valves.

The boy, son of Mrs. Theresa E. Brennan, suffered third degree burns, back and both arms. He is beeing treated in Prince Georges General Hospital, Cheverly, Md.

Child Care Cases on Rise

Child care cases are increasing so rapidly they "constitute a grave problem" for the Board of Public Welfare, Acting Welfare Director Raymond F. Clapp said yesterday.

The number of children for whom board is paid in private homes or institutions increased from 977 last July to 1075 in January, Clapp revealed.

Daily average population at the Receiving Home for Children has gone up from 64 in July to 131 on March 4.

The number of children attending Day Care Centers has risen from 206 to 225 during the past month.

None of the comparisons covered identical periods of time, however, and child care figures for last year at this time were not made available.

Welfare officials said the increase may be due to last August's economy measures, which cut off aid to many families with dependent children. The housing shortage, increased unemployment and high cost of living also were mentioned as possible contributing causes.

Tiny Girl Triplets, Mother Are Reported 'Doing Just Fine'

Doing "just fine" at Providence Hospital last night were the tiny, two-day-old Burroughs triplets.

Also coming along nicely was their mother, Mrs. Grace Burroughs, 31, who gave birth to the three girls Thursday night in Providence's first triple delivery in 25 years.

Still trying to get his feet on the ground, however, was grinning Papa George Ray Burroughs, who is keeping house, with the aid of his 6-year-old daughter, Alexandra, at 1210 South Barton st., Arlington.

Burroughs, a trouble-shooter on Capital Transit buses, learned only a week ago, shortly after his wife found out, that he would soon be the father of triplets.

"It kinda stuns you," he said last night. "It takes about a day for it to sink in. My wife said 'three,' and it left me speechless."

Burroughs, who says he should be receiving the cigars instead of passing them out, isn't worried right now about supporting the three new arrivals. "That'll come later," he said.

He's happy they are girls, instead of boys. He is one of 11 children, eight of whom were girls. He understands them, he says.

Mrs. Burrough will be coming home early this week. The triplets, tagged "A," "B," and "C" on identification bracelets, probably will be in their incubators until they are 2 months old. They will go home when they weigh around 5 pounds.

Maryland Rye Drinkers Get Piece of Bad News

Baltimore, March 6 (AP).—Lovers of straight Maryland rye whisky, attention! Send up a little prayer that the supply holds out until 1952.

The last distillery making Maryland straight rye was bought out recently and put to making blends.

Frank L. Wight, third generation of distilling family, said yesterday he'll have another plant going soon at nearby Cockeysville and will fill up 5800 barrels as fast as he can.

But it's got to age until 1952.

Housewife Found Shot In Md. Home

Blood transfusions last night were reported sustaining the life of a 31-year-old nearby Maryland housewife, found shot in the head yesterday in her father's bedroom.

The victim, Mrs. Hazel Hatcher, 5020 55th ave., Rogers Heights, was found unconscious by her father, her head resting on a pillow on a bedroom floor. Beneath her body was a .22-caliber target pistol belonging to her father, Albert B. Hunter, 60, Capital Transit Co. employe. Hunter said he returned home at 1:40 p. m. yesterday to find his granddaughter, Carlyn, 4, crying in the livingroom. When he asked where her mother was, she pointed to the bedroom door.

Taken to Prince Georges County General Hospital at Cheverly, the woman was placed under the immediate care of a brain surgeon. He reported that a bullet, entering the temple, had severed a cranial artery. Blood from Washington blood banks was rushed there.

No Explanation Found

Prince Georges County police reported they could find no immediate explanation of the shooting.

The victim's husband, Carl Hatcher, 31, mechanic with the Phelps-Roberts Corp., 1825 14th st. nw., said he was not home at the time. Only Friday night, he said, he cautioned his wife about tiring herself with too much housework.

"She was working too hard, and it was making her nervous," he said.

Mrs. Hatcher, formerly of Washington, was married in 1940. She lived with her husband, a wartime aviation mechanic, at her father's home for the past five years.

Child Heard Shot

Police learned little from questioning the little girl. They said she told them she was playing with her toys in the living room of the bungalow when she heard "bang-bang." She did not try to go in the bedroom but called, and "Mommy" didn't answer.

Hunter, a cook, first class, with the Seabees during the war, told police the loaded gun was kept under his pillow. His daughter, he said, was apparently making up his bed just before the tragedy.

Police said they found two empty cartridges in the pistol, but no trace of a second bullet.

Court Holds Truckman in Hit-Run Case

A 37-year-old Harpers Ferry, Va., man was placed on $2500 bond by Fairfax authorities yesterday, charged with a hit-and-run accident in Falls Church Friday.

Injured was Charles G. Manly, 2d, 4-year-old, of 602 Jackson st., Falls Church.

The child, son of Charles G. Manly, publisher of the Falls Church Echo, was in Arlington Hospital yesterday with a cracked rib and minor cuts.

Charged by Fairfax police with hit-and-run was Melvin G. Cogle of Neersville, Harpers Ferry, Va. According to Falls Church police, Charles coasted in his wagon down Anne st. near Jackson st., and the truck, driven by Cogle, backed into Anne st. and struck the boy. Witnesses identified Cogle as the truck driver, and declared he failed to stop, police said. Cogle was arrested at a relative's home in Falls Church yesterday.

A hearing will be held in Fairfax Trial Justice Court March 26.

Electric Cooperative To Borrow $738,000

Fredericksburg, Va., March 6 (Spl.).—The Virginia Electric Cooperative, which serves several counties in this area, has been authorized by the State Corporation Commission to borrow $738,000 from the Rural Electrification Administration to expand its facilities.

The expansion program will include substations at St. John's Church, Buckner, Dunbrooke and Paytes, costing $168,000; installation of 66 miles of new transmission lines, $264,000; tools and equipment, $12,500, and 200 miles of distribution lines to serve 803 customers for which no estimate was made.

O'Brian Heads Oak Ridge Board

By The Associated Press

President Truman yesterday named a three-man board to study a labor dispute at an Oak Ridge, Tenn., atomic energy plant.

The chairman is John Lord O'Brian, New York and Washington attorney and wartime general counsel of the War Production Board. Other members are C. Canby Balderston, dean of the Wharton School of Finance and Commerce, Philadelphia, and Stanley F. Teele, assistant dean of the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration.

This is the first such board to be appointed under the Taft-Hartley Act authorizing such inquiry panels when the President deems the national safety is threatened It will report by March 19 on the contract disagreement between the AFL Allied Trades Council and the Carbide & Carbon Chemicals Corp.

Court Revokes License Of Attorney on Request

Richmond, Va., March 6 (AP).—The law license of former State Senator Maitland H. Bustard was revoked by the State Supreme Court yesterday by request of the Danville attorney.

Bustard petitioned the court "that his name be struck from the roll of attorneys qualified to practice law in this State, and that his right to practice law in this State be revoked." He gave no reason for his request.

Abortion Alibi Testimony Set

Alibi witnesses are to testify tomorrow that Dr. Henry L. Peckham, jr., southeast Washington physician charged with abortion, was otherwise engaged on the key dates, Defense Counsel H. Mason Welch announced Friday.

The Government expects to rest its case tomorrow upon professional testimony to show that Mrs. Hubert Stettlemyer, upon whom Dr. Peckham is accused of performing an abortion, was pregnant.

This move stemmed from a contention on the part of defense counsel that the fact of pregnancy should be established if abortion is to be charged.

Dr. Peckham acquitted several weeks ago on similar charges involving the former sweetheart of Washington Attorney James J. Laughlin, is charged this time with performing an illegal operation on Mrs. Stottlemyer in his office, 428 8th st. se., on January 3, 1947.

Road Discourtesy Cost in '47: 19 Dead and 3894 in Trouble

Nineteen lives might have been saved here last year if motorists had practiced simple courtesy, a special study by the Commissioners Traffic Advisory Board and the Department of Vehicles and Traffic Advisory Board and the Department of Vehicles and Traffic revealed yesterday.

At least 3894 of the 10,679 drivers involved in accidents during 1947 could have avoided them by being courteous, the report added.

They included: 1358 motorists who failed to yield right of way to other drivers; 501 who turned from the wrong lane; 405 who drove on wrong slide of the road; 208 who failed to yield right of way to pedestrians; and 346 who failed to stop at boulevard crossings.

Eight deaths resulted from motorists driving at excessive speeds; five from failing to yield right of way to pedestrians; two from failing to give other motorists right of way, and one each because motorists drove on wrong side of road, through safety zones, failed to stop at boulevards, or didn't obey traffic signals.

Traffic Director George E. Keneipp said the study didn't include careless or reckless driving or other categories that also might "indicate lack of courtesy on part of drivers." A similar study covering pedestrians will be released next week.

4 Alexandrians Beat Deadline, File forCouncil

Four Alexandria men yesterday beat a filing fee deadline and announced their candidacies for the Alexandria City Council in the April 6 Democratic Primary.

Those who filed yesterday with Gilbert J. Cox, jr., acting chairman of the City Democratic Committee, were:

Leroy F. Bendheim, 309 Mansion dr.; Randall J. Hicks, of the Presidential Gardens apartments; Roy C. Bragg of 206 W. Mt. Ida ave., and Claude B. Harris, of 14 Glendale ave.

Bendheim, an attorney, is senior vice comander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Virginia. Hicks is a realtor, vice president of the Alexandria Civitan Club, and chairman of the board of the American Federation of the Physically Handicapped.

Harris, a plumbing and heating contractor, is a native of Staunton, Va., and an Alexandria resident since 1929. He is a member of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce, Retail Merchants Association and the Rotary Club.

The fourth candidate, Bragg, is an attorney and owner of an Alexandria filling station. His organizational affiliations include the Chamber of Commerce, Masons, Odd Fellows, Marine Corps League, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the American Legion.

Southerners Say Poll Tax Doesn't Block Many Votes

By The Associated Press

A number of Southern Congressmen questioned at random yesterday contended that poll tax repeal would not greatly increase voting in the poll tax States.

Opinion varied from "negligible or none" to an additional 15 per cent.

Representatives from the seven Southern States requiring poll tax payment to vote said it is largely guesswork to say what effect repeal would have.

A bill to abolish the poll tax voting requisite has been approved by the House and is pending before the Senate. Its backers say poll taxes keep millions of Negroes and whites from voting.

Minnesota Plans No-Segregation Policy in Guard

St. Paul, March 6 (AP).—Governor Youngdhahl today took steps to integrate Negroes into the Minnesota National Guard without segregation.

The Governor sent a letter to James V. Forrestal, Secretary of Defense, in Washington, urging that the Army department approve a policy of integrating the Negroes into the Guard as was approved by the War Department for New Jersey.

The Governor asked Secretary Forrestal whether the War Department will withdraw recognition and Federal funds from the Minnesota National Guard if he signs an order integrating the Negroes without discrimination or segregation.

Chennault Backs U. S. Aid to China

Tokyo, March 6 (AP).—Claire L. Chennault, wartime leader of the Flying Tigers, said tonight he agreed with General MacArthur and Albert C. Wedemeyer that the United States should lend military aid to China.

Chennault stopped here briefly on his flight to Washington, where he will testify before the House Foreign Affairs Committee on American aid to embattled China. He arrived by plane from Shanghai.

Chennault, who operates a commercial airline in China, was accompanied by his Chinese bride of a few weeks.

Canadian Liberals Set Convention Date

Ottawa, Ontario, March 6 (AP). Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King's Liberal Party today called a national convention August 5-7 in Ottawa to consider the question of party leadership.

The Prime Minister told a party advisory council January 20 he wanted to retire from active politics as soon as the party could select a new leader.

What To Do For That Sluggish, Down-and-Out Feeling

Remember the time when you could eat like a horse, bubbled-over with energy, felt happy as a lark? Was it not because you liked to eat—didn't know what indigestion was, felt strong as an ox? As age advances the "old stomach and the ever-changing blood" need help. Now you may again release vibrant energy to every muscle, fibre, cell.

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on SSS Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Clark Denies Deportation Case of Bridges Is Reopened

San Francisco, March 6 (AP). Ousted from a high CIO post because of his political views, West Coast longshore leader Harry Bridges had a fresh headache today—a reported renewal of efforts to deport him.

The CIO fired Bridges as northern California regional director yesterday because he went contrary to national CIO policy by supporting Wallace's third party and opposing the Marshall Plan.

He was warned two weeks ago to get in line with policy of the CIO executive committee on the issues or face ouster from the appointive director's position. He was silent on his ouster.

The climax of the CIO family fight came as newspapers reported a Justice Department investigator had been sent here "to seek evidence on which to base a third formal effort" to deport Bridges, a native of Australia. He now is a United States citizen.

These reports named the investigator as John Phillips, who was believed en route here from Los Angeles. Other Justice Department sources here disclosed no information on Phillips' movements.

Aides of Attorney General Tom Clark said in Washington "the Bridges case has not been reopened."

Bridges took note of the reports in a statement expressing no surprise at "my contemplated arrest" and hotly attacking the Truman Administration for "political intimidation."

After a hearing in 1939, an examiner held Bridges was not deportable because he had not been proven to be a Communist Party member at the time of the hearnig. Another hearing was held in 1941 and he was ordered deported. But the United States Supreme Court reversed the order, holding it was not shown that Bridges had advocated force and violence to overthrow the Government.

Northern Virginia Republicans Fail in Direct Primary Move

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

An attempt by northern Virginia Aepublicans to initiate direct primaries in the Eighth Congressional District, was defeated last night by delegates from the southern section of the district.

Meeting at the Lord Culpeper Hotel in Culpeper, 12 of the 17 members of the Eighth District Committee voted to hold the district convention March 26 in Culpeper. But the primary issue was the major point of discussion.

In a sharply worded debate, representatives of southern sections of the district demanded reconsideration of a December action by the committee calling for direct primaries. Delegates from Arlington, Alexandria and Fairfax contended that voters in their areas almost unanimously favored direct primaries.

Southern delegates demanded that congressional nominees be chosen by the district party convention April 10. These delegates represented Charlottesville, and the counties of Albemarle, Culpeper, Fluvanna, Goochland, King George, Louisia, Madison and Prince William. Fauquier, Greene, Orange and Stafford Counties were unrepresented at the meeting.

"The people of Alexandira, Arlington and Fairfax have voiced the opinion that a direct primary would be the greatest thing that could hapen to the State," Tyrrell Krum, of Vienna, representing Fairfax County, declared.

He haid "the vision of the Southern delegates of the District stops at the Fairfax County line. The greatest new population in Virginia and the United States is being denied the primary because a few people are afraid to vote Republican."

Branding the primary a "free for all, a lot of nonsense," R. R. Harmon, of Albemarle County, said, "Southern District Republicans would not tunr out to vote in the traditionally Democratic area.

"A man would rather stick his hand in a furnace than ask for a Republican ballot," Harmon declared.

Delegates said there were hundreds of Republican voters in the South, but by imposing a direct primary not more than 10 votes would be cast.

As a result of the reconsideration, no direct Republican primary can be held. Congressional nominees will be chosen at the district convention of the party in Roanoke April 10.

Representation of one delegate for every 100 of population was set for the district convention.

Throughout the meeting Carl Marshall of McLean, district chairman, expressed optimism that the district and the State would go Republican in the 1948 election.

A committee of Joseph Domazet of Culpeper County; John J. Morris, Greene County; W. C. Conklin, Louisia County; Krum and Harmon was named to handle arrangements for the convention.

$23,000 Raised To Date in Sale Of Easter Seals

A total of $25,000 has been raised in Washington during the first two weeks of the 1948 Easter Seal campaign , Campaign Chairman Albert W. Howard said yesterday.

The annual Easter Seal Sale is a Nation-wide drive to provide the funds for service and treatment to handicapped persons who have a valid need not met by any other agency.

In Washington, the society concentrates its efforts on a program for the cerebral palsied.

A national goal of $5,500,000 to be raised from distribution of the seals in the United States, Alaska and Hawaii has been set this year. Las aytre
Last year the local chapter raised $60,000.

Montgomery Zoning Plans Are Approved

Four Montgomery County phases of master highway and zoning plans were approved last week, with few alterations, by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

The actions were announced yesterday amid a list of commission decisons on rezoning petitons.

Master plans voted acceptable included Woodmont Triangle, in Bethesda; the Kensington business district; Georgia avenue zoning, and the Colesville rd. sector.

Only One Change

Only change in the original master highway plan for Bethesda, Part 1 (Woodmont Triangle) was elimination of the proposed extension of Auburn ave. between Arlington and Wisconsin aves.

The master highway plan for the Kensington business district, unoposed at a citizens' meeting at Bethesda Elementary School, Friday, February 27, was voted acceptable without change.

Similarly, master zoning plans for Georgia ave., including those affecting Wheaton, received commission recommendations. The commission noted, however, that late-date proposals for various parcels of commercial zoning were received too long after the advertised hearing.

Colesville Plan

The master zoning plan for Colesville rd. was voted approved without any eliminations, but with the following enlargements:

1. Extension of commercial zoning on the west side of Colesville rd. north of Burnt Mills was continued northward to equal commercial zoning on the east side of the road.

2. Commercial zoning recommended at Colesville was increased northward on both sides of Colesville rd. to Midland rd., with elimination of the additional 50-foot setback on the Colesville-Laurel rd.

3. Extension of commercial zoning at the Briggs Cheney rd. northward on both sides of Colesville rd. to land zoned first commercial "against Commission recommendation" in 1947.

Bates Opposes D. C. Sales Tax, New Schools

Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.) made it clear yesterday that:

1. He will vigorously oppose a sales tax for the District as being unduly burdensome on low-income groups.

2. He will fight to limit abandonment of old District schools and the building of new ones, if old ones can be modernized.

Bates is cochairman of a joint Senate-District Committee on Fiscal Affairs, which opens hearings March 18 on ways and means for obtaining District revenue in fiscal 1949.

The sales tax has ben suggested by the District Commissioners as a new source of funds. The plan has the support of Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.), cochairman of the District Fiscal Affairs Joint Subcommittee.

Pointing out that the District has a program calling for expenditure of 156 million dollars in the next seven years, Bates declared:

"It is the responsibility of Congress to see that the budget is pared to the bone . . . then we'll know what the needs are."

Bates said, "Washington is already spending more money than any city of its size in the country."

Friday the 13th Calf Born With 3 Legs

New Morket, Va., March 6 (Spl.). Farmer Luther L. Tusing has a three-legged calf which runs, jumps and kicks like any other calf.

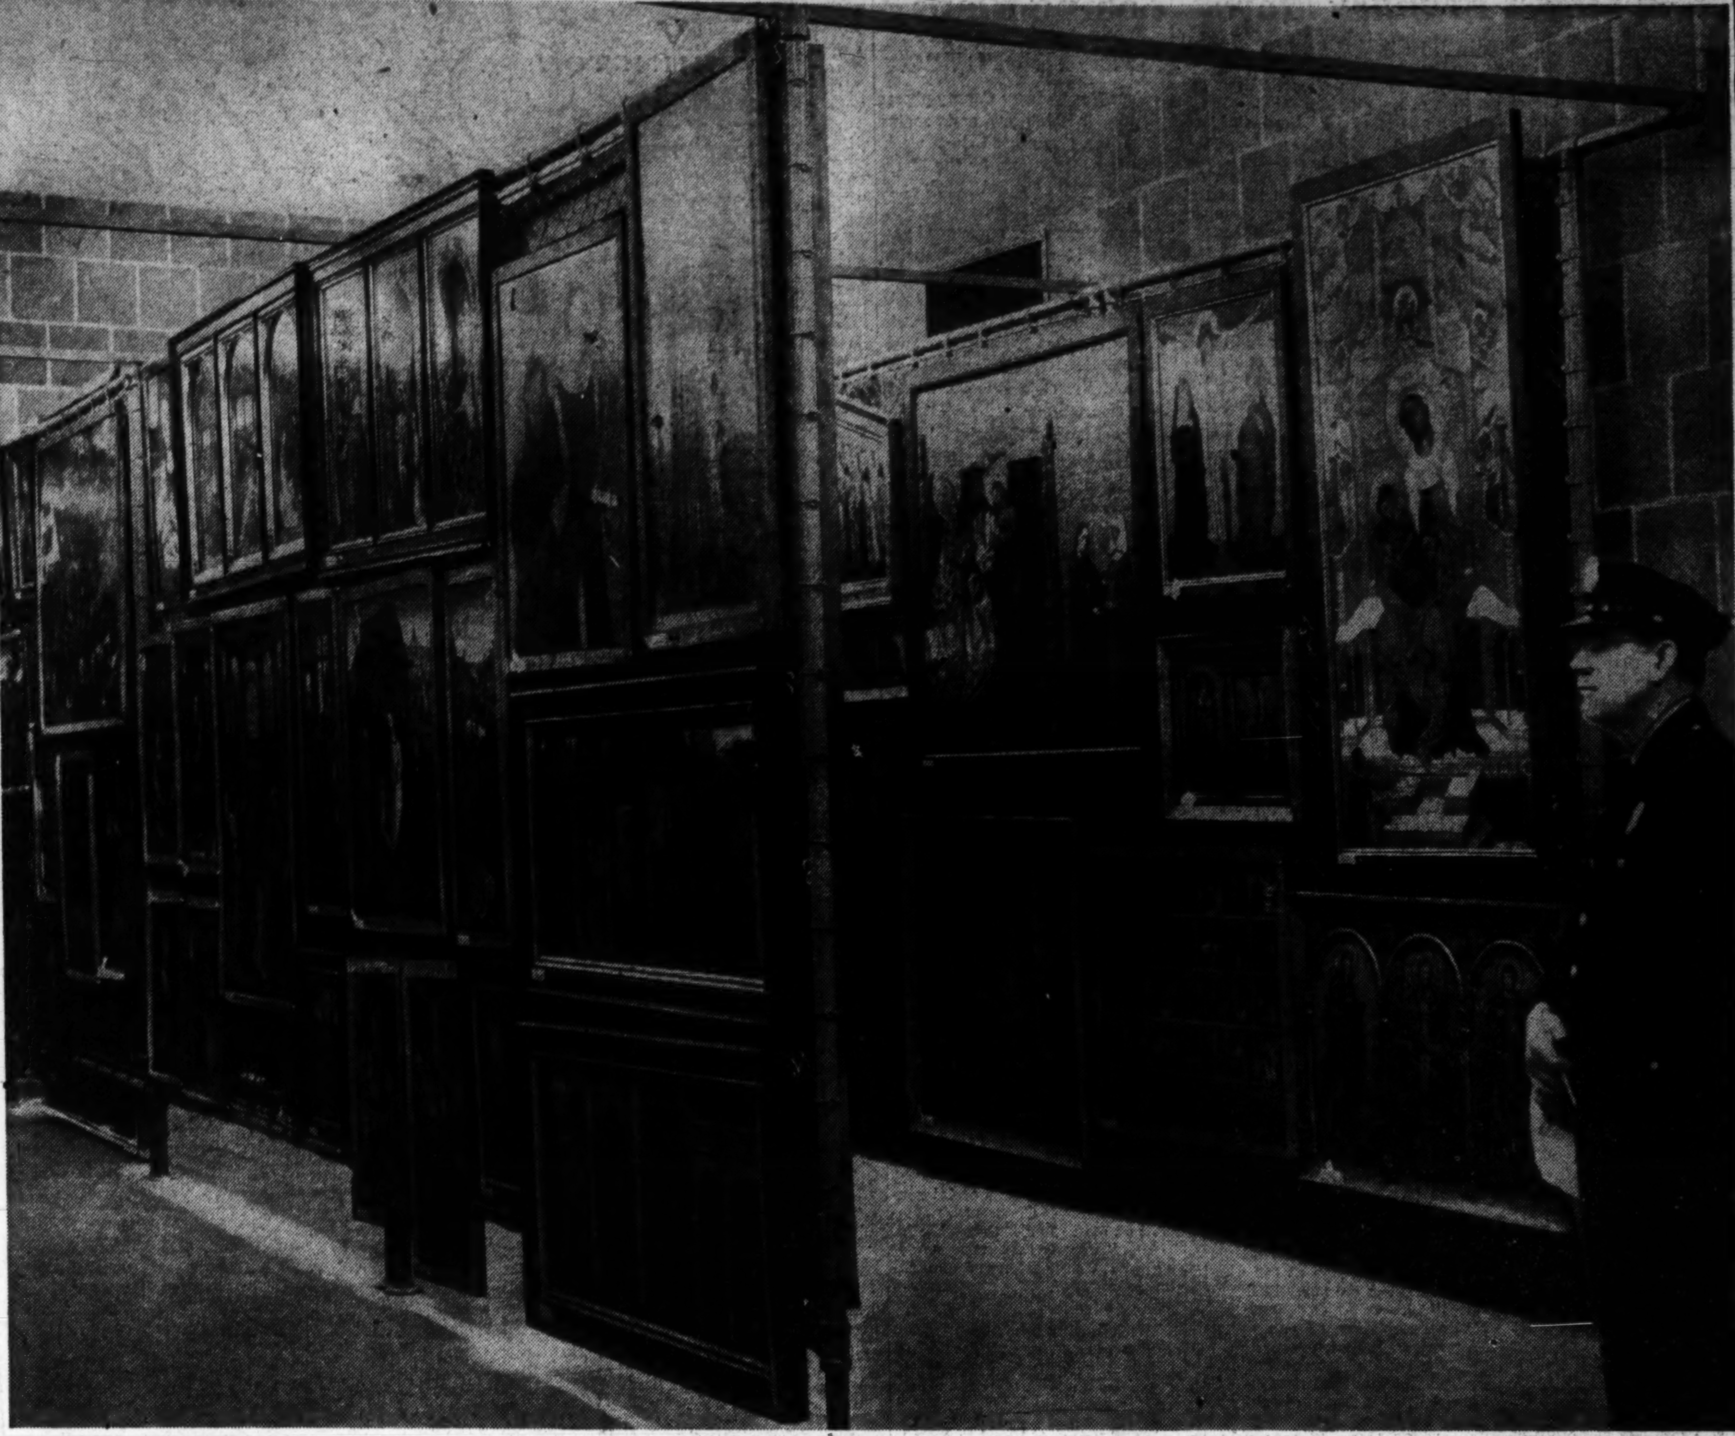
Hagerstown to Follow Large Cities on DST

Hagerstown, Md., March 6 (AP).—Mayor Richard H. Sweeney said today Hagerstown will adopt daylight saving time this year if nearby large cities do so.

But he wants some group other than the mayor and the city council to initiate the proposal.

Daylight time was adopted here last year only after two stormy council sessions. Farm organizations fought the move then.

Priceless Art Under Guard Pending Exhibit Here



THE WORKS OF OLD MASTERS—Officer T. B. Hurdle stands watch over art treasures found in a slate mine near Markers, Germany, in the spring of 1945 and brought to the United States for safe keeping and storage in the air-conditioned rooms in the basement of the National (Mellon) Gallery on Constitution ave. They will be exhibited March 17 through April 18 in the spring of 1945 in a large salt mine near Merkers, Germany, following occupation of that area by the American Third Army.

Washington to See Famed German Paintings

The paintings had been moved to the salt mine by the Germans to protect them from Allied bombing.

They came from the Prussian State Museum in Berlin with the exception of the two nineteenth century works from a museum of modern art, also in Berlin.

The collection has been reported to have a market value of 80 million dollars.

Royall's announcement of the collection's return sets at rest Russian charges that the Americans had taken the pictures as loot, and controversies in the American art world as to whether the Government had a moral right to transfer the pictures. It also ends a thread of agitation for retention of the pictures here as compensation for American expenditures in Germany.

The Department of the Army's announcement said: "The paintings are the prewar property of the German government, and are positively established as not having been among the large quantity of art objects looted by the Nazis from their rightful owners.

"The paintings will be held in the custody of the American occupation authorities in Germany pending final peace settlements."

A subcommittee of the Senate Armed Services Committee also issued a statement yesterday saying that "after consideration of the questions of applicable internatonal law, as well as the questions of sound policy involved, the subcommittee concurs in the position taken by the Department of the Army as being sound from both viewpoints."

Art Held Not War Booty

The subcommittee, headed by Senator Wayne R. Morse (R., Oreg.) said that for the United States to keep the pictures would "in the eyes of the world make us guilty as looters of treasures of art. . . . Art treasures are not war booty under international law, as were the Hungarian horses whose status was recently so defined."

Other subcommittee members included Senators Edward V. Robertson (R., Wyo.) and Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.)

The pictures are being returned at the request of Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American commander in Germany, who reported to Washington that several places are now available in the American Zone for their safekeeping.

Army spokesmen here said that General Clay did not say where in the American Zone they would be kept.

Speculation has named Wiesbaden, Heidelberg or Munich as the possible place of their housing, though it may be that the collection will be divided between two or more cities.

Came From Russian Zone

Though the pictures came originally from museums in the Russian zone of Berlin there is no intention of returning them to Berlin at present, Army and State Department spokesmen said, because of the ruined condition of the city.

It was also pointed out that there never has been an international agreement for return of art objects, that art objects from the American Zone are now in the Russian and visa versa, and that the question of return has never been raised.

Should the Russians raise the question, it was said, "they will be asked some embarrassing questions." (In October 1947 Francis H. Taylor, director of the Metropolitan Museum in New York, said thousands of German museum pieces had disappeared behind the Russian 'iron curtain' and there was no public record of them.)

Since the pictures are being held in trust for the German people, upon formation of a German government their eventual disposition will be left to it.

The State Department has recommended to General Clay that the pictures be shown to the German people as soon as practical, it was understood yesterday.

In National Gallery

Since arrival of the collection in the United States they have been stored in the National Gallery, by request of the Secretary of State, in a special air-conditioned storage gallery.

They have been inspected daily by staff members and shown only to gallery officers and qualified museum officials, David E. Finley, director, said.

Upon arrival at the gallery the paintings "were full of water from their storage in the salt mine and many were badly blistered."

When inspected yesterday they appeared free from blisters and gleamed like gems.

Gallery officials said they had given "first aid but no repainting or actual cleaning," and were proud of the fact that the collection was going back in better condition than when it arrived.

As for the quality of the paintings, they said that while the Mellon and Kress collections in the Gallery could show a like number of paintings of greater quality, the German collection was richer in the work of some artists than the Washington Gallery.

Among the world famous paintings are "Rembrandt's "Man With Gold Helmet," "Susanna and the Elders," and a portrait of the artist's wife, Saskia; three Madonna paintings by Raphael; a self-portrait by Titian, and others.

Among the artists and the number of their works in the collection are: Hans Baldung-Grien, 4; Bellini, 1; Bosch, 1; Botticelli, 4; Breughel, 2; Carpaccio, 1; Lucas Cranach, 3; Durer, 5; Frans Hals, 6; Holbein, 3; Claude Lorrain, 1; Andrea Mantegna, 2; Hans Memling, 3; Nicholas Poussin, 2; Raphael, 3; Rembrandt, 15; Rubens, 6; Tiepolo, 3; Tintoreeto, 2; Titian, 5; Van Eyck, 5; Vermeer, 2, and Watteau, 3.

Two Supreme Court justices figured in the collection's history in the United States.

The late Chief Justice Harlan Fiske Stone as chairman of the National Gallery's board of trustees in 1945 accepted temporary custody of the collecting pending its return.

When in 1946 a group of art leaders criticised bringing of the collection to the United States, Former Justice Owen J. Roberts, as chairman of the American Commission for the Protection and Salvage of Artistic and Historic Monuments in War Areas, issued a statement saying that the criticism was "without justification" and that the Commission accepted "without reservation the promise of the United States Government" that the pictures would be returned when conditions warranted.

Md. Guard Urges Firms to Pay Men On Military Leave

Baltimore, March 6 (AP).—The Maryland National Guard today urged State business firms to grant paid military leaves to employes as a means of encouraging enlistments.

The Guard announced that letters from Brig. Gen. Henry C. Evans, commander of troops, were mailed yesterday to 1600 industrial firms in the Baltimore area.

The letters appealed to employers to grant annual 15-day leaves with regular pay to all guard members, in addition to the company's ordinary vacation schedule.

The State Guard, which holds two-week exercises each summer at Camp Ritchie, is seeking to boost its present enlistment of about 3000 members.

Move for Fairgrounds Begun at Martinsburg

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 6 (AP).—A movement to construct a community fairgrounds for the Martinsburg area was begun last night at a meeting of the local Kiwanis Club.

A committee to outline the program was appointed after County Agent W. N. McClung had explained the needs. Club officials said the fairgrounds and buildings would be used by civic and community groups free of charge.

Falls Church Plan For Annexation To Be Discussed

The Fairfax Board of Supervisors plans to meet soon with Falls Church officials to discuss the town's annexation proposal, Maurice Fox, acting chairman, said yesterday.

Fox said the meeting would not be held during the board's regular session on March 17, but would be a separate conference with the Falls Church Town Council.

Tentatively annexation plans would add 1 square mile of Fairfax territory to the town of Falls Church and an estimated 15,000 residents.

The annexation is reported to include the East Greenway Downs, Jefferson Village, Lee Boulevard Heights, and Birch subdivisions, and the remainder of Hillwood.

Annexation action would have to be taken in a suit through Fairfax Circuit Court. The pending conference between the Fairfax board and the Falls Church Town Council will aim at discussing annexation details before court action is instigated.

Cooperatives to Meet

Manassas, Va., March 6 (Spl.).—Members of Southern States Cooperative local boards and farm home committees from nine Virginia communities will attend an annual midwinter regional conference here Tueesday evening in the Masonic Temple.

119 Accidents Are Reported In D. C. Homes

A child ate a tube of shoe polish, a woman stuck a crochet hook in her thumb, a 23-year-old man cut his finger while slicing a lemon, and:

Nine persons died last week as a result of accidents in their homes. Washington home fatalities and injuries totaled 119, the Red Cross Accident Prevention Service reported.

Three of the nine deaths, the Red Cross said, were the result of falls, as were 48 of the 110 injuries treated in hospitals.

Children came in for their share of trouble, as usual. Besides shoe polish, they drank kerosene, ate pennies, chewed a box of cathartics. A 2-year-old swallowed an open safety pin.

Three men were burned in explosions of a kerosene stove, gas oven and a pressure cooker. Two women took potassium permanganate pills for cold pills; another stuck scissors in her thumb.

3 Md. Airfields Lose Rating of 'Above Average'

Schrom Field at Greenbelt, Congressional Field at Rockville and Mexico Farms Field at Cumberland were dropped from the list of Maryland's "above average" fields by the January report of the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association.

The semiannual report indicated that the number of "above average" fields increased nationally from 403 to 705 for the period from last June to January, while in Maryland the member dropped from nine to six.

Peter G. Zouck, director of the State Aviation Commission, said he had "no explanation" for the decrease. "The three airports dropped in the survey are all right as far as we're concerned," he said. "I haven't been out there myself in some time, but we haven't had any complaints."

The AOPA's rating system is based on voluntary recommendations of its pilots. It generally is recognized as an authoritative and impartial poll designed to further the interests of private flying.

Sailor Shows Signs of Rousing From Long Coma

Fredericksburg, Va., March 6 (Spl.).—Fresh hope was held out today for a 26-year-old sailor, unconscious for 75 days from an automobile accident.

The victim, Morris Cornelius, a chief pharmacist's mate, moved slightly and opened his eyes two days ago for the first time since he was hurt in a head-on auto crash near Triangle, Va., on December 20.

Physicians at Quantico Marine Base Hospital said Cornelius, although still in coma, appears on the mend and may soon be removed from the "critical list." They credited his excellent physical condition with sustaining his life.

100 Wild Duck Deaths Blamed On Phosphorous

Annapolis, Md., March 6 (AP).—The cause of the death of more than 100 wild ducks in the Bush River was pinned down today.

Secretary Paul W. McKee of the Maryland Water Pollution Commission said it was phosphorus poisoning. The United States Wildlife Research Refuge at Patuxent, which discovered the cause, offered no help on where the phosphorus came from.

The report by the refuge appeared to have ended studies by several State and Federal agencies since the ducks were found dead last weekend. A first thought was that oil was the cause.

Legal Mental Unit Headed by Skeen

Annapolis, Md., March 6 (AP).—Attorney John Henry Skeen, jr., of Baltimore, was named chairman of a commission appointed by Governor Lane yesterday to study problems of mental disease and its relation to the law. The commission was authorized by a joint resolution of the 1947 General Assembly.

Others appointed to the group are: Dr. John E. Whithorn, director of the Phipps Clinic at Johns Hopkins Hospital; Dr. George H. Preston, head of the State Board of Mental Hygiene; Judge Charles E. Moylan of Baltimore; Judge Joseph D. Mish of Hagerstown; Dr. Manfred Guttmacher, medical officer of the Baltimore Supreme Bench.

Dr. Ephraim T. Lisansky of Baltimore, Edward E. Yaggy, jr., of Baltimore, Dr. Robert M. Lindner of Catonsville, R. Emmet Bradley of Baltimore, George C. Grant of Morgan State College, George C. Doub of Owings Mills. Delegates Jerome Robinson (D., Baltimore 4th) and Irvin A. Adler (D., Baltimore 4th) and Senator P. G. Stromberg (D., Howard).

Striking Teachers' Discharge Sought

Minneapolis, March 6 (U.P.).—Attorneys for the mother of a Minneapolis school pupil said today they will ask for dismissal of the city's 1100 striking teachers.

The request, they said, will be included with a new injunction petition to be presented in District Court late today or Monday.

The attorneys, representing Mrs. Gudrun H. Jensen, withdrew one petition seeking to restrain the teachers from their "illegal" 12-day strike. In its place they planned to ask a restraining order against both the board of education and two striking locals of the AFL American Federation of Teachers.

The Federal Diary

Text of Booklet Explaining New U. S. Retirement Act

By Jerry Kluttz

The third installment of the eagerly sought Civil Service booklet that explains the new Langer-Chavez-Stevenson Retirement Act is presented today by The Washington Post. The fourth and final chapter will appear tomorrow.

The Civil Service Commission has been unable to meet the tremendous demand for its easy-reading booklet. It will get its full supply of 50,000 copies late this week. Requests for about half a million copies have been received—more than 16,000 to this writer alone.

This newspaper is publishing the text of the booklet in full as a service to Federal workers who may be disappointed in their search for a copy.

The booklet was written by Lyman L. Woodman, a staff writer of the Civil Service Commission information division, with help of Warren Irons, chief of the Civil Service Retirement Division.

We suggest that this and other installments be clipped by Federal workers and be used as a reference on their retirement problems.

So, on to Option 2 of these new survivorship benefits. This plan is open only to unmarried employes (men and women) who retired under the age and optional provisions of the law and those who are entitled to a 25-year-service annuity after involuntary separation.

Under Option 2, the retired worker gets a reduced annuity (scaled down according to the following table), and the individual he designates as his survivor gets payments amounting to 50 per cent of the reduced annuity which the former employe was getting. Payments to the named survivor will continue from the time the former employe dies until the survivor dies.

OPTION 2—JOINT and SURVIVORSHIP

SURVIVOR-ANNUITANT	Per cent of fullrate payable to retiring employe	Per cent of fullrate payable to survivor—annuitant
Older, or within 5 years of retiree's age	90%	½ of 90% rate
5, but less than 10 years younger	85%	½ of 85% rate
10, but less than 15 years younger	80%	½ of 80% rate
15, but less than 20 years younger	75%	½ of 75% rate
20, but less than 25 years younger	70%	½ of 70% rate
25 or more years younger	60%	½ of 60% rate

If it so happens that the named survivor under this Option 2 is also qualified to receive an annuity through the benefits accorded him as a child of the deceased annuitant, that survivor will be paid the amount coming to him under the Option 2 arrangement, and the other payments will be discontinued, or vice versa; both annuities cannot be paid.

Conditions of Option 2

There are two requirements to be met under this plan: (a) The retiree must be in good health—as evidenced by a physical examination taken when he retires—and (b) the named survivor must have an "insurable interest" in the retired person. Anyone who would suffer a financial loss in the event of the retired employe's death could be considered as having an "insurable interest" in the former employe. Dependent relatives would qualify, of course.

There are about 1,128,000 men among our members of the Civil Service Retirement System. It has been estimated that around 850,000 of these men are married. From this hasty figuring we may deduce that we have a great many people in our midst who are—or soon will be—deeply interested in the new widows' and children's benefits that have been established under the new retirement law.

Under the old law, the widow of a deceased retired employe could receive an annuity only if her husband had named her as his survivor-annuitant when he retired. She had no annuity protection at all if her husband died while he was still employed. The same was true of a surviving child of an employe. The benefits under the Langer-Chavez-Stevenson Act protects the widows and the children of both active employes and annuitants.

Eligibility For Benefits

Before going into these new benefits specifically, it should be explained that for these purposes the widow must have been married to the worker or annuitant for at least two years before his death, or be the mother of his child born during the marriage. A child, to be eligible for the new benefits, must be unmarried and under the age of 18 or, if over 18, incapable of self-support because of physical or mental disability. No benefits are payable unless the employe has completed at least five years of civilian service at the time of his death.

First, let us take the case of the man who dies while in active service. The man, in our example, leaves his widow, but no children who could qualify for annuity benefits. His widow will receive an annuity when she reaches the age of 50, or, if she is already past 50 at the time of the employe's death, she gets the annuity immediately. It will be paid to her until she dies or remarries.

In the case of a deceased employe who leaves a widow and a child, if the child is entitled to an annuity, so also is the widow entitled to an immediate annuity. The one benefit brings the other, so to speak, and the widow's age is immaterial. The widow will get monthly checks (based on the existence of the child) until she dies, remarries, or reaches age 50. This isn't the end, however, for if the widow hasn't remarried, she will be entitled to get the regular widow's annuity commencing at age 50, as outlined above. In this way, the payments will be continuous in some cases.

In both instances, the amount paid to the widow will be 50 per cent of the annuity the husband had earned by the time he died. If the husband had made voluntary contributions to the fund to purchase additional annuity for himself, the exact amount of his contributions (with interest) will go to his beneficiary or to his estate.

Employe's Surviving Children

Now for the children's annuities. If the father dies while in active service and leaves both a widow and children, each child will receive an immediate annuity. This annuity will be one of the following, whichever is the least: (1) 25 per cent of the amount which would have been due the father; (2) $360; or (3) the amount obtained by dividing $900 by the number of surviving children.

Harris & Ewing

WILLIAM LANGER, chairman of the Senate Civil Service Committee, sponsored the first major bill to overhaul the Civil Service Retirement System more than a year ago. Most of the objectives he sought at that time were incorporated in the Langer-Chavez-Stevenson Act which recently was signed into law

If, however, the father dies as a widower, or the mother dies as a widow, then each surviving child will receive an immediate annuity amounting to one of the following, whichever is the least: (1) 50 per cent of the amount which would have been due the parent; (2) $480; or (3) the amount obtained by dividing $1200 by the number of children entitled to annuities.

We have discussed the special annuity benefits to the widows and children of persons who die while in active service; now let us take up the benefits to the survivors of the employes retiring after this law becomes effective. The following comments apply to all such annuitants (including those involuntarily separated after 25 years) except those receiving discontinued service annuity payments after 5 or more years of employment.

Suppose we consider a retired employe who dies and leaves a widow but no children who qualify for annuity benefits. His widow will get an annuity beginning at her age 50 if he provided one for her when he retired by naming her as his survivor-annuitant. That will be the only way this widow can get an annuity based on the Government service performed by her husband.

If the deceased annuitant leaves a widow and one or more children who are entitled to benefits, the widow will be in line (like the widow of the man who died in active service) for a monthly check based on the existence of the offspring; she gets this benefit until she dies, remarries, or reaches age 50. This widow's annuity will be equal to 50 per cent of her husband's basic annuity (excluding any portion thereof purchased by voluntary contributions).

Annuitant's Surviving Children

We've been talking about the annuity checks which are drawn in the widow's favor; now we shall discuss the benefits payable to the surving children of annuitants.

When the annuitant is survived by both his widow and a child (or children), the child who qualifies for such benefit with respect to age and dependency will receive an immediate annuity consisting of one of the following, whichever is the least: (1) 50 per cent of the annuity payable to the widow; (2) $360; or (3) the amount obtained by dividing $900 by the number of children involved.

When an annuitant dies as a widow or widower (the other spouse being deceased), each surviving child gets payments immediately. Each child will be entitled to one of the following, whichever is the least: (1) 50 per cent of the basic annuity the deceased person was entitled to; (2) $480, or (3) the amount obtained by dividing $1200 by the number of children involved.

All payments to children are made to their legal guardians (if any have been appointed), or to the widows or other persons having the care and custody of the children.

Termination and Recomputation of Benefits

Children's benefits terminate when the children reach age 18 (unless physically or mentally incapable of self-support), marry, or die. In cases in which several individuals (children, or widow-and-child combinations) are receiving survivor benefits, when the benfits to any one of the children ceases or the widow dies, the payments to the remaining children are recomputed on the basis of the new number of survivors involved.

When an employe member of the retirement system dies there will be money in the fund to his credit. Whether it can be paid right away to the beneficiary he has named (or to his estate) depends on whether he leaves a surviving widow or children entitled to immediate or future annuity payments.

The fourth and final installment will appear tomorrow.

Area News in Brief

Besieging Admiral Gets Seaman in Bad

Unlike the Garcia of a past war, Albert Garcia of Baltimore is a man who believes in getting his own messages.

And so when things didn't move fast enough in his efforts to get his merchant seaman's papers reinstated after revocation, he parked outside the office of Admiral J. F. Farley, Coast Guard commander, here. He wanted a personal and immediate answer to a letter he had written Farley, although the admiral's office was about to close.

When verbal efforts of building guards failed to move him, Garcia was placed under arrest.

In Municipal Court yesterday, after Defense Counsel Harry Ahern pleaded that Garcia was confused about closing time, Judge Thomas D. Quinn suspended imposition of sentence on disorderly charges.

Tainted Food Destroyed

Green leafy vegetables topped the list of 3721 pounds of foodstuffs condemned and ordered destroyed last week by Health Department inspectors. Dr. R. R. Ashworth, director of the Bureau of Food Inspection, said 1752 establishments were inspected and five offenders fined $130 in Municipal Court.

Auto Tags at 4-a-Minute

Apply for new auto tags by mail if you don't like waiting in queues.

That's the advice of Herman S. Cole, administrative officer of the District Department of Vehicles and Traffic. Owners merely seeking 1948 tags to replace last year's District plates can be accommodated at the rate of four a minute, said Cole.

Accused of Stealing Coat

Emmett Wiggs was charged with grand larceny yesterday because an alert taxi driver didn't think a woman's fur coat was becoming to him.

Wiggs, 60, of 1315 12th st. nw., was arrested when police found the coat in his room, they reported.

Taxi driver Wilber T. Cooke, 1602 Isherwood st. ne., said he picked up Wiggs at a downtown restaurant with the coat over his arm.

Cooke deposited his fare at the 12th st. address, then hailed another taxi with two-way radio and asked the driver to report to police.

The coat was owned by Mrs. Marjorie Maurer, 5101 Alabama ave. se., who valued it at $200.

Speed for the Sober

He can't run at all, Municipal Court Judge Ellen K. Raedy held yesterday in dismissing drunk charges against Robert O. Hembry, 22, of 2257 12th st. nw. She acted after hearing testimony that Hembry had swiftly scampered from Police Pvt. W. A. Johnson for half a block until the latter caught up. Because of Hembry's speed, he was adjudged sober.

A second charge—destroying private property—was also dismissed when the owner of a building housing a food bar failed to appear. Hembry was charged with smashing the window of the establishment.

Newsmen Pick Coffman

John W. Coffman, jr., editor and publisher of the Takoma Journal, has been reelected president of the Montgomery County Press Association to succeed Phillip J. Austensen of The Washington Post.

Other officers elected at the annual meeting, held at Stone House Inn, Four Corners, Md., last week, are Helen M. Cooper, Maryland News, vice president; Garrett Waters, Takoma Journal, reelected treasurer; Mrs. Mary Crowley, recording secretary; Mrs. Mary Kanagy, Maryland News, corresponding secretary; Blair Lee 3d, Maryland News; Joseph M. Mathias, Bethesda-Chevy Chase Tribune; Joseph Brechner, WGAY, and Austensen, members of the executive board.

Foreign Oil Ban Seen in Romania's New Constitution

Bucharest, Romania, March 6 (AP).—A new Romanian constitution providing for state ownership of natural resources will be submitted to the National Assembly April 6.

Some observers felt it would end American and British operations in Romanian oil fields. The constitution envisions compensation for expropriated public utilities.

After the assembly passes the constitution, it will cease to be an extraordinary assembly and continue four years as an ordinary assembly.

The constitution grants political refuge to foreigners fleeing persecution for "democratic activities." It proclaims liberties of language, religion, teaching, speech and writing, except to Fascist type organizations. Schools belonging to churches are banned.

Alexandrian Held in Theft Of Taxicab

Two hours after an attempted holdup and auto theft yesterday in nearby Fairfax County, the County police arrested an Alexandria man and charged him with the crimes.

According to Fairfax police, Rufus S. Sawyer, 26, 408 King st., Alexandria, and a woman companion hired a cab in Alexandria shortly after 11 p. m. Friday night and directed the driver to take them out the Franconia rd. about four miles beyond Alexandria. There, police said, Sawyer tried to enter a store but found it closed.

Then, according to the police, Sawyer saw a man entering a nearby automobile and assumed him to be the store owner leaving for the night.

Police said Sawyer then "faked" a gun in his pocket with his right hand and asked the car driver, William Dodson, of Franconia, for his money. When Dodson ran from the car, Sawyer returned to the cab driver, Gaylord A. Montgomery, of near 10 5th st. ne., fled also.

According to police, Sawyer then set out for Alexandria in the cab which he later abandoned. Acting on a description given by the cab driver, Fairfax Policemen J. J. Howard and Herbert Marcey arrested Sawyer on King st., two blocks from the Alexandria police station about 1:30 a. m. yesterday.

His companion, Mrs. Edith R. Pearson, 24 of 124 N. Royal st., Alexandria, was held by Fairfax police for investigation.

'Walking Man' Contest Winner Receives $22,500

Hollywood, March 6 (AP).—Mrs. Florence Hubbard, a Chicago, Ill., widow, tonight identified Jack Benny as "the walking man" and won prizes worth $22,500.

Mrs. Hubbard, saleswoman in a Chicago department store, was the first person telephoned by Ralph Edwards of the NBC "Truth and Consequences" show.

Edwards explained that Benny was the "walking man" because:

"He won't spend the money for cab fare."

Informed the contest was over, Benny exclaimed, "Thank goodness—my feet are killing me."

The 10-week contest raised an estimated $1,500,000 for the American Heart Association.

The winner received: A home laundry, $1000 diamond and ruby watch, four-door Cadillac sedan, gas range, 16 mm. motion picture sound outfit with a movie each month for one year; two-week vacation for two at Sun Valley, Idaho; a $1000 diamond ring, vacuum cleaner, combination phonograph, radio and television set, refrigerator, venetian blinds, paint for both inside and outside of a house, complete woman's wardrobe for every season, home freezer filled with food, airplane, tile installed in a bathroom and kitchen, dining room and two bedrooms filled with furniture, $2400 house trailer, typewriter, 14-foot boat, $1000 fur coat, two-year supply of sheets and pillowcases, $500 worth of home appliances, piano, electric blankets, three men's suits and a sewing machine.

Gen. Uzal Ent, Ploesti Raid Leader, Dies

Denver, March 6 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Uzal G. Ent, 47, leader of the United States bombing raid on the Ploesti oil fields and noted aviation planner, died last night at Fitzsimons General Hospital after a long illness.

Ent was commander of the Second Air Force at Colorado Springs when he was retired in 1946 for disability. He was commanding general of the Ninth Bomber Command of the Ninth Air Force which raided the Romanian old fields in the summer of 1943.

He started as a private in the First World War. He was appointed from the regular army to West Point, and he rose rapidly. He was United States Military Attache at Lima, Peru, in 1941 and served as senior military observer in the mediation of the Peruvian-Ecuadorian boundary dispute.

He is survived by his wife, Eleanor; a son, Girard, 13; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Ent of Northumberland, Pa., and a brother, William A. Ent of Mechanicsburg, Pa.

William Ent said his brother had asked that his body be cremated and the ashes strewn over the Pennsylvania mountains near Northumberland.

Ent's illness developed from injuries in 1944 when a propeller shattered and struck him in the back over Fort Worth, Tex.

His paralysis resulted in his interest and improvement of facilities for paraplegics.

Store Saves Autoists Many Parking Fines

Bethesda, Md., the town with the Biblical name meaning "house of mercy," has its own good Samaritans.

Motorists whose time on a parking meter there has run out are saved from the clutches of the law by employes of Carbert's Jewelry Store, 7337 Wisconsin ave. Whenever one of them sees a red flag in the meter, he drops a nickel in the slot, places a small card on the windshield and travels on.

The driver who comes back to his car expecting a summons from the police finds instead this courteous note:

"Your time was up. The meter showed red. It was our privilege to save you a fine by putting a nickel in the meter."

The card is signed with Carbert's name, and contains additional advertising, including the words, "Carbert's takes pride in the service they render."

Behind the scheme are Carl Bachschmid and Robert Mitchell, owners of the store. Bachschmid read about the plan in a trade paper and decided to try it out in Bethesda.

Carbert employes have been good Samaritans for about five months and have used about $45 in nickels in the process. The good deed pays off in good will, acording to Bachschmid.

Many potential ticket-holders have come into the shop to thank the owners and repay their debt. The management doesn't accept the money; all it wants is appreciation. One man who came in to thank him walked out with a wedding ring, so "we got our nickel back," Bachschmid related.

Ruth Van Deman Dies at 59; Famed Expert on Nutrition

Miss Ruth Van Deman, 59, whose advice on home economics and nutrition made her nationally known, died of cancer yesterday at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore.

Born in Kansas, Miss Van Deman attended Washington Schools, graduating from Central High School. Later she received degrees from Smith College and Columbia University.

Since 1923, when it was established, Miss Van Deman headed the information division of the Agriculture Department's Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics. She lived at 3502 30th st. nw.

A collection of recipes prepared by Miss Van Deman was published by the bureau in 1931. More than a million copies have been sent out in answer to requests.

During a 14-year period, 96 radio stations carried Miss Van Deman's weekly broadcasts.

Miss Van Deman left no close relatives. Her father, the late Henry E. Van Deman, once was a member of the scientific staff of the Agriculture Department.

Miss Van Deman was a past president of the Women's National Club, a member of the American Home Economics Association, the American Association of University Women and other organizations.

Memorial services will be held at All Souls Unitarian Church, 16th and Harvard sts., nw., March 20 at 4 p. m.

Cremation and interment will take place at Jaffrey, N. H. Miss Van Deman had requested that in place of flowers, her friends send contributions for overseas food relief.

Real Estate Bond Average Off in Month

By S. Oliver Goodman

Real estate bonds turned lower in February for the first interruption of a rise which had been continuous for six months.

The Amott-Baker price average covering 200 representative issues, including four Washington real estate securities, closed February at $782 per $1000 bond, a decrease of 0.6 per cent.

February dip, in addition to wiping out all of the January gain, brought the average to 1 point below the $783 level prevailing at the end of 1947.

Hotel and apartment hotel bonds last month receded 0.9 per cent and 0.7 per cent, respectively. Office building issues lost 0.2 per cent. Contrary to the trend, gains of 0.4 per cent and 1.3 per cent were registered by 26 apartment building bonds and a group of 14 miscellaneous type securities. There was no change in the month for nine theater building issues.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: R. Edwin Joyce, native of Washington and Georgetown University graduate, is new president of the Distilled Spirits Institute. He also is vice president of the National Distillers Products Corp. . . . Alex Husid has been named Washington sales representative of Park & Tilford . . . James W. McConnell appointed assistant advertising manager of Hiram Walker, Inc. . . . William C. Taylor chosen director of Sun Oil Co.'s foreign department . . . Henry W. Schmidt named secretary-treasurer and James J. Upson as assistant to the president of Upson Co.

DEDICATION: More than 500 Government, banking and business officials have been invited to attend dedication ceremonies of the Shirlington Trust Co. tomorrow night in nearby Arlington County. The rites will start at 8 o'clock in the bank's new building next to the theater in Shirlington Business Center. Following the dedication, a reception will be held in a nearby motor salon. The new bank, headed by Joseph Cherner, is incorporated under the laws of Virginia, with capital assets of $300,000.

ODD LOTS: Due to a Philadelphia job printing plant strike, the trade publication Iron Age, which normally is a fat 200 pages, came out yesterday with a slim 8-page issue . . . Smash between the brokerage houses of W. B. Hibbs & Co. and Auchincloss, Parker & Redpath on 15th st. will be a new movie house retreat for weary investors . . . Through an exchange of stock the Strouss-Hirschberg Co., department store in Youngstown, Ohio, will be merged with the May Department Stores Co. . . . Photographic plates so flexible they may be bent into a section of a sphere without breaking were announced by Eastman Kodak research laboratories . . . Directors of Continental Bank & Trust Co. of New York have set April 12 for a special stockholders meeting to vote on transfer of assets to Chemical Bank & Trust.

FINANCING: The utility industry is in the middle of a six-billion-dollar four-year expansion program, and this is how it plans to finance it. Albert S. Tegen, president of General Public Utilities Corp., tells the National Federation of Financial Analysts Societies: Eight per cent will come from industries resources, 35 per cent from "non-cash items in the income statement," 35 per cent from the sale of bonds, 12 per cent from the sale of preferred stock and 10 per cent from additional stockholders.

SLOWDOWN SEEN: The current pace of construction probably will not last through 1948, Thomas S. Holden said. Holden, president of F. W. Dodge Corp., fact-finding organization for the construction industry, said he expected that letting of contracts would slow down either in the second quarter or a little later. "In spite of all the hullabaloo about housing," Holden continued, "the American family of average income is better housed, in better neighborhoods and with more comforts and conveniences than is its counterpart in any other country. The rest of the world knows this, even if our own politicians do not . . . I would say that a moderate tightening of lending terms and conditions is preferable to further inflation of housing demand at this time."

Views in Auto Industry Vary Over Continued High Demand

Detroit, March 6 (AP).—What a 5,500,000 vehicle output this year may do to the auto industry's market is arousing considerable speculation in trade quarters.

The discussion warms up as demand appears to be softening for the higher-medium and top-priced vehicles.

There is no question anywhere in industry circles that the factories this year will turn out more cars and trucks than in any previous like period. There is a difference of opinion, however, as to whether the industry can make five and one-half million vehicles this year and go through 1949 at the same level.

Many industry optimists say the demand accumulating during nearly four years of war still is so far from satisfied it will take several more years of top output to fill it.

Resistance to Premium Prices.

Others say the last few months has brought increasing resistance to premium prices for new cars whether offered by individuals or used car dealers. This is especially evident in the medium and high price car field. Most units in the Chevrolet, Ford and Plymouth field continue to command high prices.

These leading producers in their field reportedly have orders on hand for more than 2,500,000 cars, or about half the estimated total bank of unfilled orders.

Some car makers in the medium price bracket have said they do not look for "quick deliveries" until 1952 or later. Few of the industry analysts agree with this view right now; some see the medium and higher priced car manufacturers in keenest competition by this time next year.

It is significant in this connection that despite their optimistic forecasts all manufacturers are actively urging their dealers to prepare for the return of the buyer's market. Many have sent their sales chiefs into the field to help in the training of car salesmen.

Nevertheless they insist the production of 4,500,000 cars and one million or more trucks this year will not have an adverse effect on their market. "Perhaps we'll have to get out and sell cars, but we've done that before and we're all quite eager to do it again," said one industry representative this week.

So much has been said about the return of the day when a buyer will be able to get the car he wants when he wants it that it has come to be regarded as an era of evil import to the industry.

But nothing could be more inaccurate. The industry may not be able to go through two years of record output volume, but production will not stop or be cut in half when supply matches demand.

When peacetime car production was resumed July 1, 1945, estimates of the backlog of orders ranged upward from 12 million. As sales managers of the various car manufacturers began canvassing their dealers the estimates started to dwindle. By the time duplications were taken into account they got down to around six million.

At January 1 this year the figure generally accepted was five million.

Kaiser-Frazer Names F. R. Cooper Sales Chief

Detroit March 6 (AP).—Appointment of Fred R. Cooper as vice president in charge of sales for Kaiser-Frazer Corp. was announced at the company offices today.

Cooper succeeds W. A. MacDonald, who continues as a director of the corporation and a member of the executive staff.

Cooper has been engaged in sales activities of various motorcar makers for 24 years. He has been with Kaiser-Frazer as director of sales since formation of the company.

Gray to Address Fraternity Diners On Founders Day

Veterans Administrator Carl Gray is scheduled to speak at the ninety-second Founders Day dinner of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity Tuesday night in the National Press Club auditorium.

Gray was honorary eminent supreme archon of the fraternity in 1946. More than 300 alumni and members of the Washington city Rho chapter at George Washington University are expected to attend the dinner, at which five Washingtonians who have been members of the fraternity for 50 years will be honor guests.

Among those invited to attend are Senators Richard B. Russell of Georgia and Zales N. Ecton of Montana, RFC Chairman John Goodloe, Brig. Gen. Albert Cox, Philip L. Graham, publisher of The Washington Post, and Maryland University President H. C. Byrd.

Gravediggers Strike Over Pay

San Francisco, March 6 (AP).—Gravediggers and other employes in 10 cemeteries serving San Francisco and peninsula points went on strike today. The AFL Cemetery Employes Union voted 173 to 8 to strike.

The workers want $12.25 a day. They get $11.25 now and turned down an employer offer of $11.75.

San Francisco health authorities said the strike would not create a "health problem" for several weeks. There are 35 to 40 funerals a day in the cemeteries involved.

N. J. Standard Orders Two 16-Knot Tankers

New York, March 6 (AP).—Standard Oil (New Jersey) has ordered two tankers with a capacity of 228,000 barrels each from the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. of Newport News, Va.

Delivery is scheduled during the latter half of 1949.

The two ships will have a capacity about 10 per cent greater than the wartime type T-2 tankers.

Details of the two new ships follow: Normal complement, 50 men; service speed, 16 knots; deadweight, 26,000 tons; over-all length, 628 feet; 600 feet between perpendiculars; 82 feet 6 inches of moulded beam; 42 feet 6 inches of moulded depth to the upper deck, and 21 feet 6 inches draft.

Coca-Cola International Pays $7.50 on Common

Wilmington, Del., March 6 (AP). Directors of Coca-Cola International Corp. today declared a dividend of $7.50 a share on the common stock, payable April 1 to stock of record March 17. The company last year paid $5.60 each in the first three quarters and $20.65 a share in December.

Kreutz Lauds Inflation Control By Savings Units

Savings and loan associations are in the forefront of the fight on inflation, says Oscar R. Kreutz, executive manager of the National Savings and Loan League, whose headquarters are in Washington, in a special bulletin to member institutions of his organization. His report says:

"It is inspiring to those of us in Washington, at the nerve center of world economy, to receive so much proof from various sections of the country that the savings and loan business has been and still is a potent leader in the battle against inflation.

"One of the first indications that loan applications were being considered with unusual caution was a burst of complaints from some builders in different parts of the country that credit had ceased to be as easy as it was.

"This is a most commendable situation and deserves the praise of every one of our Federal authorities from the President and Congress on down."

Incorporations Totaled 11,000 During January

There were 11,000 stock companies incorporated in the United States during January, 1948, according to the latest compilation by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. This represented an increase of 874, or 8.6 per cent, from the December figure of 10,126 and was the highest total for any month since January, 1947, when 12,112 new businesses were incorporated.

The January 1948 figure was 9.2 per cent below the January, 1947, total, and 15.4 per cent below the record-breaking high of 13,006 in January, 1946.

Nearly one half of the 11,000 January charterings were concentrated in the five States of California, Illinois, New Jersey, New York and Ohio. New York had 2,747 incorporations, the highest number for any individual State; California was second with 840 and Illinois was third with 629; in fourth and fifth positions were Ohio and New Jersey with 504 and 415 respectively.

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

Climate's Different for Third Round

That third round of wage increases is not going to come easy for Walter Reuther, Philip Murray or John L. Lewis.

That came out between the lines at the hearings before the Senate-House Joint Economic Committee on the recent steel price rise.

Livingston

Senator Taft kept asking Benjamin Fairless, president of U. S. Steel, if the price increase wasn't just what Phil Murray needed as an argument for getting a wage boost. Fairless didn't see how there was any connection. He argued that the price rise was too modest to have any effect.

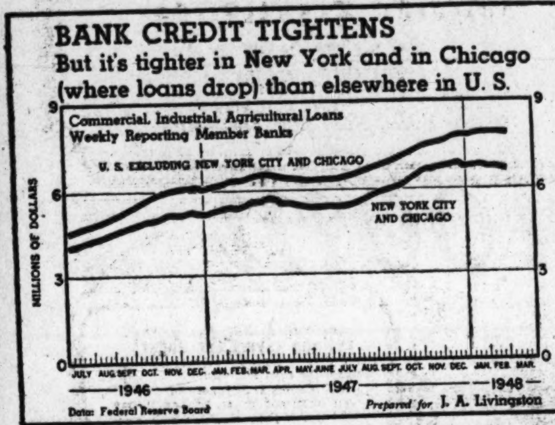
Then Senator Tobey (R., N. H.) wanted to know if workers wouldn't look upon U. S. Steel's 127-million-dollar earnings in 1947 as cause for a wage boost, considering that those profits were the highest since '29. "If you were a worker and you saw the big earnings Ben Fairless was making, wouldn't you want yours?" Tobey demanded.

Fairless replied that he had been a mill worker once and that if he, as a worker, understood all the facts then he'd consider it in the best interest of the company, the country, and the worker not to force costs up some more and start another wage-price spiral.

Fairless, Murray in Same Box

Fairless insisted that a third round of wage boosts is not warranted at this time. He is now semicommitted to holding the wage line as well as the price line. That doesn't mean he won't come through with a boost when the chips are down. But he's forced to drive a hard bargain—especially since Murray can't strike. The U. S. Steel-United Steel Workers' contract provides for wage negotiations on April 1, but if no agreement is reached by April 30 then the contract "shall remain in effect until midnight April 30, 1949."

Fairless has boxed Murray—and himself—in on wages. Because of the hullabaloo over the recent increase in semifinished steel, Fairless can't advance finished steel prices to absorb a wage increase. Indeed, on Thursday, the steel corporation formally advertised that it "has made no general increase in the price of its steel products and does not now contemplate making any such increase."



Fairless' self-imposed squeeze affects Lewis as well as Murray. The leader of the United Mine Workers will not be able to pull the same kind of a deal as last year, when he and Fairless negotiated a 31-cent-an-hour wage boost in mines owned by steel companies. If coal costs go up and Fairless' prices are fixed by his own declaration, then profits will be squeezed. And Fairless is already on record as saying that profits are too low relative to the volume of business done.

Wilson, Grace and Price Too

Fairless is not alone. Charles E. Wilson of General Electric Co. recently indicated he was opposed to a third round of wage increases. Eugene Grace, chairman of the board of Bethlehem Steel, has said that he felt that price decreases were more desirable than wage boosts. Gwilym A. Price, president of Westinghouse, has made comments along the same line. What's more, Westinghouse has just lowered prices of refrigerators 4 to 7 per cent.

The industrial climate is different from this time last year. Then, except for furs, jewelry and soft goods, the problem was to get goods into stores, whereupon they were promptly whisked away by consumers. Such easy-come easy-go business is no more. Department stores now are able to offer immediate delivery of washing machines, refrigerators, vacuum cleaners and similar durable goods. Now even hard goods have to be "sold."

Signs of a Buyer's Market

There are other signs of the wane of the seller's market: Tire production has been cut back, Philco has laid off 500 workers, department store executives are finding it hard to come up to last year's sales, notwithstanding that Easter is a week earlier this year. And Kaiser-Frazer recently cut its production schedule. The official reason: To reduce costs. But it's also possible that automobile buyers are no longer so starved for transportation that they can't wait for their favorite make or model.

Nor are businessmen so anxious to expand plant, to install new equipment. First, they don't see unlimited business ahead. Second, money is not as free and easy as a year ago. The securities markets are not receptive to new issues. Moreover, banks have been getting choosier on loans. Since the first of the year, customers of New York and Chicago banks have paid off loans faster than other customers have borrowed. That means banks are not lending to all comers. In other areas, the rate of credit expansion has slowed down discernibly (see chart).

Business men feel that they must depend on earnings to meet their working capital needs. Yet earnings aren't rising like they used to. A National City Bank of New York compilation reveals that in the last quarter of last year net income of 400 manufacturing companies was only 8 per cent ahead of the corresponding period of 1946, as against 32 per cent in the third quarter, 57 per cent in the second quarter, and 230 per cent in the first quarter.

It all impels corporate conservatism when it comes to negotiating wage increases—as Reuther, Murray, Lewis, et al. are likely to discover. You can add to that one further factor which will tend to limit the third-round wage boost: The rise in the cost of living has started to flatten out.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, March 6 (AP).—Grain prices took a tumble on the Board of Trade with the May wheat contract leading the way. Final quotations were just about at the day's lows.

Failure of the Government to announce acceptance of flour offers was the main reason for the slump, particularly in May wheat. That contract spurted most when the Agriculture Department first called for offers on flour equal to 9,300,000 bushels of wheat this week.

Other contributing factors in the slump were more snow and rain in the Southwest and a weaker tone in the spot markets, where recent high premiums paid for both cash oats and corn were shaved.

Wheat closed ¾ to 5 cents lower, May 2.44½@2.44; corn was 2¾ to 4¾ lower, May 2.24¼@2.24; oats were 1¾ lower to 1 cent higher; the inactive March contract showing the advance. May oats closed at 1.14¾. Soybeans dropped 8 cents, March 3.66.

The Agriculture Department announced acceptance of flour offers would not be made known until after the close Monday. The department said the delay was caused by heavy offerings, confirming trade rumors the department was swamped by mills to get orders to keep their plants going.

Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma got more snow overnight. Parts of Texas received rain. The snowfall in many sections of the winter wheat belt this week has been the heaviest in years.

An official announcement from the international wheat conference at Washington confirmed yesterday's rumors that an agreement had been made on export prices. The maximum was set at 2.00 and the minimum from 1.50 to 1.10, the latter minimum being for 1952.

Hoffman Resigns As Automotive Safety Official

Paul G. Hoffman, president of the Studebaker Corp., has resigned as chairman and treasurer of the Automotive Safety Foundation, it was announced yesterday from the foundation's Washington office, Hill Bldg.

Fraser

Hoffman will be succeeded by Alexander Fraser, president of the Shell Union Oil Corp.

Hoffman had served since creation of the foundation in 1937. The organization grants funds and otherwise assists work in the field of traffic safety. Hoffman, in resigning, declared he had enjoyed his work but "for a long time I have felt that somebody else should take over the job."

Stocks Rise But Volume Remains Small

New York, March 6 (AP).—The stock market today finished another one of the slow weeks of the past several years, with modest recoveries predominating in most departments.

Aircrafts came to life in the short proceedings on revived hopes for big Government orders. Amusements again were buoyed by the possibility the British film tax might be compromised.

Steels did virtually nothing. Motors, rails, oils, mail orders and rubbers held to a slim groove throughout the two-hour stretch.

As during the week, some professional short covering and other buying were attributed to the belief any turn for the better in the news would bring a good rally. Selling from Monday on was attributed partly to persistent bearishness over the international picture, business, wages and taxes.

WHAT STOCKS DID	Sat.	Fri.
Advances	347	349
Declines	104	318
Unchanged	171	235
Total issues	622	902

The Associated Press 60-stock composite was up .2 of a point at 61.6 and on the week showed a net gain of .6 of a point, widest comeback since the final week of January. It was one of the usual narrow Saturday markets.

Volume for the final session of 320,000 shares compared with 350,000 last Saturday. The week's aggregate of 3,826,825 shares was the smallest six-day figure since the period concluded February 21, which, in turn, was a bottom since last May 10.

On the day Coca-Cola added a point at 165 on only a few sales in response to a lifted dividend and earnings. Ahead major fractions to a point or so were Boeing at 26⅜, Douglas Aircraft 57½, United Aircraft 26⅞, Grumman 38, Paramount Pictures 19⅞, Loew's 17½, Twentieth Century-Fox 21⅜, Bendix 20½, Union Carbide 99 and Schenley 26½. Elsewhere variations mostly were in small amounts.

The day's bond division was relatively steady.

New York Cotton

New York, March 6 (AP).—Cotton futures, following a steady to firm start, turned reactionary and closed 25 cents a bale lower to 5 cents higher today. Volume was the smallest in many weeks as most dealers were inclined to await fresh developments.

The decline was generally attributed to commission house realizing sales for over the weekend, although to some extent an easier undertone in grains contributed to the sell off in cotton.

Earlier in the session dealers reported the carryover of buying from Friday's session was stimulated by prospects for increased exports during the current season. It was expected that exports of cotton to Japan would increase in the near future. These exports combined with shipments to Europe, according to dealers, would tighten the nearby statistical supply position. In addition, traders also pointed to inclement weather in most sections of the Cotton Belt which interfered with preparations for the new crop.

The range follows:

March	34.43	34.44	34.25	34.34	—1
May	34.50	34.55	34.37	34.44	—2-3

Pullman Rate Increase To Total $3,700,000

Chicago, March 6 (AP).—Pullman Co. officials estimated today that increased charges on room and seat accommodations sought in a petition before the Interstate Commerce Commission would increase the company's revenue about $3,700,000 annually.

The proposed increase would apply to sleeping compartments and drawing rooms. It would not apply to roomettes, duplex roomettes, duplex single rooms or berths.

C. R. Harding, Pullman president, said the increase was necessitated by a 12½-cent hourly raise obtained by employes last fall.

Bank Auditors To Meet Thursday

The auditors' section of the District of Columbia Bankers Association will hold its regular meeting at the Burlington Hotel Thursday at 6:15 p. m., Mrs. Margaret S. McClure, chairman, announced yesterday.

John J. Driscoll, CPA, will speak on "Department Profits in Banking."

Year-Old Truman Doctrine Holding Its Own Despite Guerillas

By Sigrid Arne
Associated Press Feature Writer

THE Truman Doctrine, which threw American millions into Greece and Turkey to fight communism, is nearing its first birthday with its major aim accomplished: both nations are still independent and non-Communist.

It was last March 12 when President Truman asked Congress for 300 million dollars for Greece and 100 million dollars for Turkey. His speech was immediately recognized as a declaration of war on communism wherever it appeared outside Soviet borders.

The President himself recognized the moment's solemnity by saying slowly: "This is a serious course upon which we embark. I would not recommend it except that the alternative is much more serious."

How serious the course was became clear in June, when Secretary of State Marshall told a Harvard commencement audience that this Nation was thinking of aid for the general recovery of Europe. Talk of American aid for a war-wrecked world changed from millions to billions and from one year of aid to four years.

Communist reaction was slow. But in July, when western Europe met at Paris to write its part of the Marshall Plan, the Soviets and their satellites refused to cooperate. The gauntlet was down.

The Truman Doctrine, starting in Greece and Turkey, had followed its own bitter logic into a global policy.

Stalled by Guerillas

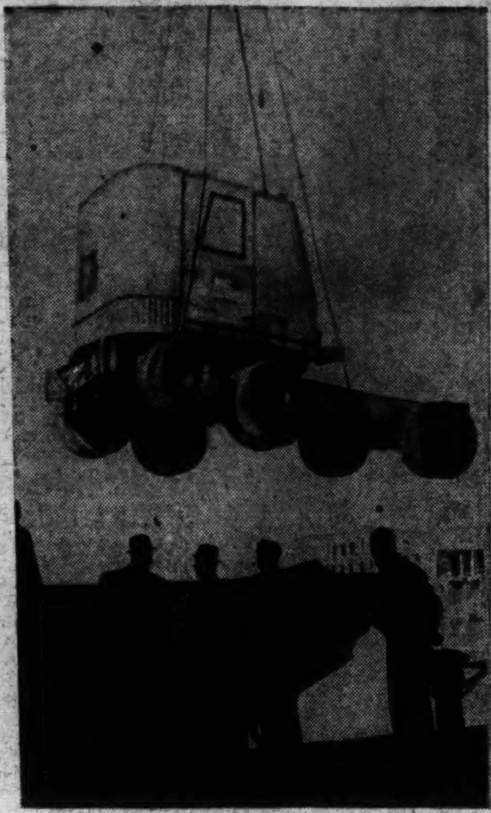
WESTERN EUROPE still waits for the Marshall billions to needle its recovery. But American goods have been flowing into Greece and Turkey to such an extent that the effect of the American decision to stem communism can be evaluated.

Greece's problems have been difficult, Turkey's more simple, both need more aid.

State Department experts talk of the Greek program this way:

Through a year of guerilla warfare against Communists, the nation has kept its government. But the civil war has slowed down recovery so much that now it appears the nation's economic recovery must wait until the guerillas have been stopped.

Originally the American mission in Greece thought the 300 million dollars should be split equally between the Greek military and the economic recovery program. Now 14 million dollars has been shifted to the army.



The end photos are visual evidence of United States assistance to Greece voted on March 12, 1947. Above, an American 60-ton crane is unloaded at the port of Salonika

The extra money for the army will permit 58 new "defense battalions," which will be used to protect individual towns in the guerilla area. That will free the army for a direct chase of the guerilla bands, which number about 20,000. The Greek army is being raised to 132,000.

Clicked at Konitsa

IT TOOK months to get supplies to the Greeks. But they paid off in late December when the outnumbered Greek army force at Konitsa defeated the guerillas.

The small Greek navy (repaired and increased by American aid) is breaking up the guerilla system of using fishing vessels to shift men and supplies along the coast. The small Greek air force (only 1000 men) is proving a big help.

The war and last year's drought have been the worst troubles in putting Greek life to rights. The war has driven 420,000 refugees into towns, to be fed by the government. And the drought forced Greece to use more of its American dollars to import food.

But the American mission reports progress.

The Greek government, on American advice, has cut down expenses and raised taxes so it has a "reasonably balanced" 1949 budget. It is limiting imports to basic needs, and it is pushing exports.

Here are some of the steps taken to clean up Greek finances:

Some 15,000 needless government workers were fired. Bank credit has been tightened. Greek ship owners hauling any American supplies have to turn in 40 per cent of their profits for Greek money. The foreign exchange they earn goes to the government. As a result, the government has collected a quarter of a million American dollars.

Greek taxes used to be collected and spent by local treasuries. Now, with American aid, the Greeks are setting up a central budget.

Industrial production has reached 75 per cent of prewar. Ten per cent of the road repairs are done. The Corinth Canal will be reopened this month, saving 200 miles for coastwise shipping. Harbors and airports are being cleared. Some are in use. A good wheat crop is expected.

The Greeks have drained 35,000 acres of farm land. Airplanes are spraying DDT to kill off malaria and crop pests.

Turks Used Surplus

IN TURKEY the problem was simpler, because the nation had not been invaded. However, it needed help for its army. The expense threatened to wreck the country.

Planning for Turkey took time. Both the American advisers and the Turkish government hunted through Allied war stocks to get the most for their money. Much was found among lend-lease supplies held by the British and much in our own war surpluses in Europe.

Deliveries will reach capacity this month and be finished in June. Ports are cleared and unloading crews organized.

Public roads are being conditioned. American advisers are working with the Turkish military, and some Turkish officers are being trained here.

The Administration says both countries need more military aid, in addition to the economic assistance they will get under the Marshall Plan. It has asked Congress for an additional 200 million dollars for military aid to Greece and 75 million dollars for Turkey.

Testifying on this request last week before the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Secretary Marshall and Defense Secretary Forrestal said there was "grave danger" that neither country can remain free unless they get the help. Marshall said guerilla activity has increased in Greece in the last week or two.

Tommies Land, Guatemalans 'Demand' War

Sabers Rattle Over a Jungle Road

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

A QUARREL over an unbuilt road which was promised 89 years ago, has brought the stamp of military boots and the cries of jingoes right under Uncle Sam's whiskers in the Caribbean.

British troops have landed from two cruisers in the British Honduras harbor of Belize, just below the Yucatan Peninsula of Mexico. They came to protect the colony from invasion.

Guatemala has ordered troops to the border after a revival of old claims that the colony was wrongfully taken from her

Thus far the quarrel has only reached the "show of force" stage.

In the wake of the eruption, Guatemala's liberal President faces a realignment of political support, with conservatives gaining the upper hand. Many of these conservatives were former supporters of Gen. Jorge Ubico, the dictator who was kicked out in 1944 after 13 years of rule by personal whim.

Salve for Patriots

BRITISH mass circulation newspapers have played up the incident in bold headlines, reminiscent of old-style imperialism—a sop to the morale of Englishmen who have seen their flag lowered in India, Burma and Palestine.

From it will certainly come a demand by Guatemala, at the Pan American meeting at Bogota this month, that all colonies in the Western Hemisphere be emancipated.

Support is expected from Chile and Argentina, whose claims to British possessions in Antarctica and the Falkland Islands have been countered with more British cruisers.

It may also be a signal for the Caribbean possessions of other nations. The Democratic Party of Curacoa, Dutch West Indies, last week appealed to the United Nations for home rule.

The dispute between Guatemala and Britain stems from a treaty signed in 1859 defining the frontiers of British Honduras. Guatemala insisted upon one article which provides for joint construction of a road or other means of communication from Belize to the capital of Guatemala. The British agreed.

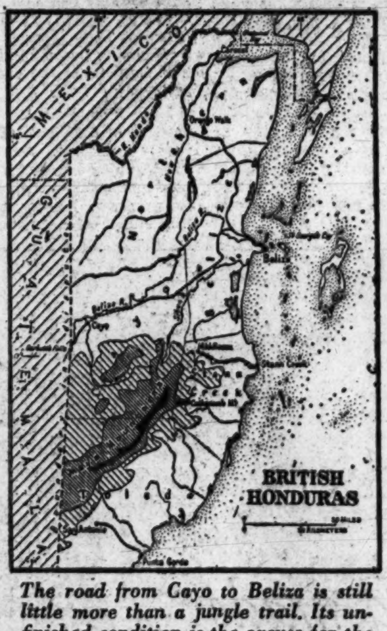
The road would have been difficult to construct. Its route lay through malarial swamps, over rivers and mountains. For various reasons it never was built, although the British at various times offered about $250,000 as their share of the cost. Offers of arbitration have also failed.

Spanish Inheritance

GUATEMALA contends that failure to build the road has voided the 1859 treaty and all British rights to the colony, which originally belonged to Spain. Guatemala claims she inherited it when the Spanish empire dissolved.

Britain has offered to submit the road question to the World Court. Guatemala refused to limit the case to the road only and wants the court to rule on British rights to the colony.

British Honduras was originally settled by buccaneers who found the reef-bound coast an ideal hideout, as did rum runners a few centuries later. Its population of 64,000 in an area the size of Massachusetts is a potpourri of Negro, Indian, descendants of Southern planters who couldn't stomach defeat of the Confederacy, and others. Only about 4 per cent are entirely white.



The road from Cayo to Beliza is still little more than a jungle trail. Its unfinished condition is the excuse for the current argument

The land is fat with mahogany and chicle, the basic ingredient of chewing gum. But Britain says there is no profit in the colony, which is dominated by a single commercial company. At one time during the Versailles Treaty conferences, the British were reported trying to give it to the United States in part payment of war debts.

The Union Jack flying over the colony has been a constant needle to Guatemala, especially for its politicos, who have needed an issue to arouse the populace into a change of government.

There are no economic reasons right now for unrest. Guatemala is more prosperous than ever before. Its coffee is bringing a high price and most of the German "finca" owners were dispossessed during the war.

A Primitive Babel

MORE THAN half its population is Indian. They speak about 18 languages and it was only in 1936 that peonage was abolished. They aren't much interested in politics and still live mainly by tribal customs. Most of the army of 22,000 is Indian. They're tough and loyal.

But politics is a major industry among the remainder of the population.

When General Ubico was exiled in 1944, a triumvirate called upon Dr. Juan Jose Arevalo to become President. He was in Argentina, where he had been a university professor for 20 years. He is a learned liberal.

Last February 21 the rightist newspaper La Hora printed a scathing editorial which ended a moratorium on the quarrel, put into effect by Ubico in 1940 during Britain's darkest hours.

The editorial declared:

"We have an army, we have continental friends. Or is it that our army is only good for military parades? Will not the sword be unsheathed sometime for something useful and glorious?

"Henceforth, will our youth—young men without sacrifices, without heroisms, without anything that dignifies man—be a youth of cabarets, or indecent bars, of sexual vices and nothing more?

"All this because we are not a country but are a tribe of indifferents to whom it is not important that their national territory is being clipped off each day."

'Backed' by Rightists

THE LIBERAL President closed the paper by constitutional decree, because the editor had maligned the powerful army.

The decree was approved by cabinet members of the Rightist Party. Some observers see in this a subtle attempt to embarrass the President.

But, two days later, all parties in Congress joined unanimously in voting down the decree.

On March 1, students rioted in front of the British Legation. President Arevalo saw his political blunder and joined the demand on British Honduras. He broadcast an appeal for all Guatemalans to unite against what he said was a British threat.

One jingoist member of Congress demanded war immediately.

Observers say Col. Francisco Arana, chief of the armed forces, has soured on the liberal tendencies of the Arevalo administration. Business, conservative and Catholic organizations are pressing for removal of Charnaud MacDonald, Minister of Economy and Labor. They say he is an extreme leftist.

Although the crisis developed only 10 days ago, the British appear to have been well forewarned. The British Information Service issued an excellent pamphlet on the situation last October.

All of which leaves the United States facing trouble to the north, east, west and now the south.

A Rash of Claims

LONDON, March 6 (AP).—A rash of foreign claims is plaguing Britain's war-weakened empire, and her world-wide authority has been challenged with renewed strength in recent weeks. Britons mildly call it "twisting the lion's tail," but there is no mistaking the government's serious view of the situation.

Dispatch of a cruiser to Antarctic islands claimed variously by Argentina and Chile and landing of troops in British Honduras, claimed by Guatemala, underlined Britain's stiffened attitudes.

Faced by an economic crisis at home, the government last week announced more cuts in Britain's armed forces. In the next year they will drop more than 200,000—leaving the combined strength of the navy, air force and army at 716,000 men by March 1, 1949.

Within a year Britain has granted independence to Burma and dominion status, with a further choice of complete freedom, to India and Pakistan. Ceylon has become a self-governing member of the British Commonwealth and Britain is leaving Palestine. But the challenge to empire continues.

A Zoological Contretemps

THE STRANGE case of the laughing donkey and the dancing elephant was cleared up last week.

At its darkest it was fitten fodder for Nero Wolfe. At its lightest it was a mistaken identity mystery only the postman could solve.

All the clews, herewith set forth, throw new and hilarious light on the current confusion of party labels.

On February 8, Mr. N. Van Voorhis, partner in a California display advertising agency, wrote the following letter to Senator Robert A. Taft:

"Under separate cover I am sending you one of our newly sculptured GOP elephants. The No. 1 cast that we made is being held for the actual Republican nominee, and from one Ohioan to another we hope it is our pleasure to send the No. 1 to you."

But when Senator Taft opened the package it was not a GOP dancing elephant at all but a happily braying Democratic donkey. Taft accepted it all as good, clean fun and thought that guy, Van Voorhis, was a riot.

Got It Straight?

HIS secretary, Jack Martin, wrote Van Voorhis a dead pan letter acknowledging receipt of "the laughing donkey."

Two weeks later came the following communication from Van Voorhis:

"We are blushing all over California because Senator Taft received the donkey. We are now under separate cover really sending you the Republican elephant caricature.

"Now, to add to your merriment, let us tell you that we sent Senator Taft's elephant to President Truman, who acknowledged the receipt of the Republican elephant and gave

Robert C. Albright is a Virginian who didn't remain in his native Alexandria even long enough to establish voting residence. His parents moved across the river when he was 2, and he is an educational product of the District schools and George Washington University.

He is also an old settler with The Washington Post, having joined the paper as a police reporter in 1926. From 1929 to 1933 he worked for the United Press under the late and great Raymond Clapper, then returned to The Washington Post when it established its national affairs bureau.

At first he covered only the House, but for the past 11 years Bob has handled every possible aspect of the Washington political scene, from subcommittee hearings to the presidential campaign tours of Roosevelt, Landon, Willkie, Dewey and, last fall, the then undeclared candidate, Robert Taft. And he will be standing by this summer after they really choose up sides.

Both Sides 'Like' Martha

Mrs. Taft is at her best with only a "live" audience to think about. A radio microphone cramps her style

By Robert L. Riggs
Washington Correspondent of the Louisville Courier-Journal

THERE is a considerable body of thought among feminine supporters of the New Deal that if the country has to have a Republican President, they would like to see the job go to Senator Robert A. Taft. In such an event, they figure, all Republicans and Roosevelt-haters would be forever barred from further remarks about Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt.

Which leads, of course, to the question, is or is not Martha Bowers Taft another Eleanor Roosevelt?

One interesting thing about that question is that, so far as members of the staff which is engaged in trying to make Taft President are concerned, they'd be most happy to have the country believe that Martha Taft is a duplicate of Eleanor Roosevelt.

For all the outcries which Republicans raised against the wife of Franklin D. Roosevelt, they figure she was good for several million Democratic votes in her husband's last two campaigns. The Taft lieutenants would be delighted to believe that Mrs. Taft could produce even a fraction of that number for her husband. They hope she will.

Evolution of Power

ACTUALLY, while there are many similarities in the part each wife has played in her husband's political career, there also are many differences.

Because of Roosevelt's physical affliction, Mrs. Roosevelt frequently served as his eyes, his ears and his legs. When he wanted an investigation made by someone in whom he had complete confidence, he frequently gave the assignment to Mrs. Roosevelt, particularly in the early days of the New Deal.

From the role of confidential agent, she moved gradually into a sphere all her own, in which she became the originator of projects herself. People who had governmental ideas to promote got into the habit of taking them up first with Mrs. Roosevelt, in order to win her as an advocate before they broached their ideas to the President.

Thus Mrs. Roosevelt emerged as a public personage of importance in her own right.

Occupancy of the White House might change Mrs. Taft similarly. But thus far, Mrs. Taft sticks closely to the role of being a minor member of a team, the team of "Bob and Martha." When she expounds political views, as she often does from the public platform, she makes a great point of saying, "This is what my husband thinks." in her public references to the Senator, he is always "my husband," or he is "Bob Taft."

Danger to Dewey

EVERY married man knows, of course, that while she may be quoting the views of her husband, it is not unlikely that she influenced him in shaping those views while they were being formulated. It is widely accepted among politicians that Senator Taft's determination that, regardless of his own fortunes, the presidential nomination shall not go to Governor Dewey, has grown out of his wife's feelings more than it has grown out of his own.

The wives of politicians are better

The Gallup Poll

Dixie Revolt Nicks Truman

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

THE ANTI-TRUMAN revolt among Southern Democratic leaders shows signs of spreading to the rank and file of Southern Democratic voters.

Although the President is still far in the lead in popularity as the 1948 candidate, his percentage in the South has dropped considerably since late January. Balloting between February 4 and February 29 finds James F. Byrnes of South Carolina, former Secretary of State, and Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia coming up in popularity.

The following table shows how sentiment changed in the South between January and February. It was on February 2 that President Truman announced his civil rights program.

	Jan.	Feb.
Truman	73%	60%
Marshall	12	12
Byrnes	5	10
Byrd	3	9
Others	4	5
No choice	3	4

The "others" include scattered votes for James A. Farley, Senator Claude Pepper of Florida, Agriculture Secretary Anderson and Defense Secretary Forrestal.

Pitting Truman against Republicans, however, the South voted 75 per cent for Truman, 19 per cent for Dewey, 1 per cent for Wallace and 5 per cent "no opinion."

In races involving Truman against Stassen and Wallace, and Truman against Taft and Wallace, the outcome was similarly anti-Republican.

'Ivan' Likes Broadcasts

U. N. Radio Getting Russian Fan Mail

By Francis W. Carpenter
Associated Press Staff Writer

LAKE SUCCESS, March 6.—The United Nations is getting fan mail from Ivan for its broadcasts to Russia.

A listener in Kharkov wrote to the U. N. that he and many of his friends were tuning in regularly on the short wave programs from Lake Success. He and his friends like them.

The broadcasts in Russian are part of the growing radio activities of the U. N. which officials hope eventually will carry its story to every part of the world. A 15-minute U. N. broadcast is put out over 120 United States stations each day.

Besides the five official languages — English, Russian, French, Chinese and Spanish—the U. N. story is being told in Tagalog, for the Philippines; Arabic and Hebrew, for the Middle East and especially Palestine; Dutch, Turkish and Scandinavian languages.

Sets Are Cheap

ON DECEMBER 20, 1947, the Russian who shall be known here only as Ivan wrote his letter to "Mr. Director" of the U. N. radio. The U. N. did not release his name.

"I listen very often to your informational programs, broadcast in Russian on the work of the permanent organs of the United Nations organization," the listener wrote.

"Many of my friends also listen to your broadcasts. By the way, almost everyone in the U. S. S. R. has a chance to do this as, since after the war, our factories are putting out very good and comparatively cheap radios.

"We are very glad that you are presenting the radio listeners with objective material, correctly reflecting the position of the Soviet Union and that of other countries, in the solution of problems confronting the United Nations."

Broadcasts to Russia and other countries in Europe and the Middle East are sent from the U. N. to the powerful Canadian Broadcasting Corp. transmitter at Sackville, where they are put out by short wave. The U. N. hopes soon to set up a relay point in Prague for the Russian broadcast.

Canadian Chief

A RADIO MAN of 15 years' experience, Peter Aylen of Canada, is director of the U. N. radio division. He explained that the U. N. so far has concentrated on covering U. N. news developments.

There are only three regular radio correspondents from other countries stationed at the U. N., in addition to the United States correspondents, Aylen said. They represent the British Broadcasting Corp., the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. and the Australian Broadcasting Corp.

During the last U. N. Assembly the radio division developed a system of guest commentators. It hired on a free lance basis any radio reporter who came to Lake Success from overseas and agreed to translate the U. N. programs into his own language for relay by his home station.

This was done by guest commentators from Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Belgium, the Netherlands, Brazil and the Philippines.

India on Agenda

THE broadcasts in Arabic and Hebrew were set up because of the special situation in the Middle East. The Tagalog talks resulted from a strong Philippines interest in the U. N. The U. N. hopes later to add broadcasts to India and Pakistan.

U. N. broadcasts to Latin American America bring in a large volume of fan mail. During the Security Council sessions last year on the Egyptian case, the U. N. received a good play in Egypt. Now that Palestine has become a trouble spot for the U. N., the radio division is getting letters from Jews and Arabs alike.

21 Americas Hope to Form 'Little U. N.'

By Leslie Highley
Associated Press Staff Writer

THE 21 American republics have decided they must put their house in order if the Western Hemisphere is to be a vital factor in preserving world peace.

To achieve this end a conference has been called at Bogota, Colombia, March 30. Briefly, it is expected to:

1. Boost economic cooperation among the 21 nations. Latin-American countries want to improve the living conditions of their peoples, develop new industries and make the best use of their natural resources with United States help.

2. Reorganize the 58-year-old "Union of the American Republics" as a regional branch of the United Nations.

3. Set up machinery for settling disputes among American nations.

Permanent Councils

UNDER the program to be presented at Bogota, the inter-American system would become the "little United Nations" of the Western Hemisphere. All its activities, including defense of the hemisphere, would be centered in the Pan American Union and its governing board. These activities would be carried out by a permanent defense council, an economic and social council, a juridical council and a cultural council.

Latin-American nations have been setting up new industries since the beginning of the last war. They want to continue this industrial development. But capital and technical know-how are lacking in many of the countries. The United States is the only country in a position to furnish them.

Their desire meets with general approval from the Washington Administration and private capital in the United States. Certain conditions, however, are asked from the Latins.

Probably the most important is that restrictions on freedom of action by foreign enterprises be eliminated. Two examples of these restrictions are:

1. Many countries require that foreign enterprises hire a certain number of local employes.

2. In others there is a trend to nationalize industries by simply taking them over, sometimes without due compensation to owners.

Rein on Capital

THE Latins want to retain their power to restrict the freedom of foreign capital. They contend this is a way to check any "improper" political influence in their internal affairs.

What most Latin-American countries want is to produce raw materials for their own industries and sell their manufactured goods to the world.

The economic plan to be presented to the conference was prepared by the Inter-American Economic and Social Council here. It is expected to be written into a treaty.

The document has been described by United States officials as "very vague." They say it will not be an incentive for a flow of foreign capital to Latin America. The United States placed its objections on record when a council committee declined to insert a clause assuring freedom of action to foreign capital.

There is no controversy on the other two aspects of the conference.

Beginning of a Dark Decade

Still Captive Austria Remembers Anschluss

By Lynn Heinzerling
Associated Press Staff Writer

BERLIN, March 6.—An anguished, soft-spoken plea which moved the world—"God protect Austria"—came over the Vienna radio 10 years ago. It was the fateful night of March 11, 1938.

That was the dark night of anschluss for Austria. German troops were on the Austrian border. Nazi flags already were flying in Vienna and Gestapo agents were in the historic old chancellery building on the Ballhausplatz.

Adolf Hitler was making the first, fateful, aggressive step across the German borders of the Versailles Treaty. The treachery was to be repeated a year later in Czechoslovakia and Memel before the final plunge into war.

The voice which told Austrians that their country was now part of Germany was that of Dr. Kurt von Schuschnigg, Chancellor of the Republic. He had just bowed to Hitler's guns.

"We have yielded to brute force since we are not prepared in this terrible situation to shed blood, and we decided to order the troops to offer no resistance," Schuschnigg said. He was speaking from the room in the chancellery where Engelbert Dollfuss, another Chancellor, had been shot to death by Nazis four years before.

"So I take leave of the Austrian people in this hour, with a German word and a wish from the depths of my heart—God protect Austria," he concluded.

Wide World Photos

Viennese police struggle to hold back Nazi symphathizers as Hitler's auto rolls through the Austrian capital. That was 10 years ago

TEN years have gone and Austria is still not free. Hitler's troops, his singing plug-uglies and all the trappings of his cult are gone, but there are four other armies on Austrian soil. These are the armies of the Allies, who cannot agree how much property in Austria Russia is to be allowed.

Before the war ended, Russia, Britain and the United States decided that Austria was to be rebuilt as a sovereign, independent republic. The decision was set down in the Moscow Declaration. But Austria is still far from sovereign and independent.

Russia has claimed millions of dollars worth of property in eastern Austria. These assets, she insists, were German, and are due her under the Potsdam Agreement. Austrian officials say Russian claims, if satisfied, would ruin the country's shaky economy. Months and months of conferences, of charges and countercharges, have failed to move the Russians.

DR. SCHUSCHNIGG had scarcely finished speaking when the shameful travesty concocted by Hitler broke on the Austrians. In Berlin, it was announced that Arthur Seyss-Inquart, the traitorous Minister of Interior in the Schuschnigg cabinet, had appealed to Hitler for German troops to "prevent bloodshed."

The Berlin press told of anarchic conditions in Austria. Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels had been paving the way for German military action all day. The German press and radio spread lies about "cruelties" inflicted on Austrian Nazis, and of long lines of refugees at the Austrian border.

Later that evening, Seyss-Inquart took to the radio and asked the Austrians "to remain calm and see to it that we advance toward a happy future." Before midnight, German troops were moving across the Austrian border at Salzburg, Kufstein and Mittenwald.

Nazi gangs were at work in Vienna. The swastika was being raised along Vienna's Ring. The Nazi Horst Wessel song could be heard here and there. Jews huddled in their homes or went into hiding. Some who remained on the streets were mistreated and were put to work scrubbing sidewalks.

All day long Hermann Goering in Berlin had been telephoning his orders to Seyss-Inquart and other Nazis in Vienna. Dr. Wilhelm Miklas, the stubborn old President of the Republic, finally was forced to yield. He accepted Dr. Schuschnigg's resignation and named Seyss-Inquart head of the government.

All that night the German troops moved across Austria. They occupied Linz, Salzburg, Graz and Innsbruck. One unit sped to the Brenner Pass to establish the common frontier with Benito Mussolini's Italy. Rudolf Hess, Hitler's deputy, arrived in Vienna about 10 p. m. to prepare for the Fuehrer's triumphal entry.

In every European capital the events in Austria were watched with anxiety and misgiving. But not a hand was raised to help the little republic on the Danube.

Hitler arrived in Linz by air the next day (March 12). His plane was escorted by squadrons of German warplanes. Hitler had spent 10 years of his boyhood in Linz, and the homecoming gave him great satisfaction.

"This evening," he said in a radio speech, "I would like to have some of our international know-it-alls see what is going on and admit it afterward.

"If Providence called me from this city to the leadership of the German Reich, then it must have given me an order. And it can only have been one order, namely, to incorporate my beloved home country into the German Reich. I have believed in it; I have lived for it; I have fought for it. And I believe I have now carried it out."

The next day the Austrian government dissolved itself and became a Nazi gau.

Vienna's Lord Mayor escorts Hitler to the town hall, after the anschluss. Directly behind the Fuehrer are Rudolph Hess and Propaganda Minister Goebbels

THE leading German actors in this historic crime have now been judged. Hitler, Goering and Goebbels are dead by their own hands. Seyss-Inquart was hanged by order of the Nuernberg tribunal. Hess is serving a life sentence in the Spandau Prison of Berlin.

Dr. Schuschnigg, after spending seven years in Nazis prisons and concentration camps, is living and lecturing in the United States. Dr. Miklas, an old and embittered man, still lives in Vienna, now under quadripartite Allied rule.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Prewar Variations Likely

Raises by 'Pattern' Doubted This Year

THERE MAY be no national "pattern" third-round wage increase this year.

This is the growing view of a number of labor economists. They think 1948 may see a return to the prewar situation.

In those days, wage increases varied company by company, or, at most, industry by industry. There was no single figure which applied pretty generally throughout the nation.

This is not to say that there will be no third-round increases. There will be, and there have already been.

The opinion is, rather, that the wage figure arrived at in steel industry negotiations, or in autos, coal or electrical manufacturing, will not necessarily be the same, or even close, to the pay boosts arranged in other manufacturing and service trades.

DR. GEORGE W. TAYLOR
... Discerns the trend

100 Vary Greatly

PROF. George W. Taylor, of the University of Pennsylvania, former chairman of the War Labor Board, has recently been talking in this vein. The idea has also been discussed by George E. Kirstein, also a former WLB official, writing in the trade paper, Women's Wear.

Wage increases—third-round boosts, at that—negotiated in more than 100 contracts signed in December and January, tend to confirm this view.

Except that in more than half the cases the increases are between 10 and 15 cents an hour, there is no discernible pattern. A great many increases are about 5 cents an hour. Figures as low as 2 and 3 cents an hour are not uncommon. Yet others range as high as 30 cents an hour. The increases also vary sharply within the same industry.

This is a quite different picture from that of the past few years. In 1941 a 10-cent increase was general. Then followed, in 1942, the "Little Steel" formula of the WLB, providing increases of 15 per cent above 1939 levels. That lasted until the end of the war.

The postwar first round, which swept the country generally, was 18½ cents, in 1946. The second round, last year, was the "15-cent package."

Damper on Steel

IT HAS BEEN generally assumed that some such flat figure would come into being and serve as a pattern in 1948. This is possible, for the great bulk of the contracts have yet to be negotiated. The major ones in steel, autos and electrical manufacturing are coming up now. But it is by no means inevitable, and maybe not even probable.

It is pointed out, for instance, that whatever wage is set in autos need not apply to steel. For the auto workers can strike for their demands, while the steel workers cannot. Their contract permits a reopening for wage discussions, but no strike in the event of disagreement.

More important, the economic position of different industries is widely divergent. Autos, for example, enjoy a strong market and good prospects; textiles, lumber, construction, leather and shoes and many others appear to be facing soft markets and the threat of serious price declines. Furthermore, there are considerable differences as between localities, both in business prospects and cost of living.

All of which suggests the possibility of a return to the custom of setting wages individually and locally, case by case.

Chinese Railway Patchwork Alone Costs 15 Million

KINHWA, China (AP).—The Chekiang-Kiangsi railway is a good yardstick with which to measure the cost in American dollars of any long-range aid to China aimed at permanent rehabilitation.

The citizens of this little community, which once was a communications center, recently celebrated reconstruction of about 250 miles of the war-devastated east-west artery by UNRRA.

Restoring this section of the line cost UNRRA 15 million dollars (U. S.). It is estimated that 50 million dollars will be needed to rebuild the route the remaining 450 miles westward to join the Canton-Hankow north-south railway.

The Chinese Ministry of Communications is negotiating for a private American loan for this money.

The money UNRRA spent was used economically. It supplied 54 locomotives, 599 freight cars, 40,000 tons of rails, 563,000 crossties, 160 girders and trusses, and 6000 tons of miscellaneous equipment.

Despite all this, the line still lacks sufficient signal equipment for full operation. It now runs from Shanghai southwest to Shangjao. Very soon it is hoped to extend to Nanchang, another 200 miles, and, if all goes well, on to its terminus by next August or September.

Seven Other Nations Have Claims

U.S. Sitting Out 'Preliminaries' of Antarctic Tug-of-War

By Robert B. Geiger
Associated Press Staff Writer

SEVEN nations have cut themselves a pie-shaped slice of the Antarctic continent, leaving out the United States.

Navies of Chile, Argentina and Great Britain are waving their flags among the Antarctic icebergs. The Chilean president personally led an expedition to the continent to reassert his nation's right to military bases.

What's all this fuss about?

One recurring report said uranium had been discovered in the far south. It was quickly denied.

Military experts point to the sea traffic lane between South America and Antarctica, and stress its importance in time of war. If the Panama Canal were severed, the only water route from the East to the West Coast of the United States would be around Cape Horn.

All Pie Slices

IN Washington, Government officials are keeping close watch for any sign that other nations are about to move in and take physical possession of frozen Antarctica, twice as large as the United States.

Besides Chile, Argentina and Britain, claims to Antarctica have been made by France, Norway, New Zealand and Australia. One slice is left unclaimed. The United States has made no formal bid.

All the claims are pie-slice shaped because they all start at the South Pole and extend outward. As Antarctica virtually encircles the pole, the wedge-shaped slices lie in an almost complete circle around the pole.

American First

LIEUT. Charles Wilkes of the United States Navy was first to identify the great expanse of ice and mountains as a continent. Since then American South Polar explorations have equaled or exceeded those of any other nation.

Wilkes commanded six tiny ships. Exactly 110 years ago he sailed them beyond treacherous Cape Horn, determined to see what the bottom of the world looked like.

His flagship, the Vincennes, was little larger than a tugboat. One of his other ships sank, with all hands. Another turned back. Apparently the Vincennes alone accomplished her mission to the full.

Wilkes finally sighted mountain ranges. Ice packs threatened to crush his ship at any moment. But he sailed the Vincennes 1800 miles until he was convinced the land he saw was a continent and no series of islands.

British Settled

DISCOVERY always has been one of several points on which nations have based claims to foreign islands. Other recognized points are occupation, "squatter's rights" and control.

A colony of English settlers took possession of the Falkland Islands in 1765. The islands are about 250 miles off the coast of Argentina. The year before, the Frenchman, de Bougainville, claimed the Falklands for his country.

In 1767 France ceded the islands to Spain. English and Spanish colonists apparently remained in ignorance of the presence of each other, on separate islands, until 1770. Then Spain and England sent fleets to contest sovereignty, but Spain ceded to Britain before a battle occurred.

Britain later claimed the South Shetlands, the South Orkneys and a slice of the Antarctic continent as dependencies of the Falklands. It is this claim that overlaps those of Chile and Argentina.

Argentina has disputed Britain's claim to the Falklands for a century. Argentina says the islands are connected with the South American continent by an underwater mountain chain. She claims them because of this. But Argentina also says the islands belonged to Spain before she freed herself from Spain; therefore the islands should have been handed to Argentina.

Latins Arbitrate

GEN. Bernardo O'Higgins, Chile's soldier-patriot of Irish descent, the first chief of state after Chile declared her independence from Spain, claimed all the islands in her slice of "pie." This slice is mostly inside the one claimed by the British and overlaps the Argentine slice.

Chile and Argentina have agreed to arbitrate their overlapping claims; not so those of Britain.

Chile's president, Gonzalez Videla, made a speech on what he called O'Higgins Land. Britain also claims this peninsula and says it is Palmer Land.

Argentina's Undersecretary Luis Irigoyen says his country does not recognize European colonies within the inter-American security zone. This zone extends from North to South Pole. A treaty among American nations to defend the zone goes into effect if an armed attack occurs.

But at a press conference United States Secretary of State Marshall said that as far as the United States is concerned the treaty does not involve questions of sovereignty. Thus it would be up to disputants to settle the Antarctic issue outside the treaty.

Up to Courts

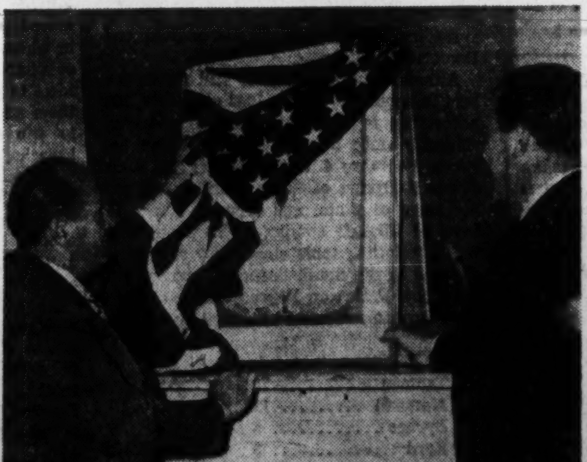
GOVERNMENT officials, who can't be quoted, predict that after some more naval action that may be dramatic but probably not violent, the issue will either be arbitrated or thrown into an international court for settlement.

United States Navy officials say they aren't sure Antarctica is worth fighting for. It is known to contain coal and valuable minerals, but Antarctica is so far away shipping costs would be prohibitive. And the climate is so bad—it's the highest and coldest continent in the world—colonization seems impossible. As far as the public knows, no strategic mineral has been discovered in large quantities.

As for a United States claim to a share of Antarctica, Government officials say one may be made at the right place and time.

"In legal courts you don't win new territory by waving flags and sailing warships," one official said.

Brotherhood 'Down Under'



The American National Club of Sydney is a relatively new organization where American visitors can meet Australians and Australians, in turn, can learn at first hand about the United States. The speech made by Robert Butler, United States Ambassador to Australia, at the opening of the club last year, has been adopted as the club creed. Ambassador Butler (left) is shown unveiling a framed copy at ceremonies there last month

'Decline' of Washington Square

Ghosts Are Losing 'Genius Row'

Looking through the Washington Arch at the red brick mansions which still line the north side of Washington Square

By Charles Honce

Associated Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, March 6.—Washington Square is a place of dreams and ghosts.

The dreams are those of Bishop Manning and others who are trying to preserve the square as a center of the arts. The ghosts are those of a hundred celebrities—novelists, artists and poets—whose feet have trod the one-time potter's field over a century or so. They had their dreams too—heady dreams.

It looks like the appeal of New Yorkers interested in maintaining Genius Row will not prevail. People have been trying to save the rose-red brick Georgian mansions for years, but one by one the houses have fallen under the assault of tall apartment hotels and business buildings.

The north side of the square is still pretty well intact, but the east and west sides long since have given way. The south side presents a missing tooth aspect. Somehow, it has always been the north side that has been able to sustain a graceful, if sometimes shabby, dignity.

As long ago as 1890 William Dean Howells was writing in his novel, "A Hazard for New Fortunes," of the "old-fashioned American respectability which keeps the north side of the square in vast mansions of red brick and the international shabbiness which has invaded the southern border and broken it up into lodging houses, shops, beer gardens and studios."

Genius Row happens to be on the south side, and it is there that another tall apartment building and a three-million-dollar law center for New York University have been planned.

Civil War Wraith

SO, with dreams out of the way, let's take a look at the ghosts. The ghosts, say, of Theodore Winthrop, Henry Cuyler Bunner, Robert W. Chambers, Stephen Crane, Adelina Patti, Eugene O'Neil, Edwin Arlington Robinson, William Dean Howells, Theodore Dreiser, O. Henry, Henry James, Brander Matthews, F. Hopkinson Smith, Julian Ralph and Richard Harding Davis.

All of them lived there at one time or another, or wrote of the square and neighboring Greenwich Village.

Theodore Winthrop today is barely a footnote in the story of American letters. He was killed long ago—during the Civil War battle at Big Bethel, Va., in 1861. He was barely 33, but he left behind a few novels which raise the blood pressure of astute critics.

No one today knows the heartaches and the fire that went into Winthrop's books, "Cecil Dreeme" and "John Brent." George Parsons Lathrop, an earlier-day American critic, described them as "among the freshest and raciest of American stories." Their author was dead before they were published.

Not even the strangely beautiful Gothic university building in which Winthrop worked and which once faced Washington Square is there any more. It was replaced many years ago by another New York University building about as esthetically appealing as a Rutherford B. Hayes period department store. That earlier building Winthrop called Chrysalis College in his books, but it produced no butterfly.

A Current Hit

THEN there is the ghost of Henry James, who wrote a novel called "Washington Square." And if you doubt the vitality of the Washington Square tradition and of the people like James who contributed to it, you have only to go over to Broadway today to learn that a play based on this tale is one of the big hits of the current theatrical season.

James described Washington Square as having "a kind of established repose which is not a frequent occurrence in other quarters of the long, shrill city; it has a richer, riper look than any of the upper ramifications of the great longitudinal thoroughfare—the look of having had something of a social history."

The building described in James' novel was the Dr. Sloper house on the north side of the square between 5th ave. and MacDougal st. Dr. Sloper had come "uptown" in 1835. Presumably the house is standing today but, if so, it has changed. This searcher, carrying a photograph taken before 1900, was unable to find its exact duplicate. Likewise, he was unable to locate the graceful building on the south side of the square that was the scene of a Henry Cuyler Bunner romance.

Bunner (1855-1896) also died young. He once was editor of Puck and one of the wittiest men of his day. The square is the locale of Bunner's novel, "The Midge" (1886), and the book is drenched with the spirit of the place. Washington Square was Bunner's home in his younger Bohemian days.

And, recalling the pother about Genius Row, here is the concluding stanza of a poem Bunner wrote so long ago about that very spot:

So you too are trying to find her?
Then climb up these stairways with me.
That twist and grow blinder and blinder,
Till the skylight near heaven you see.
Is the sun my dull studio gilding?
Oh, no, it is Kitty sits there—
She has moved to the studio building
On the south side of Washington Square.

ANOTHER ghost of the square is Robert W. Chambers. He came back to New York in 1894 at the age of 29 after studying art in Paris for seven years. But he didn't become an artist; he became a writer, and his first book of short stories, "The King in Yellow," is saturated with Washington Square.

Scenes of two stories in the book, "The Repairer of Reputations" and "The Yellow Sign"—the latter one of the greatest horror stories ever written in America—were laid in a red brick one-time bachelor apartment building known as "The Benedict," near the southeast corner of the square.

The building is still there, but no longer is it an artists' studio and no longer does anyone care what happened to Tessie and her artist lover when the man who had been dead for months clumped up the stairs after them.

Yes, it still stands, but it now is the students' building of New York University.

Now comes a digression, but anyone who opens "The Repairer of Reputations" today is due for a shock if he bears in mind that the story was written before 1895. It opens:

"Toward the end of the year 1920 . . . the war with Germany . . . had left no visible scars upon the republic . . .

"Everywhere good architecture was replacing bad, and even in New York a sudden craving for decency had swept away a great portion of the existing horrors. Streets had been widened, squares laid out, elevated structures demolished and underground roads built to replace them."

Then, just before jumping into his tragic story, Chambers wrote: "But self-preservation is the first law, and the United States had to look on in helpless sorrow as Germany, Italy, Spain and Belgium writhed in the throes of anarchy, while Russia, watching from the Caucasus, stooped and bound them one by one."

Parisian Influence

WHAT about the physical Washington Square? It is a sizable open space dominated by the Washington Monument, somewhat reminiscent of Paris' Arc De Triumph. The monument was erected by the citizens of New York in 1889 to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the inauguration of George Washington as President.

From the arch, 5th ave., the most aristocratic street in the world, stems northward for many miles to the Harlem River.

Fifth ave. was once a street of brownstone fronts "monotonously chocolate in hue and unendingly characterless in architecture." Back in 1863, however, a street sacred to fashion was invaded by the first tradesmen. It now is all trade from 7th st. to the sixties.

It has changed, and Washington Square, its source, is changing, too. It looks as though Bishop Manning has a losing fight on his hands.

Grain Speculation Vs. Penny Matching

By John W. Ball

Post Reporter

"When you happen to be most in want of grain, the speculators have it and are unwilling to sell. You may be well satisfied to buy from them at any price whatever and take your leave of them, so that sometimes when there is peace we are reduced to a state of siege by them."

• • • •

That isn't a quote from President Truman, or Senators Bridges or Ferguson.

Those words are from a famous oration by Lysias against the speculators of Athens, the great wheat market of the eastern Mediterranean in 387 B. C.

Throughout history politicians have raved at speculation in foodstuffs. Rome experimented with price fixing, and failed miserably. Britain had bread price laws for more than a century, and repealed them for their futility. Antwerp fought a war over speculation, and France failed at price fixing during the Revolution.

WHEN President Truman last October blasted grain speculation as "just plain gambling," he revived a series of old arguments.

Chief among these are:

1. What is the difference between speculation and gambling?

2. What purposes do futures markets fulfill and why are they necessary to farm products and not to products of industry such as automobiles and shoes?

In all the recent turmoil over speculation in commodities, there was seldom a voice raised in defense of such dealing. On the other hand, nobody of any importance ever suggested that it be abolished.

There are reasons for this seeming paradox. First, speculation in grain has been a whipping boy for all the ills of the farmers for years beyond memory. Blaming everything on the grain pits has been as common to Grain Belt politicians as having their pictures taken in overalls.

Second, the reason no one has suggested doing away with grain speculation is that there is no alternative except state control—the purchase of all commodities by the Government with resale at a fixed price. This is a method that has been tried, unsuccessfully, in many places and at many times. It is still in force in some countries, but is abhorrent to the American idea of free enterprise.

Protects Inventories

THERE IS A definite place for futures trading in the American economy the same as there is a definite place for insurance. In fact it is a type of insurance.

Joseph M. Mehl, administrator of the Commodity Exchange Authority, the public governing body for the Nation's commodity exchanges, recently told Congress:

"It is recognized that in the commodity futures markets there is need for some speculation. Merchants and processors hedge their inventories by making short sales and holding these short contracts until the cash commodity is sold.

"Some of these short contracts are offset by the long hedging contracts of other merchants or processors whose forward cash sales exceed their inventories. Under most conditions, however, members of the trade as a group are net short in the futures markets.

"Speculators, by buying the offsetting contracts of hedgers, assume the risk of price changes, and merchants and processors thus obtain insurance against price risks."

Mehl later took a position somewhat contrary to that taken by the President in October, when he said:

"It is not believed that speculation is a basic factor in determining the general level of prices in the long run. However, an undue amount of speculation tends to make price fluctuations more erratic and at times accentuates price trends. We know from the number and character of traders entering the market that at times speculation does have a short-run effect upon prices."

Exchange Disagreed

NOT long ago a customer's man for a New York brokerage house, called for jury service in a gambling case, pleaded he was not qualified to sit in judgment as "I'm in the gambling business myself." His statement promptly resulted in his suspension from all trading by the New York Stock Exchange.

In the face of this example, the writer recently was amazed to hear some customers' men in a grain brokerage house in the Southwest wheat belt argue that speculation in grain was gambling.

An important customer of this broker's office was a leader of a strict religious sect that farms a large area in the Panhandle. In his wide-brimmed hat, the old man with the flowing beard was a strange figure in the board room. He bought and sold almost daily, watching market movements and studying crop conditions with experienced eyes.

One noon he saw two customers' men match coins for lunch. He immediately closed his account. His church, his religion, he declared, would not permit him to do business with gamblers.

In trying to talk him out of leaving, the brokers feebly protested that matching coins was no different from his futures dealings.

In reply, the old man compared his market operations to insurance. He was spreading the risk inherent in farming.

Just Like Premiums

IF, during the growing season, he and his fellow churchmen were willing to raise their crop for the price that contracts for delivery of wheat in May or September were bringing, they sold for delivery in those months.

If, as the season progressed and conditions changed, they thought that prices might go higher, they would buy back some of those futures contracts.

Their transactions protected them against serious loss as the crop neared harvest, much, he said, as their hail insurance protected them against loss from that source. It cost them money, he agreed, but so did the insurance. It assured them, however, a fair return for their year's investment in land, seed and labor.

Unlike gambling, he said, speculation was based upon conditions outside the control of man—upon "acts of God," such as rain, cold, drought, etc. He also listed among these "acts of God" wars and pests, depressions and inflation.

On the other hand, gambling was solely dependent upon luck and the result was due to acts of man.

His speculative activities he compared to the operations of a storekeeper who increases his stock when an oil field develops nearby, or a new factory moves into his neighborhood.

A farmer by nature, he said, is a speculator. He puts his wheat in the ground, and speculates that it will grow into a crop. The old man drew a fine line, not between gambling and speculation, but between gambling and recognized conservative business practices.

Geared to Demand

IN MANY respects—as our churchman-trader explained—if speculation in grain today is gambling, then so is insurance.

Large risks are inherent in the production and distribution of farm products. Long production periods, uncertainties of weather and other rapidly changing supply and demand factors inevitably create price uncertainties. The risk is there; it must be carried by someone. It gets down to a question of who will do it.

In the concentration stage of the marketing process these risks grow in geometric ratio. We start out with wagonloads and truckloads of wheat and cotton. We end up with trainloads and boatloads in the terminal markets and at the ports.

A merchant who is able in a single transaction to sell a boatload of wheat my be satisfied with a profit of a small fraction of a cent per bushel. But if he has to assume the risk of a possible price decline of 10 cents a bushel between the time of purchase and time of sale, the spread between his purchase and selling prices must increase.

The real question then, is: Shall these risks be forced upon the large handlers who most of all want to avoid such risks? Theoretically, at least, there is only one answer.

Let these risks be broken up again into small parts. Let them be carried by competent and willing risk carriers through the medium of the futures market, under proper regulation and supervision. Trading under such conditions probably affords the largest possible measure of competition in price making, and provides the surest protection against price making by private monopoly.

Risk Is Cumulative

THIS brings us back to automobiles. There are no future markets for these commodities, nor do we find the sudden and sharp price changes that are found in the commodity futures markets. The reason is not the absence of future markets. It is no argument against future markets for agricultural commodities.

Manufacturers are usually able to gauge and gear their production rather closely to the effective demand. Manufactured goods are sold under trade names, trade price agreements and, sometimes, under conditions approaching monoply. Not a monopoly in any unlawful sense, but rather in the sense that there is no directly competing product having exactly the same quality and sales appeal. It is not possible to have a satisfactory futures market under such marketing conditions.

Not to be overlooked is the fact that while the prices to the buying public for manufactured goods may not be subject to frequent change, actually the cost factors are changing constantly. But the public has no thermometer which registers these changes in the form of a composite price. It does have such a thermometer in the case of a sound futures market.

'Ghost Makers' Get Medium Sentences

COPENHAGEN (AP).—Two mechanics from the Danish town of Odense have been sentenced to three months' imprisonment for "ghost-making."

Two years ago a workshop in Odense suddenly became haunted by a malicious ghost. It threw wheels and hammers through the room while sighing and sobbing.

A newspaperman disclosed the appearances. The two sentenced had contrived the ghost in order to buy the workshop at a cheap price.

'Philly' Primps for Conventions

By Billee Wheelock

Associated Press Staff Writer

Philadelphia's huge Convention Hall, where both the Republican and Democratic National Conventions will be held next summer

PHILADELPHIA, March 6.—Philadelphia is grooming itself for the task of nominating the candidates of both major parties for the next President of the United States.

Republicans take over the city the week of June 21 to name their standard bearer. Democrats follow the week of July 12.

The show will bring thousands swarming into Philadelphia with an estimated 35 million dollars to spend. To welcome them, the city has set in motion a $500,000 "face-lifting" project.

Historic Independence Hall, always a feature attraction to an out-of-towner, will get a new coat of paint inside and out. City Hall, topped by a weather-worn statue of William Penn, will get a paint job, too.

First crack at tickets and hotel reservations goes to the Republicans' 1094 delegates and the same number of alternates. Each delegate gets two tickets and the alternates each get one. The same arrangements will be followed by the Democrats.

Other high priority tickets go to newspapers, wire services, magazines, newsreels, radio and television stations, which have asked for nearly 2000 seats for each convention.

Philadelphia has promised both organizations 6000 first-class and 2000 medium-class rooms, for which takers will be asked about 50 per cent more than regular rates. The rate hike will place a $12 premium on a double room and up to $60 a day for a suite.

In addition, 1000 rooms will be available to convention goers in Atlantic City, 60 miles away. Special trains will be in service.

Half Million Talks

CREDIT for signing the conventions goes to the All-Philadelphia Citizens Committee, a nonpartisan group of more than 100 civic leaders who put a half million dollars on the line to meet the expenses of each convention.

Thus the rock-ribbed Republican city, a dark-horse contender in both instances, stole a march over Chicago with the Republicans and San Francisco with the Democrats.

It will be the fifth time the GOP has come to Philadelphia to choose its candidate. The Democrats invaded the GOP stronghold only once before—in 1936 to nominate Franklin D. Roosevelt for his second term.

The Republicans actually got their start in the Quaker City. In 1856 the party, less than two years old, met in Philadelphia on June 17 and nominated John C. Fremont of California for President and William L. Dayton of New Jersey for Vice President.

However, the Democratic choice, James Buchanan, won the election.

The Republicans have been back to nominate President Grant in 1872, President McKinley in 1900 and Wendell Willkie in 1940.

The two most recent conventions brought some 22 million dollars to Philadelphia business.

This year, as in 1936 and 1940, the conventions will be held in Philadelphia's $5,352,000, 17-year-old Convention Hall, about 2 miles from the center of the city.

The hall, with seats for 13,200 in the arena and an additional 1000 on the great stage, is believed one of the most modern and completely equipped in the world. In the arena, where everything from bicycle races to political conventions have been held, there is not one post to block the view of spectators.

The fireproof building, constructed of steel, marble and limestone, has 24 meeting rooms to accommodate gatherings of 50 to 1500 persons. There are numerous dressing and wardrobe rooms.

When jam-packed to capacity, the building can be emptied in 10 minutes because of its exit arrangements.

Its ventilating system delivers 23,000,000 cubic feet of fresh air every hour, providing for an air change every 12 minutes.

Both Republicans and Democrats will use the massive hall for free.

The Year Has Hundred Weeks, But Not That Many Pay Days

By James E. Warner

BY THE calendar, 1948 is just about 10 weeks old—but it already has had 13 weeks, and by December 31 it will have passed one hundred, instead of the calendar-allotted fifty-two.

Likewise, 1948 will have far more than its allotted 12 months and 366 days, for a coldly factual Government report shows there are too few days, weeks and months to go around among the various causes, worthy and otherwise, in America.

Thus far this year, for example, there have been a Week of Prayer, Civil Service Week, Printing Week, Jaycee Week, Idaho Potato and Onion Week, Large Size Week, Boy Scout Week, National Heart Week, Americanism Week, National Security Week, Crime Prevention Week, National Cherry Week and American Brotherhood Week.

March is a big month for weeks, with periods devoted to National 4-H Clubs, Save Your Vision, Doughnuts, Table Tennis and Honey for Breakfast.

All this and more information is yours for 10 cents in a publication entitled "Special Days, Weeks and Months in 1948," put out by the inquiry reference service of the Commerce Department, whose Marjorie V. Davis compiled the list for the purpose of assisting business men in coordinating advertising and promotional plans with such events.

Cautiously, the department notes that "inclusion of an event should not be construed as an indorsement by the department."

Large Size Week was not, as you might suspect, a week devoted to catering to outsize people, but to promote sales of large, economy sizes of drug products in chain drug stores.

Likewise, National Coin Week has no connection with National Prosperity Week. The one is for coin collectors, the other to promote thrift through Christmas savings clubs.

Other weeks—and the Commerce Department makes it plain it does not claim to have them all listed—include Apple, Raisin, Flower, Peanut, Hunters, Fishermen's, Restaurant, Hobby, Posture, Letter Writing, Swim for Health, Golf, Sweater, Baseball, Wine, Sew and Save.

It takes 9½ pages of single-spaced typewriting to list all the days, weeks and months in the brochure. It takes another page to list events with no set dates and "additional possible events."

Among the latter are Better Floors Week, Hotel Week, Fish Week, Knitting Week, Turkey Week, and—oh, happy day!—National Be Kind to Taxpayers Week.

Possible sponsor of this most desirable period—which presumably would not, repeat not, occur around March 15—is the Citizens' National Committee, Inc., of Oklahoma City. Its purpose is not listed in the report.

Police Efficiency

The Metropolitan Police Department was at its best in the prompt arrest last week of two confessed murderers after two particularly brutal killings. The good work deserves a vote of thanks from all Washingtonians. The smooth way in which the department functioned in this instance shows what can be done when the organization is on its toes. We hope it will have similar success in the Meyrovitch case, which at this writing is still unsolved.

While the Police Department's day-to-day job of law enforcement does not loom so spectacular as the apprehension of notorious criminals, it is no less important. In this respect the renewed plea of Superintendent Barrett for more men is especially relevant. Even in these days of mechanization, there is no substitute for a basic minimum of manpower. The personnel handicap under which the department is operating imposes an unnecessary strain which is augmented by the fact that the department is now 106 men under even its authorized strength of 1795. Action by the Civil Service Commission is expected to relieve this shortage soon, but the department will still be under the generally accepted safety standard of 2.5 policemen for each 1000 residents. The District figure is 2.08 per thousand and, as Major Barrett has pointed out, the effectiveness of this number is diminished by time-consuming details, such as checking on dog licenses. The superintendent has asked for what we believe is a reasonable increase of 205 men to bring department strength to an even 2000. If the public is to have the kind of protection it has a right to expect, the Commissioners will have to give this request energetic support.

Morgenthau's Ghost

There appears to be some discrepancy between the testimony of Mr. Stimson and that of Mr. Cordell Hull concerning the Morgenthau plan for imposing a Carthaginian peace on Germany. According to Mr. Stimson, whose memoirs are being published serially in the Ladies' Home Journal, he was virtually alone among the members of the Roosevelt Cabinet in his opposition to the plan. Mr. Hull, says Mr. Stimson, was as vindictive toward the Germans as Mr. Morgenthau himself and prepared in the pursuit of revenge, "to dump all the principles he had been laboring for in regard to trade for the last 12 years."

Mr. Hull, whose memoirs are appearing serially in the Washington Star, tells a very different story. Mr. Hull says that it was with both consternation and indignation that he read the plan, agreed upon at the Quebec conference of September, 1944. to reduce Germany to "a country primarily agricultural and pastoral in its character." Indeed, he says, "this whole development at Quebec . . . angered me as much as anything that had happened during my career as Secretary of State." However, Mr. Hull admits that "Stimson had been as angered as I was over Morgenthau's highhanded procedure in conducting the negotiations at Quebec on a matter of primary concern to the State and War Departments, without consultation with us."

Mr. Hull says that in a conversation with the President on October 1, 1944, he protested against the plan approved by the Messrs. Roosevelt and Churchill at Quebec. In the course of this conversation, he outlined his own ideas about how Germany should be treated. He told the President that——

> Germany should be kept under military control for 25 or 50 years, as necessity might require, until she experienced an absolute change of heart . . . that the standard of living of the German population should be kept below the average of the neighboring population but should be raised gradually in proportion to the rate of change on their part away from Nazism, racial superiority and the like toward ideas of human rights, individual liberty, freedom and peace.

Mr. Hull said he also told the President that he believed Mr. Churchill had consented to the Morgenthau plan against his better judgment with the somewhat sordid motive of purchasing Mr. Morgenthau's valuable assistance in obtaining a six and a half billion dollar credit from the Treasury. The Messrs. Stimson and Hull seem to agree that Mr. Roosevelt when he signed the Quebec memorandum had very little notion of what it implied. That might also be offered perhaps as an explanation of Mr. Roosevelt's conduct at Tehran and Yalta. Thus we are obliged to ask ourselves whether even the greatest of statesmen have really any very clear idea of what they are about. Quam paucia sapienta mundi regitur, says the proverb, which is as good a reason as any why statesmen should not write memoirs.

Centenary

It is now a full century since the first copies of the original German version of the Communist Manifesto emerged from the press of an English printer in London. Although this document has since had the most tremendous historical consequences, it appeared too late to have had any direct connection with the epidemic of revolutions which swept through Europe in the year 1848. But both the manifesto and the revolutions were evidences of the widening fissure of society created by the industrial revolution.

That revolution, to use the words of the Manifesto, had "agglomerated population, centralized the means of production, and concentrated property in a few hands." It had created a new social class, unknown to European society since the Roman decadence—a vast category of persons who possessed no traditional status, no productive capital, and no means of subsistence except wages. This proletariat was being recruited from all classes of the population—all those who could not accumulate enough capital for large-scale operations and those whose skills had been rendered obsolete by machinery and the factory system. Thus industrial society was being rapidly divided into two classes, a diminishing group of capitalists who would soon control everything, and a rapidly multiplying working class destined to increasing misery.

Out of this tendency arises the modern class struggle. In the struggle the advantage and the ultimate victory lie with the working class, partly by reason of its increasing numbers, partly because of the self-destructive character of capitalism itself. Since the factory system demands a concentration of workers, the concentration makes possible the association of the working class in a revolutionary movement. Although the ultimate triumph of the proletariat is predestined, it can be hastened by the activities of that section of the proletariat which is aware of the true nature of the conflict and is able to assume leadership. This was to be the role of those who called themselves Communists. As was afterward explained by Frederich Engels, coauthor of the Manifesto with Karl Marx, the word "Communist" rather than "Socialist" was chosen, in order to differentiate the proletarian revolutionary movement both from the various forms of Utopian socialism and from those movements which aimed at ameliorating the condition of the masses through political action and reforms.

A hundred years after the Communist Manifesto we may ask ourselves how far the evolution of industrial society has followed the lines indicated by Marx and Engels in 1848. On the positive side, we are obliged to note (1) that the prediction of the disappearance of a middle class seems in process of fulfillment, (2) that the working class in most countries has exhibited greater and greater solidarity and has become steadily more revolutionary in temper. On the negative side we may note that the material condition of the unskilled workers has not, as was prophesied, become progressively worse, but in almost all capitalist countries shows improvement over the conditions existing in 1848.

However, it is the following prediction which has been most unmistakably contradicted by history:

> When, in the course of development, class distinctions have disappeared, and all production has been concentrated in the hands of a vast association of the whole nation, the public power will lose its political character. Political power, properly so called, is merely the organized power of one class for oppressing another. If the proletariat during its contest with the bourgeoisie is compelled, by the force of circumstances, to organize itself as a class; if, by means of a revolution, it makes itself the ruling class, and, as such sweeps away by force the old conditions of production, then it will, along with these conditions, have swept away the conditions for the existence of class antagonisms, and of classes generally, and will thereby have abolished its own supremacy as a class.

In other words, the dictatorship of the proletariat will be merely a transitional stage to a cooperative society in which government will be unnecessary, and the state, as such, will cease to exist. It is rather grimly ironic to read that prophecy in the light of the Communist revolution in Russia. Even outside Russia the experience of the past century has shown that the effect of socialistic innovations has been to increase the tempo of politics and the power of the state. It is not the Lumpenproletariat but its self-constituted leaders who become the new ruling class; and the workers discover they have merely exchanged the economic "tyranny" of the bourgeoisie for the political tyranny of bureacucrats and policemen.

Dangerous Tactics

A proposed rider to the Labor Department-Federal Security appropriations bill denying Federal health and educational grants to States practicing racial discrimination has been decisively rejected by the Appropriations Committee of the House as a legislative measure having no place in an appropriation bill. Although the committee has on occasion laid itself open to charges of legislative encroachment, it would hardly dare risk so flagrant a misuse of its powers as the rejected amendment would have entailed. For that proposal was nothing less than an attempt to anticipate the action of Congress on pending measures designed to implement the President's civil-rights program by crude pressure methods much more likely to defeat than to further the program's objectives.

If the House were to approve a rider of this sort, moreover, it would be setting a precedent that might be applied to every other appropriation bill, either by the Appropriations Committee or by the House through amendments from the floor. The destructive potentialities of this sort of procedure are obvious. It could, for example, be employed as effectively to defeat the purposes of the Administration's foreign aid and recovery program as to anticipate (and no doubt distort) the aims of a domestic civil-rights program still in the formative stage.

Turning On The Light

No. XI

Congressional inquiries should be dedicated to enlightenment and not to persecution.

No congressional investigation is likely to succeed without highly skilled personnel. The sifting of truth out of rumors, hearsay, charges, countercharges, smears and propaganda is one of the most difficult arts known to man. Busy members of Congress cannot possibly do the leg work in such undertakings, and even part of the head work must necessarily be delegated to others. If investigating committees fail to equip themselves with expert staffs, therefore, the chance of their rendering a significant service is rather small.

The success of New York's insurance investigation in 1905 was due almost entirely to the skill, the persistence and integrity of Charles Evans Hughes. He demonstrated in a superb manner the power of facts elicited without browbeating and logically assembled to illustrate the abuses that the Armstrong Committee had been assembled to expose. Likewise the achievements of the securities inquiry in the 1930s must be ascribed in considerable measure to the investigating skill of Ferdinand Pecora. Many similar examples could be cited. The fact is that the choice of counsel often makes or breaks an investigation.

It is scarcely necessary to note that the chief investigator ought to be a man who respects facts, rather than a fanatic; one who is skilled in modern techniques of investigation, rather than use of the rubber hose; one who is capable of comprehending the entire subject under investigation, not merely a distorted segment of it; and one who is capable of working dispassionately for reforms in the public interest, instead of merely striking at his foes and smearing his critics. When such a man is found, he will need an ample staff to facilitate his work and minimize the temptation to cut corners.

A man of this caliber can work most effectively if he is allowed to examine the witnesses and direct the detailed work of the inquiry in his own way. Indeed, the investigating committee maintains a much more secure position if its members assume the attitude of impartial judges of the case presented by their counsel and his staff. Sometimes, of course, they may usefully participate in the questioning of witnesses, especially if they are experienced in the field under inquiry. But if an expert piece of work is to be done in an atmosphere of fairness conducive to highlighting the truth, the burden of the detailed work will have to be carried by experts of the caliber indicated. Possibly no other single factor is so important as this in improving the character of congressional investigations.

Repression In Greece

Coincident with the clamping of the iron curtain on Czechoslovakia, came reports from Athens of the arrest of two Socialist editors for "publishing articles creating dissension among the Greek people." That is a stinging blow to American world policy as well as to American prestige in Europe. It seems all the more deplorable because the arrests were made on the very day that press officers of the American aid mission in Athens put out statements declaring that "there is no country in Europe where a greater degree of press freedom may be found than in Greece."

Of course, the American mission in Greece is not directly responsible for this high-handed intimidation of critics of the Athens regime. But the fact remains that Greece, under American aid and tutelage, is resorting to some of the terroristic methods that the United States is so sharply condemning in Soviet-dominated Czechoslovakia and other countries. It is all too evident that American officials in Athens have not yet succeeded in impressing upon the Greek government the necessity of abandoning police-state methods in the fight to save Greece as part of the free world.

Two counts of failure against the American mission in Greece stand out with stark emphasis. The Greek army seems to have made little progress toward cleaning out the Soviet-backed guerillas that are making pacification of the country impossible. Lieut. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, new commander of the United States Military Group, said the other day that this country had sent ample material to whip the rebels, and that more was on the way. The disappointing results to date seem to trace largely to failure of the Athens government to fulfill its part of the bargain.

No less serious is the continued use of repressive measures, including the wholesale execution of political prisoners. By these means, as we have pointed out before, the Athens government is creating Communists. If Greece is interested in the regeneration of democracy with American aid, it is time for more concrete evidence of that desire to be forthcoming. Apparently more positive emphasis on the conditions of our aid is a first essential. This program has been indorsed by the American people as an investment in democracy in a land that has common cause with us in resisting police-state terrorism. If the Greeks cannot demonstrate a sincere and consistent interest in these aims, the experiment will be short-lived.

Five-Minute Justice

Judge Ellen K. Raedy's performance on March 1, of speeding through a criminal docket of 71 cases in 3 hours flat means different things to different people. Roughly computing the amount of time devoted to each defendant, allowing 30 seconds for each of the 52 cases disposed of on procedural grounds, Judge Raedy gave each of the remaining 19 cases approximately 9 minutes' time. Since the prosecuting attorney consumed at least half of this time in presenting his case, the citizen was left with, say, 5 minutes.

In our judicial system, 5-minute justice in the Municipal Court means an increase in the number of cases appealed. The defendant, if he has a good defense, will be more likely to appeal if he feels that he has not been given a full hearing in lower court. Since our court system is now greatly overtaxed, the appeal judges are not inclined to smile favorably on 5-minute justice.

To the law enforcement agency, 5-minute justice means that the arresting and investigating officers are discouraged from making careful, thorough reports. The officers, learning that the judge is in too much of a hurry to hear a complete report, soon lapse into briefing their evidence, and thereby often eliminating important evidential details.

To the attorney, 5-minute justice means that he is not given an opportunity to present adequately his client's side of the case. To the defendant, 5-minute justice means, in effect, the denial of his constitutional right to be heard. Our judicial system is in need of regaining its fast-dwindling reputation for dependable justice, not of establishing new speed records.

Czech Loan

For those (political innocents) mystified by the Czech crisis, who don't know anything about the background of the developments in Czechoslovakia, it may be worth while to read the following passages from the winter, 1948 issue of The Virginia Quarterly Review (published at the University of Virginia), which contains an illuminating article by Edith and Sidney Sulkin, "Through European Eyes." This article explains why and how Americans lost the chance of grasping the proferred hand of friendship of the Czechs at the end of World War II, as evidenced in these quotations:

"However hard the Czechs tried to demonstrate their friendship, America appeared to be going out of her way to show that she was having none of it. Last spring, we were witnesses to an incident which was a reductio ad absurdum of the American attitude. A Czechoslovak official approached an official of the American State Department and requested his cooperation in getting American writers and artists to visit Czechoslovakia. The Czech pointed out that his government would be willing to pay all expenses of the American artists as well as their travel to and from Paris. The American official retorted angrily "Sir, we don't intend to send any of our people to visit you. As far as we're concerned, the United States is through with appeasement. We're through with Czechoslovakia and you might as well get used to it."

"The move that put the seal on American disapproval of Czechoslovakia occurred last autumn. The Czechs learned that their request for a loan had been turned down. They did not attempt to conceal their deep disappointment. We can get along without the money, said a Czech economist. But it will be difficult. We would have been able to buy certain goods from Italy, but now we'll just have to do without them. This will hurt Italy as much as it will us and in the long run it will probably hurt the United States too. The interesting part of it is that we are a better loan risk than most other countries which are getting American dollars. But the United States uses her dollars politically, contrary to the principles of international trade which she herself proclaimed."

There was little doubt in the minds of Czechs that America's refusal to grant the loan had been nothing else than an attempt to influence the internal politics of Czechosolvakia. "If the act (American refusal of the loan) has any result," said many Czechs of all political shades, "it will drive more people into the hands of the Communists and help upset the political equilibrium which we have worked hard to obtain." So we are now reaping what we have sown.

"Wallace Illuminates"

On behalf of the country I have the honor to represent, I wish to express our deep gratitude for the timely article published by you on February 25 under the caption "Wallace Illuminates."

Your writer is to be congratulated on the clarity of his exposition and on the sweeping manner in which he has exposed the fallaciousness of Mr. Wallace's thesis.

Virginia Voters

One begins to wonder whether Governor Tuck's proposals to the Virginia General Assembly in regard to changing the State's presidential election laws are aimed, primarily, at getting Senator Byrd's name before the Democratic convention in Philadelphia and only secondarily at purging President Truman.

Senator Byrd indorsed this procedure (probably in advance) "without reservation" and said the Governor's message "may well become historic." So might the recent putsch in Czechoslovakia!

In discrediting President Truman now and extending an invitation to all the other Southern States to do likewise, Governor Tuck forces the South to look for another candidate and gives the Byrd machine time to organize.

In reviewing the "iniquitous influences" which Governor Tuck says have found their way into both the political parties, the South should consider the "iniquitous influence" through its political stranglehold on the State that the high-handed Byrd machine is exerting in Virginia.

The people of the South may well become more alarmed over supporting a man who indorses such an outrageous abrogation of the rights of a State's electorate than they could possibly be over the President's civil rights program.

An Internationalized Palestine

Palestine, as the spiritual home of several great religions, transcends all races and nationalities. If Jerusalem can be internationalized, as it has been under the partition plan, then all Palestine can be brought under an international governing body and police force. Members could be drawn from many nations and races, just as are the present employes of United Nations organizations.

Only a bold measure such as this—the creation of a genuine world police force—can prove decisive now. Perhaps this Palestine situation is a real test of our maturity. Can we transcend nations? If the answer is "yes," then we have transcended the Palestine dilemma too.

We have been forced to this impasse partly because of our own blindness, but largely under the pressure of groups and circumstances. We cannot retract or ignore the issue. We have no choice but to go through with it.

Partition is not only impracticable but undesirable. It would create more problems than we could ever hope to solve. Among these would be the untenable economic position of two new states in an area where there are already too many small and weak states. It would make future conciliation virtually impossible as friction mounts.

Partition would make fishing grounds for nations which have a vested interest in total order within their own borders and total chaos in the rest of the world. Partition is a step backward, since all forces of life, in economic and technological as well as in other spheres, are working toward greater hegemonies and larger productive units.

Within the Jewish state formed by the partition there would be a bitter struggle if not open civil war for supremacy and the control of the governmental apparatus and the police force of the state of Judea. Those who are familiar with factions within Jewish Palestine are not optimistic. One of the surest ways to fan the fire of anti-Semitism in the United States is to force the partition to be carried out by gentile Americans with relatively high casualties or even as many as the British have had.

Some Zionists, blinded by racism and nationalism, are unable to see this outcome, but the more level-headed American Jew should see it. A small minority, as Jews are in America, cannot expect, no matter how influential it may be, to impose its will upon the overwhelming majority of American citizenry without risking a violent reaction.

Some Zionist leaders may succeed in overriding, through the creation of an artificial hysteria, the best interests of the rank and file of millions of hard-working Jews in America who have no connection with Palestine. Two hundred and fifty million or even a billion dollars raised in this country can buy a lot of military equipment and ammunition, but this will not solve the Palestine problem.

On the other hand, our even partial success in bringing into existence an international state and world police force would crystallize many other issues, emphasize the positive aspect of the United Nations and create a significant nucleus for any eventuality in this lawless world of ours. For the first time, international law and morality would find a weapon for carrying out sanctions and an instrument for enforcing its decisions.

America still has the opportunity and the power to save its prestige and the peace in the Middle East by a heroic step calling for the formation of the world police force and championing the internationalization of Palestine.

To Prevent A Shooting War

By Andre Visson

The Key Is in Italy

WASHINGTON — "The key to the immediate future of western Europe—and that of the United States—is at the present time in Italy." This is the statement one hears in Washington from both American and western European diplomats.

The American-British-French conference in London continues to discuss the future of western Germany. The five-nations conference —Britain, France and the three Benelux countries — which opened this week in Brussels, will discuss the British proposal to form a western European union. Italy is absent from Brussels as she is from London. But the two questions that are paramount in the minds of the allied diplomats gathered in London and Brussels are: What can be done to prevent the Communist-Socialist bloc in Italy from winning the coming April elections? And, if they should win, what can the western European powers, and, especially the United States, do to prevent further Communist expansion?

The German problem has certainly not lost its long-range importance. And the seizure of power by the Communists in Czechoslovakia has emphasized the necessity of finding at least a temporary solution for western Germany, for whose fate we and the western Europeans are responsible. But the Communist coup in Czechoslovakia has given such importance to the coming elections in Italy that it has made the Italian problem overshadow that of Germany in the field of urgent and decisive realities.

THERE IS, indeed, a growing anxiety in Washington and in the capitals of western Europe that millions of non-Communist Italian men and women may now vote Communist because they have been greatly impressed by two factors in the Czechoslovakia developments: the ease with which the Communists achieved their objectives in Czechoslovakia, and our apparent inability to do anything about it except send a note of protest.

Of course, the situation in Italy is vastly different from that in Czechoslovakia. In the event of a Communist coup, or if the April elections should strengthen the Communist-Socialist bloc and thereby increase the Communist pressure, the de Gasperi government will not fail to call on America for protection. Such protection, one should not forget, was promised by President Truman on December 13 when the last American forces were leaving Italy. An appeal coming from the legitimate Italian government would probably not silence the fellow-travelers but it should satisfy the conscience of those innocents who still go around worrying whether it is "legal, moral and ethical for the United States Government to interfere in the internal affairs of foreign nations," at the very hour when we find ourselves forced into a war, which, though officially still "cold," may at any moment become a "shooting" one.

But what will we do if the Communist-Socialist bloc in Italy should win, not a strong plurality, as is generally expected, but a majority—as slight as it may be? All reports from France point out that the immediate fate of France will be determined by the Italian elections. Just as the Communist victory in Czechoslovakia has given a shot in the arm to the Italian Communists, a Communist victory in Italy would give a shot in the arm to the French Communists. And just as in Italy, there are millions of weary, confused and frightened people in France who fear a Communist victory, but will vote Communist if they believe that the Communists are strong enough to win and that we are too weak—or hesitant—to prevent it.

OF COURSE, there is the Marshall Plan, which is supposed to save western Europe. But things in Europe are now moving very fast. A Communist victory in Italy would seriously jeopardize the possible success of the Marshall Plan. Thus American and western European diplomats agree that their paramount and most urgent objective is to win the battle that is going to be fought in the coming six weeks for Italy. The Soviets are presenting themselves to the Italian people as their "best friends." They are advocating the return of the Italian colonies; they have instructed their Albanian and Yugoslav satellites to make minor concessions to the Italians—return prisoners of war and captured fishing boats; they have launched a campaign of false rumors about the return of Trieste to a Communist Italy. In other words, they are playing the nationalist line and flattering the national pride of the Italians. This is an imponderable factor, the importance of which has not always been properly evaluated in western Europe and in Washington. But as important as it is to take into consideration Italian sensibilities, it is much more important to give the Italian people confidence in America's ability and determination to defend Italy against any external or internal danger. The inclusion of Italy in the western European union, which is expected to result from the Brussels conference, should be a long step in the right direction.

The French have not been too eager to have Italy represented on the Allied Economic Council for western Germany, but they are now most anxious to bring Italy into the western European Union. It is with this object in view that the French Foreign Minister, George Bidault, will shortly leave for Italy to sign the French-Italian agreement.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Keefe 'Rider' Comes a Cropper

By Drew Pearson

REJECTION in committee last Friday of a sweeping civil rights rider to the appropriation bill has removed another dynamite-laden issue from this Congress. The amendment would have barred Federal hospital, public health and vocational educational grants to States that practice racial discrimination.

This bill had been worked out by Congressman Frank Keefe, Wisconsin Republican, who has charge of voting money to hospitals, colleges, child welfare, crippled children, institutions for the blind, and a score of other Federal subsidies. And for the first time in history, Keefe inserted an amendment which read:

"No part of the appropriations provided for in this act shall be paid as grants to any State or educational institution in which, because of race, color or creed, discriminatory practices deny equality of educational opportunity or employment to anyone to pursue such educational courses or employment as are provided for by such grant."

While a filibuster might be carried on against a civil rights bill, it would be almost impossible to defeat an appropriation bill. The rider, if it had been accepted, would have meant that all hospitals receiving Federal grants for cancer research, polio, heart disease or any other kind of subsidy, would have been obliged to give employment to Negro interns, nurses and doctors.

It also would have meant that if State universities refused to admit Negroes they no longer would receive Federal subsidies.

Keefe learned at recent hearings that St. Elizabeths Hospital here, entirely supported by Federal money, does not admit Negro interns. He also found that it is difficult for Negro doctors to get an education because only two hospitals in the entire United States admit them for training—those at Howard University here and Meharry University at Nashville, Tenn.

"The colored folks pay taxes," observed Keefe, "but don't get the benefits."

The Wisconsin Congressman also learned that there is only one Negro doctor to every 3337 Negroes in the United States, whereas the proportion for the white people is one doctor for every 750.

In fact, there are only 4000 Negro doctors in the entire USA—only 2.2 per cent of the Nation's total of 180,000 doctors. Negroes comprise 10 per cent of the population.

There is only one Negro doctor for every 8320 Negroes in Arkansas, Keefe discovered; one for every 12,152 in South Carolina, and one for every 18,527 in Mississippi.

Forecast of Inaction

WHEN the last regular session of Congress adjourned in July with one of the worst "do nothing" records in history, Republican apologists freely predicted that the next session, beginning in January, would be one of the most productive. GOP leaders, it was explained, wanted to chalk up a good legislative record to show the voters next November.

Despite this campaign incentive, it now looks as if the batting average of the second session of the 80th Congress will be pretty much like that of the first, at the rate things are going. Here is the Merry-Go-Round forecast on what Congress will do about major legislation.

Price Controls—No action.

Rent Controls—The present inadequate system of rent control will be extended another year.

Military Training—No action.

Housing—Despite the continuing shortage of adequate low cost housing, the Taft-Ellender-Wagner long range housing bill will be kept in deep freeze by congressional leaders. So will national health insurance legislation to provide low cost medical care for the general public.

St. Lawrence Waterway—Already defeated.

Taxes—The Republican $6,800,000,000 tax reduction bill, which has passed the House, will be reduced to about $4,000,000,000 in the Senate. Despite Senate changes President Truman will veto the tax bill, and unless Republican leaders write an excess profits tax into the measure, to make it more attractive to Democrats and GOP liberals, Senate leaders will not be able to muster the two-thirds majority needed to override the veto.

Federal Aid to Education—This legislation, providing for an increase in teachers' pay and other purposes, will be enacted after a hot battle.

Marshall Plan—Congress will finally enact legislation similar to that recommended by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, providing for an expenditure of $5,300,000,000 for one year, to be administered by an independent agency.

Inflation Controls—Chairman Jesse Wolcott of the House Banking Committee will continue to sit on legislation to control installment buying which passed the Senate during the special session. This bill is a dead duck. So is legislation giving the Federal Reserve Board authority to limit bank credit by increasing bank reserves. The bank credit bill is bitterly opposed by the big bankers.

Unless a miracle happens this will be the record of the second session of the 80th Congress.

Note—Congress at least will vote Statehood to Hawaii.

Merry-Go-Round

HERE is the Presidential slate of that unreconstructed rebel, Chip Robert: Jim Folsom of Alabama for President; Ellis Arnall of Georgia for Vice President; Pappy O'Daniel of Texas for Secretary of State; Claude Pepper of Florida, Attorney General. Adds Chip: "We'll use Henry Wallace as a spare." . . . Congressional clerks almost had to revive members of the Joint Congressional Economic Committee from shock when hard-bitten Jesse Wolcott of Michigan said he now might be in favor of price controls. What broke down this inveterate foe of price controls was the increase in steel prices.

New Hampshire a Springboard

THE NEW HAMPSHIRE primary next Tuesday, as the first in the country, is important in itself. If either of the contenders, Governor Dewey and Harold Stassen, wins strikingly, it will give the winner some psychological momentum in the country as a whole.

For judging the New Hampshire primary on a national basis, the pertinent local facts are: Dewey and Stassen are the only formal contenders; both have strong committees working for ther [illegible] contest between their followings is heated, and a strikingly large vote is expected.

One factor is the strong movement for General Eisenhower that was built up before he took himself out of the race. Both the Dewey and Stassen sides have tried to take over the Eisenhower following, but there was no mass conversion. Rather more of the Eisenhower following has gone to Dewey than to Stassen. Two candidates for delegate to the national convention continue to run as pledged to Eisenhower.

The number of delegates to be elected is 8. A well-informed local judgment, expressed some days ago, thinks that, as between Stassen and Dewey, the delegation will be divided; in what proportion will appear next Tuesday. The same judgment thinks that Stassen strengthened himself by the personal appearance he made in the State.

Elastic Instructions

THIS judgment, if it is borne out next Tuesday by a result interpreted as a convincing demonstration of Stassen strength, gives to the New Hampshire primary an additional importance. For this primary is the first in a series that will go on through March, April and May, until close to the convention.

These primaries cannot directly determine the presidential nomination. Not all the States hold them, and the primary laws vary from State to State. Most of them are so flexible that they do not firmly bind delegates to support the candidates for the presidential nomination who carry the primaries.

Nevertheless, primaries are important, both for their direct results and for the indirect effect on party leaders, national and local. If primaries are largely attended, and thus show interest on the part of Republican voters, as seems to be the case in New Hampshire; or if the sum of the primaries shows a trend; or if they reveal in any considerable number of States striking strength on the part of one candidate or weakness on the part of another—in such cases party leaders will take notice.

This bears on the position of Stassen in the Republican picture as a whole. He is the one candidate who has campaigned vigorously in a large number of States. And already, in advance of results in the form of primary elections, his campaigning has borne some fruit. An impression has been made on local party leaders by the size and enthusiasm of the audiences that attend his meetings, and by the apparent appeal he and his ideas have for young voters, possibly in part because of his own relative youth. This favorable impression on local party leaders is taken into account by national leaders.

Dewey Given Edge

STASSEN'S position would be further elevated if he had conspicuous success in the primaries about to begin. As these are awaited, the Republican picture remains much the same as from the beginning, with Taft and Dewey much in the lead.

As to which has more delegates in sight, there is contention on the part of the respective sides and partisans, and difference of estimate on the part of neutral observers. All agree that neither has in sight a majority of the convention, perhaps hardly a third in either case. While the estimated numbers of delegates for each do not differ greatly, present speculation tends to think Dewey has more, and current polls seem to bear this out.

Yet Taft has potential delegate strength of a sort not readily measurable in polls. Part of it is within the Republican membership of Congress, especially the House. In the selection of delegates, Republican members of the House are likely to have a large hand; the geographical districts from which delegates are elected correspond with the congressional districts, and the Representative in Congress is likely to have weight locally.

Tonsillectomy Terror

By Alton L. Blakeslee

Associated Press Science Writer

NEW YORK, March 6.—Tonsil operations, wrongly handled, often make a child neurotic or emotionally sick, Dr. Lester L. Coleman warns.

The wrong handling, he says, is in failure by doctors or parents to prepare the child emotionally for the operation, or in fibbing to him about it. Terror and fright from the unexpected can bring on serious emotional troubles.

Dr. Coleman, an ear, nose and throat specialist, told a meeting at the New York Academy of Medicine that some of these troubles appear soon, while others may be delayed for years.

The immediate effects, he said, may be queer changes in behavior, night terrors, distrust of parents, disobedience, hostility or obsessions. A child may be afraid to go to sleep, remembering the anesthetic and that something bad happened while he was "asleep" in the hospital.

Psychologists have traced some neurotic behavior in adults to the emotional wounds suffered in childhood tonsil operations. Also, children may develop lifelong fear and distrust of doctors, hospitals and anesthesia. The danger of emotional wounds is greatest in very young children, under 4 years old, he said.

To avoid the bad emotional after effects, he suggests:

Give the child an honest explanation of why the operation has to be done. Try to avoid surprise and confusion at the hospital. Tell him to expect to see people in white gowns, with masks, and why. Describe the operating room. Explain that the anesthetic is to save him from pain, and that the sleep will be short.

Caused by Cruelty

A VAST number of patients, said Dr. Coleman in discussing other phases of his work, have no physical cause for troubles with their nose, ears or throat. In others, the emotional problems may make real physical ailments worse.

One woman was actually allergic to her husband's personality, he continued. She had a badly congested nose, as in a constant cold.

But this disappeared when her husband broke his leg and was taken to the hospital. It returned when he returned.

Investigation showed the husband was an alcoholic, and was physically cruel to her when intoxicated. Her nose trouble stopped after her husband began treatment to find the cause of his drinking and to put it under control.

Loss of voice or ringing of the ears are sometimes due only to emotional conflicts, Dr. Coleman added, and the treatment must recognize this. On the other hand, some persons labeled as psychiatric cases may really have a physical or organic cause for their actions or symptoms, he cautioned.

"The physician or surgeon should be alert to both the physical and emotional causes of symptoms. And when indicated, he should use the psychotherapist as he would any specialist in medicine to diagnose the trouble and overcome it."

A DEVICE to convert any hospital or home bed into a rock-a-bye bed is announced by Dr. N. Mininberg of Stamford, Conn., president of the Oscillation Manufacturing Co. A bed with rocking motion is used in some cases of infantile paralysis, fractures or prolonged bed stays, to aid blood circulation. The motor-driven oscillator, he said, is detachable, so that it can be moved from bed to bed or room to room in a hospital, can even be used in private homes.

Poor vision in one eye is apparently involved in many automobile accidents at intersections, says the Public Health Bureau of the American Optometric Association. In a study of California drivers, selected at random, involved in fatal intersection accidents, one third had poor vision in one eye, it said. Thirty out of 33 drivers had their accidents on the side of the defective eye. Danger signals of inadequate vision in one eye, the bureau said, could be a tendency to hit curbs on turning, or misjudgment in parking.

Shoes, for the slogging infantrymen, that will keep feet from getting tired so easily, are sought in research at the Army Medical Department field research laboratory, Fort Knox, Ky. So far, experimental shoes do not appear to prevent corns, but further tests may show that they lessen the strain on bones of the feet and make marching easier, Dr. Ray G. Daggs, director of research at the laboratory, told an American Chemical Society meeting.

Soot can be consumed by exposing it to atomic hydrogen. The technique is not practical for removing carbon deposits, as the experiments were made in a very high vacuum, but there is a lot of scientific interest in the test as gaseous hydrocarbon products were formed having as many as five carbon atoms in a chain, report G. M. Harris and A. W. Tickner of the University of Saskatchewan, Canada, in Nature.

The mystery of forces inside the nucleus of the atom, forces apparently neither gravitational nor electrical, will be investigated by Howard L. Schultz, assistant professor of physics at Yale, using the new million-volt tuned straight line accelerator of electrons. As negatively charged electrons shoot past the positively charged nuclei of atoms, they are bent out of a straight path. Some make direct hits and are absorbed, but the ones that shoot around the nucleus like a comet around the sun are acted on by forces stronger than any known forces as the distance betwee . the two bodies becomes extremely small.

The crystal set days of radio may come back. This may be made possible by use of crystals of germanium, a rare element, half-way between a stone and a metal, which acts as a rectifier of radio waves, and amplified electron emission. Dr. Dallas T. Hurd, of the General Electric Research Laboratories, states germanium crystals will make smaller radios possible and that some research men think they will replace radio tubes.

When we learn the trick that is now known by the most humble plant, how to separate economically the atoms in the burned-out substances carbon dioxide and water and rebuild them into high energy compounds, the changes wrought in human welfare may make the accomplishments of the atomic age appear dwarfed by comparison, declared Dr. Edwin B. Matzke, professor of botany, Columbia University, at the Cooper Union Forum. Synthetic fuels and basic food materials will become possible, he said.

Air refreshers to counteract odors now can be distributed through air-conditioning systems, or by other equipment in non-air-conditioned rooms. The chemicals rejuvenate "tired" air. The air gets tired, in the sense of being offensive to the nose, from smoke or from minute quantities of odors given off by rugs, woodwork, electric wiring and even telephones and chairs.

Fruits and vegetables can be preserved either by taking off the water, dehydration, or by quick-freezing. The Agriculture Department laboratory at Albany, Calif., is combining the methods. Some water is removed, and then the food is frozen. Among advantages, the department reports, are savings in weight and bulk and less destruction of tissues by large ice crystals which may form when a good deal of water is present. Vitamins and flavor are said to be virtually undamaged.

Norwegian scientists have a jelly, made from seaweed, that swells in water. Half of 1 per cent added to water will jell the entire mass so that it can be sliced. Similar starches are made in other countries, from seaweed, but the Norwegians claim no other swells nearly so well. The stuff is used for making nearly 1000 different products.

Matter of Fact

Stassen Casts Die at Two Birds

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

THE HABIT has grown up of lightly discounting Harold Stassen as a youthful political amateur whom the Republican professionals will eat for breakfast at Philadelphia. Among the professionals, however, a quite different theory has gained ground rapidly in the past month. The new theory pictures Stassen as one of the toughest professionals in the business, and a bolder gambler than any of his rivals.

Unlike most preconvention theories about candidates, this one actually seems to be supported by the facts. Stassen has kept his name before the public. He has kept his candidacy building steadily despite handicaps. And he has now maneuvered himself into a remarkable and little-understood position. For he may be able to deal a heavy blow to one or both of the front-runners, Governor Dewey and Senator Taft. And even if he cannot then make the grade himself, he will have an excellent chance for the Vice Presidency on a ticket headed by any Republican except Taft or Dewey.

The New Hampshire primary this week, in which both Stassen and Dewey are bidding for New Hampshire's eight delegates, will give some notion whether Stassen carries enough weight with his party to make his strategy stick. But more important tests will be the Ohio primary on May 4, in which he is pitted against Senator Taft in the latter's own bailiwick, and the Oregon primary on May 21, in which Stassen will again challenge Dewey.

Could Be Lethal

THE OHIO situation has already been well publicized. Stassen is gunning for 10 to 12 delegates from Ohio's 53. He has entered 23 candidates in the race, concentrating them in the industrial districts where Taft is believed weakest. Thus he has Stassen men running in such big towns as Youngstown, Dayton, Springfield, Toledo, Akron and Canton. He has also entered one delegate-at-large, the popular former Chief Justice Carrington T. Marshall, whose name is expected to help the Stassen slate.

Taft spokesmen claim that Stassen is butting his head against a stone wall in Ohio, that the Republican organization is absolutely solid for Taft, and that Stassen will be lucky to capture a single delegate. Stassenites assert with equal vehemence that there are serious rifts in the Ohio Republican organization just below the top level, and that there is mounting enthusiasm for Stassen among the rank and file.

At any rate, the Ohio Stassen group, headed by his henchman, Earl Hart, is hard at work, and Stassen himself will descend on Ohio March 18 for a series of speeches in the most hotly contested districts.

If the Stassen showing in Ohio is poor—two or three delegates—his gamble will have failed. But if he succeeds in capturing 10 or 12 delegates from Taft, he will have dealt the Ohio Senator a blow from which it is difficult to see how Taft can recover.

The Next Alley

MOREOVER, a Stassen success in Ohio will increase the chances for a Stassen success in later primaries, and particularly against Dewey in the crucial Oregon primary.

A considerable number of the younger men in the Oregon Republican organization are all out for Stassen. Republican National Committeeman Ralph Cake has even flatly predicted privately that Stassen will win. If that happens, only a month before the convention, Stassen will have hurt Dewey almost as badly as his supporters hope to hurt Taft in Ohio.

Thus it is the Stassen strategy to maim, or at least seriously wound, both the leading contenders, at the same time inheriting the strength they lose. Obviously this strategy has not endeared him to either Dewey or Taft. It is hardly to be expected that after such treatment either man will throw his support to Stassen in the event of a deadlock.

Indeed, Taft supporters are already circulating the report, no doubt somewhat colored by wishful thinking, that negotiations are under way to prevent the mutual disaster of a deadlock. It is hinted that the search is on for some formula for assuring that if a deadlick threatens, one or the other of the two men will bow out.

Nice Second Money

WHETHER or not there is any substance in this report, Stassen's strategy obviously amounts to a bold, all-or-nothing gamble. The gamble may fail—indeed, the odds are against its success. But if it succeeds, Stassen will have at least an outside chance for the grand presidential prize. And, failing that, he will have an excellent chance for the consolation prize, the vice presidential nomination.

For the betting is now heavily on Senator Vandenberg if the long-heralded Taft-Dewey deadlock does develop. There is reason to believe that if Vandenberg were nominated, Stassen might gladly accept the half a loaf of second place on the Vandenberg ticket.

He has recently compared Vandenberg to Abraham Lincoln. He could swing a sizable bloc of delegates to Vandenberg at the convention. He would thus be an entirely logical running mate for the Michigan Senator. But there is no doubt that, at least for the present, he still has his eyes firmly fixed on the first prize.

It Was Slavery in '60

Similar Split Elected Lincoln

By Jack Steele

REPUBLICAN leaders, who have been watching the three-way break in the Democratic Party with unconcealed glee, recalled today that a strikingly parallel split in 1860 made possible the election of the first Republican President—Abraham Lincoln.

The Civil War President won the 1860 election and became the first member of his party to occupy the White House, although he polled only 40 per cent of the popular vote. The Democratic "majority" split the remaining 60 per cent among three candidates.

Furthermore, that Democratic fiasco opened the way for a quarter century of Republican power that lasted until 1884, when the Democrats finally healed their differences and the wounds of the Civil War to elect Grover Cleveland.

The 1860 election scramble produced no candidate comparabel to Henry Wallace, but otherwise it was the outcome of a situation closely similar to that developing now in Democratic ranks.

Republican leaders, noting that the regular Democratic nominee—Stephen A. Douglas—wound up with only twelve electoral votes in 1860, are hoping that this precedent will be matched next November.

Northern and Southern Democratic split asunder in 1860, as today. Then it was the slavery issue, which was soon to precipitate the Civil War. The result was to put three Democratic candidates into the field.

The first Democratic convention of 1860 met in Charleston, S. C., and broke up after 57 ballots failed to produce a nominee. Douglas led on every ballot but the Southerners blocked his nomination.

The Northern wing of the party then held a convention in Baltimore and nominated Douglas. He had defeated Lincoln in the Illinois Senatorial race two years previously—the contest which produced the famed Lincoln-Douglas debates in which Douglas sought to straddle the slavery issue.

The more extreme Southern Democrats responded by nominating John C. Breckenridge of Kentucky, then the Vice President, whose pro-slavery views suited them better than the Douglas straddle.

Border State "moderates" also came up with a nominee, John Bell of Tennessee, who ran on a "Constitutional Union" ticket.

Lincoln polled 1,866,000 votes and, despite his lack of a popular majority, won the election with 180 electoral votes. Douglas with only Northern Democratic backing, received 1,375,000 votes but only 12 electoral votes.

Breckenridge, with his strong Southern support, got 72 electoral votes, although his popular strength was only 845,000. Bell ended up with 39 electoral votes—three times as many as Douglas—although he carried only three states, Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia.

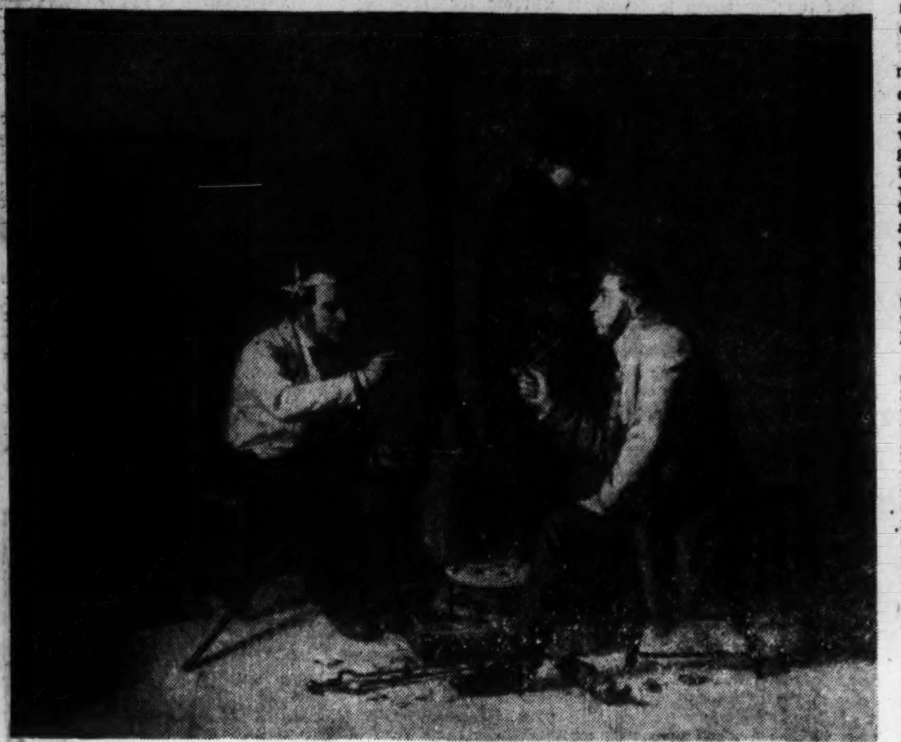
Works Recatalogued and Rehung

Corcoran Traces American Art



"The Long Story," by William Sidney Mount, at the Corcoran Gallery

By Jane Watson Crane

IT OFTEN HAPPENS that the closest approach to an artist's intent is through his sketches. Currently the Corcoran Gallery is exhibiting European drawings of the Sixteenth to Nineteenth Centuries. From a private collection in New York, they have not previously been shown publicly in this country.

Most of the 62 entries are by French, Italian Dutch, and Flemish artists. They range from quick sketches to finished studies, some recognizable for later paintings. Many names will be familiar—Tintoretto, Veronese, Jan Brueghel, van Ostade, Claude Lorrain, Forain, and Delacroix.

But do not let this be a journey in search of names. One of the virtues of the collection is that it reveals the quality of work by some of the lesser known. The exhibit, which will run to April 11, will be followed by a show of American drawings and water colors from the Corcoran's own collection, dating from the Eighteenth Century to the present.

Since the Clark gift added many European works, it is sometimes forgotten that the Corcoran has from the start been primarily dedicated to American art. In a past era when collectors were scouting for European old masters and starting museums wholly with sepulchral casts from the antique, this was unusual. There are still surprisingly few places in this country where one can get anything like a comprehensive view of American art.

Picture of Progress

DESPITE many gaps, one can get a pretty good picture of the progress of American painting here at the Corcoran. We emphasize this now, because the works have recently been overhauled, recatalogued and rehung. Armed with the new handbook a tour, whether it be an introduction or a reappraisal, is worthwhile.

Some paintings, such as Charles Bird King's "Portrait of Henry Clay" and Jasper Cropsey's "Washington's Headquarters on the Hudson," have been brought to light from the recesses of storage. Others, notably S. F. B. Morse's "The Old House of Representatives" are featured as never before.

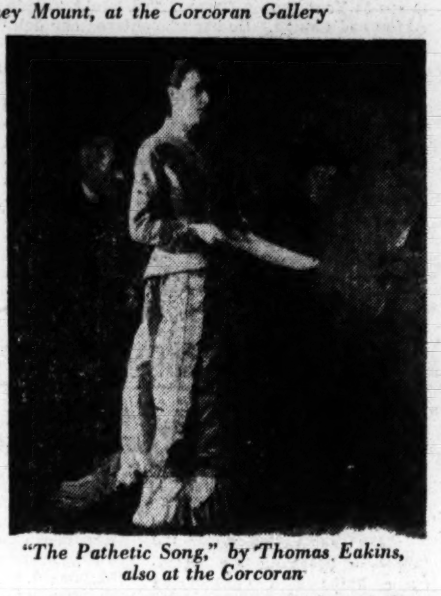
The Morse painting, which is huge, is placed so that one looks into it from across the corridor. The artist, better known as inventor of the telegraph, is one of the most remarkable figures this country has produced. Most of his paintings were portraits, and extremely good ones. The room depicted in the Corcoran canvas is still preserved at the Capitol. The work is of considerable historic interest, with 86 legislators of the time portrayed.

Among the early portraits in the first gallery is one of "Jacob Fowle" by Copley, which aptly illustrates the artist's more rugged style in contrast to later portraits in the European manner. Despite an elegant red coat and white ruffles, the straightforward likeness suggests an individual closer to the soil than his dress would imply.

Jennys Portrait

EVEN MORE unmistakably American in character is the uncompromising early Nineteenth Century portrait, "Woman With a Fan" by William Jennys, a 1947 purchase. The Corcoran is fortunate in having also a number of paintings of historic figures, some of the best being the least pretentious.

From portraits the progress is to the big majestic landscapes, and to the genre or popular paintings (at their best in a work such as Mount's "The Long Story"). There are descents to banal illustrations, as in the work of J. G. Brown of the Victorian era. But in the same period American painting could attain to the heights of an Inness landscape.



"The Pathetic Song," by Thomas Eakins, also at the Corcoran

There are paintings, all too few, by the giants—Homer, Eakins, and Ryder—each utterly different, their unassailable integrity the only common ground. There are glimpses of the work of Whistler ("Battersea Beach") and Sargent (both landscape and portrait) and most rewarding examples by the sensitive Blakelock.

The Famous 'Eight'

APPROACHING the contemporary, there is representation by both romanticists and realists, including the famous "Eight." One recalls the names that had luster in their day—Weir, Twachtman, Chase, Hassam, Melchers—their popularity now declined. Among those of our own time, there are the successive Biennial winners, among them Maurice Sterne, Franklin Watkins, Alexander Brook, John Heliker and Walter Stuempfig, whose nostalgic "Two Houses" was purchased in 1947.

As a corollary to stressing American art, the Corcoran has also from the start been committed to encouragement and support of contemporary American artists. Consistent with this aim are the Biennials, the current local shows, and its sales policy.

The gallery takes no commission on sales, but has a member of the staff, Mrs. E. B. Cleveland, constantly on hand to promote purchases. In 1947 over $9000 was taken in and handed over to artists, almost half from Biennial sales. The local annual brought in $1227, and the continuous water colors shows by Washington artists, $1050.

As figures go, these are not impressive. But they are encouraging in view of a generally slack art market and a strongly held illusion that art is a luxury without relation to ordinary living.

Art Notes

Haitians Show Broad Skills

THOSE who saw the exhibition of Haitian paintings at the United Nations Club earlier this season will find the contrasting show now at the Pan American Union. The first represented the primitive or self-taught, the second the work of those with various degrees of training. Both exhibits stemmed from the Art Center at Port-au-Prince.

Most sophisticated of the present group are Leon Agnant's "Musician" and the remarkable series of drawings and designs by Lucien Price. George Remponeau's and Maurice Borno's paintings are somewhat reminiscent of the modern Mexicans and Cubans, and the quiet landscape of Father Parisot is more traditional. By all odds the greatest interest here was aroused by Price's work, which incidentally is the only approach to abstraction in the group.

Charles Seymour, jr., assistant curator of the National Gallery, will give an illustrated lecture at the Watkins Gallery, American University, next Friday at 8:30 p. m., to which the public is invited. In connection with the modern sculpture show, he will speak on "Western Sculpture: Experiment and Tradition."

On March 16 at the university, Boris Margo will start a special course on "Art and Imagination: a Psychological Approach," which he will conduct to May 22. Primary aim is to help the student to discover the art form in which he can best express his own ideas. This will be artist Margo's third visit to American University. A dual exhibition of his own work will open March 7, one unit in the Watkins Gallery on the campus, the other in the Sloan Room in the Administration Building of the Graduate School, 1901 F st. nw.

NEW OPENINGS this week include paintings by Karl Knaths, Bernice Cross and John Piper at the Phillips Gallery and a one-man show of paintings by Edward Rosenfeld at the Whyte Gallery, 1518 Connecticut ave. nw. Opening this afternoon at the National Collection of Fine Arts, Natural History Building, Constitution ave. at 10th st. nw., is the big annual of the Washington Water Color Club, which will continue on view through March 28.

Since the recent dramatic case of painting forgery in Holland, New York's Metropolitan Museum has reported a big increase in inquiries about scientific methods of testing and analysis of paintings. This prompted the museum to put on a demonstration to give the layman some insight into the mysteries of a subject with fascination for many.

Opening March 10 at the United Nations Club is an exhibition of paintings by Marcella Comes, Washington artist. Many portraits are included. Miss Comes studied art at the Carnegie Institute in Pittsburgh and later in Europe. This is her fifth one-man show.

An exhibition by the Index of American Design will be placed on display tomorrow for a week at the Jewish Community Center, 16th and Q sts. nw. The collection, which includes fabrics, art works, examples of craftsmanship and other items of early Americana, will be shown in connection with the National Folk Festival, which will be held Wednesday in Cafritz Auditorium at the Center.

Repin Paintings

Moscow, March 6 (AP).—Two generally unknown works of the Russian Painter I. E. Repin have been found and hung in the state galleries in Moscow.

One is a painting of Repin's small daughter. It was finished in Paris in 1874 and presented to N. M. Shvernik, president of the presidium of the Supreme Soviet by Boleslaw Bierut, president of Poland.

The Magazine Rack

By Katharine Graham

TIME celebrates its twenty-fifth birthday this week with a special section devoted partly to its history and partly to some philosophical ruminations about the role of a conveyor of news in modern society.

In times past news was adequately circulated when the women met at the well, says Time. If one of them said, "Piers is at it again," the others knew who Piers was and what it was he was engaged in. Today Time endeavors to be the modern woman at the well—in telling the news as though it comes from one person and is being relayed to an individual who is an expert in nothing, so that he can use it.

Use it how? "The decisions of the twentieth century rest with the people. To act they have to know and care," Time answers.

In attempting to evaluate their own success in their endeavor to make a better informed public, the editors say: yes, no and maybe. Yes, Time has been a commercial and journalistic success. No, the public is not well enough informed. But maybe, if Time says, "It's a dreadful and wonderful world; some of it makes sense, some nonsense; to tell which is which is what man has a mind for," then maybe it communicates something at least felt by the editors, they conclude.

HARPER'S this month is so good it can be safely read from cover to cover.

Its lead story and 27 pages are devoted to an account of the mine disaster in Centralia, Ill., in which 111 men lost their lives a year ago. It's a masterpiece of documentary reporting by John Bartlow Martin.

Everyone concerned had known for months and even years that the mine, Centralia No. 5, was dangerous, states Martin. The miners had appealed for help to their State government, the Federal Government, their employer and their own union—and had obtained none.

Finally they wrote to Gov. Dwight H. Green, "This is a plea to you, to please save our lives, to please make the Department of Mines and Minerals enforce the laws at the No. 5 mine of the Centralia Coal Co. . . ." Of the four men who signed the letter, only one survived the explosion.

Martin blames no one individual. If there was a criminal, it was bureaucracy. "Perhaps this immovable juggernaut is the true villain in the piece," he says. "Certainly all those in authority were too remote from the persons whose lives they controlled. And this is only to confess once more that in making our society complex we have made it unmanageable."

Also recommended are a deft profile of Walter Reuther, able red-headed leader of the United Auto Workers, by James A. Wechsler called "Labor's Bright Young Man;" "What Makes Wallace Run?" by a former editor of the New Republic, William Harlan Hale, and "Everybody's Problem: Prices, Wages, Profits" by Leon Keyserling, vice chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers.

WHEN will Russia have the atomic bomb? Look's editors asked an atomic engineer and an expert on Russian economics and found that Russia will probably make atomic bombs by building plutonium factories comparable to our Hanford-type plants rather than attempt an Oak Ridge, which requires greater industrial advance. The experts estimate 1954 as the earliest date at which real atomic armament could be achieved in this manner. But by the time Russia produces her first bomb, we should have a stockpile equal to 18 years of Russian production.

On a more frivolous note, Look follows up the bomb story with one on the fancy dress ball given here by the Argentine Ambassador and Mme. Ivanissevich for their daughter, Elena.

NEARLY 200 of Hitler's best scientific brains are working for the United States Army in this country, according to Senator Harry F. Byrd of the Armed Services Committee in the American. They have been allowed to bring with them some 150 wives, children and mothers-in-law, but are listed as enemy aliens with no entry visa. And it may be said, according to the Senator, that they are revolutionizing the entire character of air warfare, due to the fact that the Germans started research in supersonics years before we did.

As most harassed mothers know, size 5 in a little girl's dress can mean almost anything. In the near future, size 5 will be the same no matter where the purchase is made and much waste effort and worry will be saved all around.

This is due to a new set of size standards being adopted by the garment industry with the cooperation of the National Bureau of Standards, writes Director Edward U. Condon of front-page fame in a highly noncontroversial piece in the same magazine. Washers and plastics are also soon to be standardized at a saving of millions of dollars.

Two Artists Can Boast Long Careers

NEW YORK, March 6 (U.P.).—The artistic careers of both Max Lieberman and John Sloan have been exceptionally long and prolific. Both attained the highest honors in their respective countries. Both became famous and exerted their greatest influence during their impressionistic periods. And both have now their retrospective shows in New York.

Max Lieberman started under the influence of the French pre-impressionist Courbet around 1872. Following the trend of French paintings, he developed slowly but logically toward impressionism, the revolutionary artistic trend of his time.

In the early '90s, when impressionism was at its peak, he introduced it into Germany and became there its greatest representative. As he carried forward the European tradition in painting his influence grew stronger and stronger until it transcended the frontiers of his country and even the European continent. His show is at French & Co.

It was around 1908 that John Sloan started to paint in the impressionistic style. He soon became a major influence in American art. In Paris at that time post-impressionism already succeeded impressionism as the vanguard movement in art. But Sloan did not want to have anything to do with that. He prided himself on never having been influenced by his European contemporaries and declared repeatedly that he had never been in Europe and would never go there to see what the European painters were doing.

In the course of the last 25 years he changed his style twice. In both cases he refused to follow the general trend of European painting. After he abandoned impressionism, his influence dwindled rapidly. His show is at the Kraushaar Galleries.

Painting Pastor Gets B With Crude Materials

Westbrook, Me., March 6 (U.P.).—An old grapefruit can serves as a palette and a stepladder as an easel for the landscape oil painting of a 38-year-old Methodist pastor.

The Rev. Frederick L. Niles, who carries his paints and brushes in a battered shoe box, says that painting "sharpens one's interest in the creation and the works of God."

"I don't see how anyone can paint and not have any concept of religion," he says.

'Best of Art,' As Chosen By N. Y. Critic

NEW YORK, March 6 (U.P.).—The artistic images of the past are more familiar to us than those of our own time. We resent as disruptive innovations the new artistic conceptions. Yet they keep on tantalizing us.

We dimly surmise that in their cryptic language these perplexing shapes, colors and lines express many deep secrets of our life that none but the artists' undeterred eyes could perceive. And we have the vague feeling that if we understood and enjoyed modern art our life would be richer and happier than it is now. We would cease to be strangers in our own world.

An intelligent and concientious attempt to bring modern American painting closer to our life has been made by Emily Genauer, art critic of the World-Telegram. Miss Genauer has chosen 50 paintings out of 50,000 she saw in New York shows last year.

She discussed every one of the 50 with its painter and then, mixing her own expert views with the artist's authoritative explanation, she wrote a comment to every canvas. Reproductions and text have been put together in book form and published by Doubleday & Co. under the title of "Best of Art."

That "Best of Art" succeeds in opening our minds and hearts for the products of American painting is of exceptional importance today. Because, as Miss Genauer has rightly denoted, "American painters are (now) more deeply concerned with the woes of the world than ever before. . . . They are given to big and weighty statements. . . "

Peace and Beauty In South Carolina

BENEATH SO KIND A SKY: THE SCENIC AND ARCHITECTURAL BEAUTY OF SOUTH CAROLINA, photographs by Carl Julien, introduction by Chapman J. Milling (U. of South Carolina Press; $10).

Carolina charm is not confined to Charleston, as this volume, consisting of 92 photographs and a brief text, easily persuades us. The people, mountains, plains and streams, the history, the houses and the modes of living are described in most affectionate terms by the author, and the photographer does a handsome job of merging what meets the eye with what speaks to the heart. It adds up to a very compelling invitation to visit South Carolina.

National Problem Tackled

Timely Volume Evaluates FEPC

By Francis Biddle

Former U. S. Attorney General

ALL MANNER OF MEN. By Malcolm Ross. Reynal and Hitchcock. 314 pp. $3.50.

MALCOLM ROSS succeeded Msgr. (now Bishop) Francis J. Haas as chairman of the Fair Employment Practices Committee, set up by President Roosevelt during the war to forbid discrimination because of race, color, creed or national origin.

With substantially no powers of enforcement, the committee kept discrimination from putting men and women out of work in many segments of industry, in the North and in the South. Its work was objective and practical, largely in the field of negotiation and persuasion. Constantly under fire, chiefly from Southern Congressmen, its continuation under permanent form was finally blocked in 1945 after a long siege of fantastically intemperate and unfair attacks.

This book relates the committee's experience, and touches on something of the historical background of the relation between whites and Negroes in this country, in order to explain the fears and obsessions which find blind expression in the phrase "white supremacy."

Industrial Problem

ROSS CONCLUDES that the problem is essentially an industrial one, often entangled in the attitude of labor unions. White Southerners do not want Negroes to take their jobs, particularly if a time comes when there are fewer to go around. Talk of social equality is largely used for political ends, is an attempt to shift the discussion to the dark level of emotional incitement, and create a wholly false issue.

And the problem, as Ross points out, is no longer local or sectional, but national. The worst race riot during the war was in Detroit. In St. Louis, in 1944, Dwight Palmer, president of General Cable, persuaded white girls to let Negro girls work next to them. Today there is no segregation in that plant, and the proportion of Negro workers has increased from 11 per cent to 16 per cent.

Cautious liberals, particularly in the South, argue that Federal "interference" will accentuate the bitterness, that the acknowledged progress that is taking place should be left to the gradual improvement of time. The same thing was said when the National Labor Relations Act was being debated. Yet Federal action, after a bitter year or two, brought about collective bargaining.

Timely Volume

THE BOOK is extraordinarily timely, for presently Congress will again debate a permanent FEPC. And it will be debated against the background of a world watching to see whether Americans mean what they say, practice what they preach. When it was discussed before, The Washington Post said in an editorial: "The experience of the wartime FEPC has shown that it is possible to equalize job opportunity through governmental action, but that such action to be fully effective must be backed up by legislative authority." This conclusion, "all manner of men" support.

If we are to end the wretched discrimination in equal opportunity for jobs, the challenge must be met and solved on a national level, so as actually to realize, as President Roosevelt said the Constitution had provided, "a firm base upon which all manner of men, of all races and all colors and creeds, could build our solid structure of democracy."

Cases Relate Great Story Of Chautauqua

WE CALL IT CULTURE: THE STORY OF CHAUTAUQUA, by Victoria Case and Robert Ormond Case. (Doubleday; $3).

IN 1874 two good men from Camptown, N. J., and Akron started a Sunday School Teachers' Assembly on Lake Chautauqua, N. Y., and persuaded 40 persons to pay $6 apiece for a two-week summertime session. In 1924 an estimated 30 million attended similar assemblies in 12,000 towns. In the following year Chautauqua's popularity dropped sharply, and in another decade there wasn't a single one of the brown-tent shows left in any American Toonerville, Main Street or Our Town.

The original Chautauqua expanded, added correspondence courses, was granted the right to confer degrees, and heard such luminaries as Grant, Garfield, McKinley, Erskine, Lippmann, Debs. The idea was copied across the country.

Then the show was put under canvas and sent on the road. Greeley, Agassi Dickens, Ida M. Tarbell, Irvin Cobb and Winston Churchill were among those who climbed to the platform and let themselves be seen as well as heard. Millions of men and women must remember the hustle of Chautauqua week, the excitement of new faces in town, the awe of having some renowned writer, politician or scientist staying at Hotel Lakeside or Colonial Inn.

Under the terms of the local contracts, the entrepreneurs couldn't lose. They filled in their programs with magicians, bands, musical novelties and, above all, inspirational lectures, like Russell H. Conwell's "Acres of Diamonds," and other topics: "Why God Made Women," "The Broken Wedding Bell," "Cash, Conscience and Country" and "Pie, People and Politics."

Any system that supplied 6000 separate audiences for Conwell's "Acre of Diamonds" speech was not an unmixed blessing, though the authors find some things in its favor. At least it has bequeathed us this interesting book.

Why Women Fail in Music

MUSIC AND WOMEN, by Sophie Drinker. (Coward-McCann; $5.)

AFTER a considerable amount of historical and anthropological research, Mrs. Drinker explains why she believes womankind has not yet produced a Beethoven or Brahms and why there is not greater activity throughout all branches of musicianship by the gender.

In early phases of civilization and among primitive societies today, Mrs. Drinker finds that woman has in fact a prominent place in tribal music. This, she philosophizes, stems from the sex's traditional and mystical priority as mankind's mother.

The passing of matriarchy, and especially the happenstance of western religious development, has left today's woman "spiritually starved" and compelled to "accept men's formulations and men's music." A companion influence, she declares is our cultural overemphasis on virtuosity and the prima donna.

Mrs. Drinker is of course presenting a cause and [illegible] it in the most favorable light.—W. S. (AP).

Are Sports a Racket?

SAY IT AIN'T SO, JOE. Edited by Thomas L. Stix. Boni & Gaer. 342 pp. $3.

IF THE first World War was won "on the playing fields of Eton and Harrow," we may only pray that the dread third World War won't be lost in the horse parlors and bookie joints of New York, Chicago and Los Angeles.

A good test of the increasing cynicism of our age is the indifference with which the public takes fixed fights, fixed basketball and football games, fixed horse races and other spectator sports geared to fleece the public and corrupt the participants. About the only people who thoroughly enjoy contests of skill and endurance these days are the gangsters, gamblers and promoters who have muscled into the muscular arts on a billion-dollar basis.

An earlier and more decent America was brought up on the tradition of clean sports. As recently as 1919 the country was genuinely shocked and infuriated to learn that several ballplayers on the Chicago White Sox had been bribed to throw the World Series to the Cincinnati Reds.

A tearful newsboy went up to his convicted hero, Shoeless Joe Jackson, and pleaded, "Say it ain't so, Joe!" And that is the title Tom Stix has chosen for his aromatic nosegay of 17 caustic articles and stories dealing with the seamy side of sports.

About the only serious adverse criticism which can be leveled at this anthology is that it is an unbalanced picture, patently unfair to hundreds of thousands of decent kids in high schools and colleges who still play for the fun and the glory.

It is also unfair to a hard-pressed minority of the professionals who are at least as ethical as other businessmen in trying to keep their industry reasonably unbesmirched.

But granting that some athletes, coaches, promoters and arena owners have no larceny in their hearts, an increasing number are dead ringers for Rackety Rax, particularly in the prize-fight racket, as Paul Gallico points out in his sizzling expose of the manner in which Primo Carnera was used to swindle the public. Horse racing, like dog racing, has probably always been filthy. But it is astonishing to learn from Milton Gross how far the gambling syndicates have gone toward perverting college basketball.

On the evidence in this book, any honest grand jury would grant an indictment. S. N.

Wallack Books Bring $28,260 In N. Y. Sale

The library of Nathan N. Wallack of 3933 Military rd. nw., realized $28,260.50 when sold at auction at the Parke-Bernet Galleries, Inc., New York, this week. The collection, comprising 551 lots, included American first editions, autograph letters and manuscripts.

Highest price, $850, was brought by a copy of the privately printed first edition of Herman Melville's "John Marr and Other Sailors," which had been a Melville family copy and is believed to contain corrections in the author's own hand.

A log book kept by an officer, E. A. F. Vallete, aboard the "Constitution" ("Old Ironsides") during 1824-28, brought $700.

A copy of the first printed draft of the Confederate constitution and a copy of the privately printed first edition of Stephen Crane's first book, "Maggie, a Girl of the Streets," brought $600 each.

A signed copy of Edna St. Vincent Millay's "Renascence," one of 15 on Japan paper, brought $575; a first edition, first issue of Sir Isaac Newton's "Principia Mathematica," London, 1687, $570; and a first edition, first issue of Longfellow's "Voices of the Night," $525.

An Angry Man Trying to Be Fair

Farley Portrays Himself in Satire

By Sterling North

JIM FARLEY'S STORY. By James A. Farley. Whittlesey House. 388 pp. $3.50.

THE essence of this memoir is that Jim Farley thinks he might have been elected President in 1940. Roosevelt outmaneuvered his Postmaster General, and Jim, who had always been loyal to the President and the party, was deeply hurt. Thus Jim Farley's story is a painful attempt to be fair to "The Boss," interrupted by irrepressible outbursts of righteous indignation.

FARLEY

That Farley was badly treated by Roosevelt is often admitted even by some of Roosevelt's greatest admirers. The chairmanship of the national committee of either major party is a tough, thankless and often dirty job. It is a lightning rod which attracts the most shattering bolts from the other party and from reformers who hate machine politics and machine politicians.

Farley was indispensable to Roosevelt in 1932, extremely useful in 1936 and expendable in 1940. By 1944 his political star had set.

With that curious admixture of tough realism which was interwoven with Roosevelt's more admirable characteristics, the President correctly judged Farley's usefulness, and at the opportune moment cast him aside.

Now, quite without knowing it, Farley has given the world an almost satirical portrait of himself in these memoirs:

When elected in 1932, Roosevelt, thanking the workers in national committee headquarters, said "the major credit" belonged to Louis Howe and James Farley. Jim appends the remark, "I like to think he was right."

A Farley comment on the political payoff: "While many criticize the spoils system, I have always felt that it is just as easy to find a good Democrat as a good Republican or vice versa, and that the party in power should reward its own."

A Farley comment on early New Deal measures: "I had very little to do with his (Roosevelt's) daring program. I was not in on its formation."

Even more revealing, perhaps, are Farley's thoughts on various New Deal measures, and his reason for disliking some of them. He saw political dynamite in the court-packing scheme. He strongly advised against the purge of congressmen opposing it. And throughout most of the book his point of view seems to have been closer to that of the conservative Jack Garner than to that of the President.

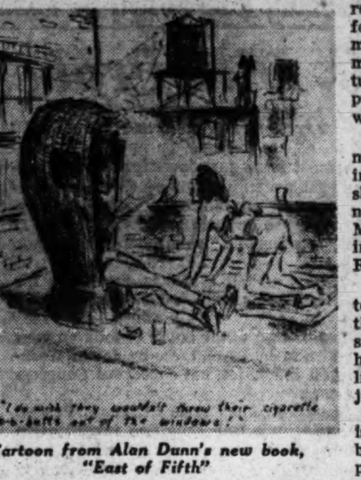
But the part of these memoirs which throw the strongest light upon Farley's character deal with his own presidential aspirations for 1940. How a man who could call the turn in election after election, State by State and almost precinct by precinct could possibly have imagined himself as presidential timber, few readers will be able to conceive.

This, however, does not excuse the method Roosevelt used to eliminate Farley (who even in this book compares the President in some of his early phases to Lincoln).

In another unconscious way, however, Farley gives evidence of the importance of Roosevelt and his own relative unimportance in the history of our Nation. None of the pages about the author are of any particular interest until he joins forces with Roosevelt. None of the closing pages after he broke with Roosevelt are of great interest, either. Only the years during which Farley hitched his political bandwagon to the Roosevelt star make exciting reading.

I disagree with the Roosevelt idolizers who say this book should never have been written, just as I disagree with those who for years maintained that some of the Lincoln papers should have been kept from the public. Nothing Secretary of War Stanton, for instance, thought about Lincoln materially lessened his stature in the final verdict of history. Nor will Farley's revelations radically diminish Roosevelt's.

Farley saw a side of Roosevelt which was far less glamorous or noble than the side turned toward the public. But how any American President can avoid being a politician and at times an opportunist, is a question few can answer—least of all a professional politician like James A. Farley.



"I do wish they wouldn't throw their cigarette b-b-b-butts out of the windows!"
Cartoon from Alan Dunn's new book, "East of Fifth"

EAST OF FIFTH. By Alan Dunn. Simon & Schuster. 168 pp. $2.75.

THE luxurious misery of life in New York City (on the benzedrine-barbituate circuit) might be tragic if it were not so amusing.

Alan Dunn has just written and illustrated "East of Fifth," which he describes as "24 hours in the life of a typical 14-story apartment house."

Fifty-two frustrated families live in this semi-fashionable monkeyhouse just off Fifth Avenue where for $350 a month you can get cramped quarters (if you are willing to buy somebody's cast-off furniture in a black market sublet deal).

Upstairs, Mrs. Migrayne is throwing an elegant party. In a $95-a-month hole in the wall, the unrequited Miss Grayson is committing suicide. On the penthouse terrace there is a whiff of carbon monoxide (autumn is in the air). The Edwardses ("honest-to-goodness social registerites") are playing bridge for a quarter of a cent a point while inhaling Scotch mists, while the Jukeses in the basement are playing penny ante and swilling beer.

Peggy—"the pipe line"—is getting the low-down on the new tenants who have given up the struggle against nature-in-the-raw in Westchester and have just swapped apartments. Those liberal souls, the staff, have just figured the income of the newcomers at a paltry $10,000 a year, judging from their furniture.

Well, you get the general picture around the clock with the neurotics we call normal human beings. Telephone chatter, cocktail chatter, complaints to the management; the dull life of the Smiths and the Joneses. Tantalizing glimpses of love-nest habitues. Backstairs gossip in the basement. Death, marriage, courtship (as it is euphemistically called)—but no mention of imminent birth.

JAMES MADISON: THE NATIONALIST. By Irving Brant. Bobbs-Merrill. 484 pp. $6.

OF ALL the major founding fathers, one of the most difficult to visualize has been James Madison. Small, quiet, scholarly, hard-working, honest and shy, Madison has seemed to the average reader lacking in the elements of vibrant personality associated with national leadership.

BRANT

Yet a case could be made for the theory that of all the early Federalists, Madison was the most effective nationalist. Between 1780 and 1787 (the scope of this segment of the evolving Brant biography) Madison's every major move was toward a stronger federation with real power over the jealous, selfish, recalcitrant States.

As the author sums it up: "His aim was to convert the shadow of national power into reality . . . In Madison's ceaseless emphasis upon national dignity, in his faithfulness to the French alliance and the security of treaties, in his calls for military vigor, in his defense of western territories and the Mississippi, in the transfer of Virginia's empire to the Nation, in his attempts to create general revenues and fortify public credit, in his work for inland navigation and regulation of commerce—he was spreading the thought of common nationhood, a common citizenship, a mutual dependence, throughout the new Republic. Even in the Virginia Assembly, he was an American rather than a Virginian."

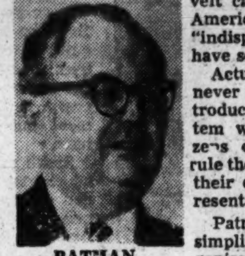
Brant writes with almost colloquial informality in his attempt to humanize a man who in too many biographies has been a stuffed shirt. As the youngest delegate to the Continental Congress, "just up from Princeton," Madison is shown as the best-informed man in Congress, the master strategist when the Revolution was in dire peril of collapsing.

On the more personal side, it is interesting to learn that Madison was even more serious than has previously been suspected in his desire to marry Kitty Floyd, a 15-year-old girl he met in Philadelphia. (Madison seemed to like young girls. Dolly, too, was greatly his junior).

But the major picture left with the reader is that of a crusading nationalist seeking to bring order out of chaos in effecting "a more perfect Union."

OUR AMERICAN GOVERNMENT. By the Honorable Wright Patman, M.C. Ziff-Davis. 143 pp. Cloth bound, $2.75. Paper bound, $1.50.

WHEN so nonpartisan a jury of critics as Baruch, Byrnes, Eisenhower, Tom Clark, Robert Taft, Phil Murray, Drew Pearson, Joe Martin, Harry S. Truman and Eleanor Roosevelt call a book about American Government "indispensable" it must have some merit.



PATMAN

Actually there has never been a better introduction to the system whereby the citizens of our Republic rule themselves through their duly elected representatives.

Patman has a gift for simplification and organization. His volume is packed with fascinating information about the history, legends, logic and functions of our Government. The distinguished Representative from Texas has answered the 1001 questions most frequently asked. Each answer consists of a brief, clear, readable paragraph containing the essential information.

Dividing the material into eight categories, Patman delves into the sources of our democracy, whets the appetite of the reader with a section entitled "Political Americana," clears up some misconceptions about the Constitution, outlines the functions of the major divisions of our Government: Legislative, Executive and Judiciary, and finally struggles to untangle the vast confusion existing in the public mind about the "independent offices, agencies and establishments."

All this is illustrated with facsimiles of important documents and excellent diagrams which show you at a glance how each major department of the Government is organized.

Now and then Patman asks himself a question which, though interesting, is scarcely of vital importance. For instance, Question 9. "Who was the only American to have signed the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution, the American Treaty with France and the Anglo-American Treaty ending the Revolution?" The answer, of course, is Benjamin Franklin.

There are only two minor errors in the volume. Patman apparently does not understand the Alabama Paradox (Question 375); and curiously enough, he has incorrectly answered Question 1001 (the last in the book). Nebraska's unicameral legislature has 43, not 24 members. This still gives the author a batting average of approximately .998.

Patman has an extensive and intensive knowledge of the Federal Government, especially the intricate workings of Congress, to which he has devoted more than a third of the volume.

This book should be distributed by the millions. It would revolutionize the study of civics, now the dullest course in any curriculum. Smuggled through the Iron Curtain, it would do more good than any other single volume to bring a little light to systematically misinformed areas of political illiteracy. If an informed electorate is the first essential to the maintenance of smoothly functioning democracy, Patman has done his country a major service.

Well, Look Who's Who

THE INTERNATIONAL WHO'S WHO, twelfth edition, 1948, London, Europa Publications, Ltd., 39 Bedford Square, W. C. 1. pp. 1032. $16.

FROM Aagaard, Christian Engelhardt (Danish diplomatist) to Zwicky, Fritz (Swiss physicist, the new International Who's Who is several hundred names richer than its predecessor.

Even with this increase of names, however, the publishers confess that "it has not been possible to obtain biographies of all whom we would wish to have included in this edition, as there are still certain parts of the world where it is difficult to establish the necessary contacts."

Such a one perhaps as Field Marshal Paulus, the Russian-captured German general turned Soviet stooge, for whom the concise entry concludes: "prisoner of war since January, 1943; joined League of German Officers September, 1943."

As there is no information subsequent to 1943 and no address given for the field marshal, it is evident that much of his correspondence, including the Who's Who questionnaire, is going unanswered these days.

More up to date biographies are given for such luminaries behind the curtain as Stalin, Molotov and Vishinsky.

Hundreds of other biographic sketches cover such divergent figures as American agronomists, Afghan politicians, Bolivian dramatists and French archeologists.

Concise, clearly printed, "The International Who's Who" is fascinating reading. That it is an invaluable reference tool for anyone concerned with international affairs goes without saying.

Reading and Writing

Brass Snorts at 'Mister Roberts'

"MUTINY," muttered the admiral in the seat behind me. We were previewing Tom Heggen's smash hit, "Mister Roberts," at the Alvin Theater in New York.

"They never got away with that stuff on any of my ships."

Not all the high Navy brass reacted that way. Scuttle-butt in the lobby between acts proved that even high-ranking officers can be human. Henry Fonda as "Mister Roberts" touched many hearts plastered with campaign ribbons.

The play, in my opinion, is even better than the best-selling novel from which it was adapted.

BOOK PUBLISHERS, book club personnel, authors and critics in New York this week have been annoyed by the blasts the clergy have leveled at "Raintree County" by Ross Lockridge, jr., January selection of the Book-of-the-Month Club, reasonably well reviewed by competent critics, lauded by the judges of the Book-of-the-Month, and winner of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer $125,000 novel prize.

While it is readily admitted that Lockridge isn't writing for children or fundamentalists, most competent critics seriously disagree with the intemperate accusations being leveled at the book by ardent religionists.

Some recent books, it is true, have been in bad taste. Some book jackets and some book advertisements have been cheap and vulgar.

As we have been pointing out in this column for many months, the so-called "historical" novel has reached an all-time low in pandering to moronic readers.

But a tendency of much greater danger to American democracy than a scattering of trashy novels is the threat of clerical censorship. With all due respect to the ethical motivation behind recent blasts from the pulpit, it should be remembered that this Nation still enjoys freedom of speech as well as freedom of religion.

WHILE GERMAN industrialists who plotted Nazi domination of the world continue to go scott free or escape with minor fines, and while American capital is once again being poured into German industry, it might be wise to review the case of "Treason's Peace," by Howard W. Ambruster (Beechhurst Press). Forty publishers were unwilling to risk publication of this attack upon I. G. Farben and its American affiliates. All of them feared libel suits.

Ignoring and scorning bribes, the author persisted until he found a courageous publisher. Not one libel suit has been filed. No major accusation in the book has been denied. But a scurrilous undercover campaign to suppress the book has continued ever since it first appeared.

If you want to know why German industrialists are not being punished and how certain American financial interests are lining up once again with Hitler's old pals, read "Treason's Peace"—the book 40 publishers didn't have the guts to publish.

KNOW HOW many separate little taxes you pay when you buy a pair of shoes? Four hundred, according to Casey and Helm, coauthors of "Slash These Taxes" (Duell, Sloan & Pearce). As you send in that March 15 income tax report, it may interest you to know that last year you worked at least three months for the Government.

Coffin Corner

MY SISTER, GOODNIGHT. By Gordon McDonnell. Little Brown. 247 pp. $2.50.

MARINE Major James Forake finds the body of a beautiful girl in Coldwater Canyon Alley. Impulsively, he takes it to the police station.

No amount of fancy explaining could make the police dismiss Forake as a suspect. The girl wore a shell necklace Forake made while overseas; she knew his friends, but the major declined knowing her. The major knew but one thing: he had fallen in love with the victim.

At long last a mystery that gathers suspense as fast as a rolling snowball and escapes crashing into a pitiful heap at the end.

SUDDEN FEAR. By Edna Sherry. Dodd Mead. 216 pp. $2.50.

MYRA HUDSON was wealthy in her own right but also a successful playwright. She was a brilliant woman and anyone who overlooked this factor was a fool—usually a ruined one after Myra was through.

Although in her mid-forties she married a young, extremely handsome second-rate actor. Everything was blissful until the fateful day that Myra learned of her husband's plan to murder her. She cunningly planned her husband's murder. One of them was going to be dead in the next two days.

Who was successful? Well, the author certainly deserves a pat on the back for her smooth plotting.

BLOOD ON THE BOSOM DIVINE. By Thomas Kyd. Lippincott. 224 pp. $2.50.

THE book will no doubt rent and sell well since the murder takes place in a burlesque show, but the mystery is as threadbare as the chorines' costumes.

The police are on hand to raid the place when "The Bosom" gets a well-aimed spear in her chest. The entire troupe tsked, tsked at the murder but no one was friendly enough with the lady to really care. The characters in this book are merely props and just as improbable as the chorines' dance steps.

You won't care whodunit or why.

3 Characters In Wartime

THE GESTURE, by John Cobb (Harper, $2.75).

HARRIS who clings to his principles, Whipple who clings to life, and Willie Turk, crack pilot and content to be nothing else, are the contrasting characters who furnish even more of the drama in this novel than the exciting wartime setting.

Whipple (Yale) and Harris (Harvard) have similar cultural backgrounds, but Harris is dedicated to a cause while Whipple schemes to save his skin.

It's not possible to compromise in a big way without compromising in lots of little ways, too; Whipple's infection spreads all through him, rots him. He could have helped Harris, or Willie, or Mooney, but what was the percentage?

Maybe he was right. "Coward," Harris called him, but at least he lived through it. And there's no getting around the facts that Harris failed and Whipple succeeded. Cobb lets his readers decide how much they cherish success.

WASHINGTON'S MOST COMPLETE HISTORY . . .
from its conception over Madeira glasses to its present position as world capital

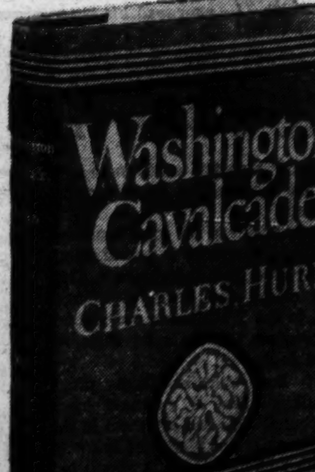
Washington Cavalcade
—CHARLES HURD



No city in the country has changed its social character as much as has Washington, D. C. Yet, in a very real sense, it has, since its founding, mirrored the events which have shaped the U. S., and the faces of those who have played their several parts in the American pageant.

Here is Washington Society in all its colorful detail—a brilliant tapestry of men and women who have influenced and have been infuenced by the life of our nation's capital. Mr. Hurd has written nostalgically of Washington, tracing its physical, social and political growth, capturing the spirit of each era.

$4.50 per copy

As a member of the N. Y. Times Washington Bureau, and as a member by marriage of an old Washington family, Charles Hurd has had a unique opportunity to observe Washington Society in exactly the right proportions.

He spent his boyhood in Oklahoma and began his newspaper career immediately after having finished college. He has been in Washington since 1929 with the exception of short periods with the Times London Bureau and Newsweek.

Jim Farley's

The Inside Story of National Politics

Here is the wide-open truth about two of the most controversial political figures in modern America: Franklin D. Roosevelt and Jim Farley. These are the facts concerning the man who put Roosevelt into the White House and built up one of the most brilliantly efficient party organizations this country has ever known.

The events and people Jim Farley talks about shaped American history for fifteen years—and are right behind today's headlines. This is breathtaking biography in the story of two titans who piled triumph upon triumph until their final falling out.

Beat Me, Pundit, Eight to the Bar

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

SO FAR, no one has mentioned the real danger involved in letting radio stations editorialize.

For a whole week, the Federal Communications Commission listened to witnesses argue whether or not there should be editorials over the radio. Yet no one was man enough to talk about the real menace. Maybe the thought was too horrible to face.

But face it we must. It's the prospect—nay, the inevitability—that if radio stations are allowed to broadcast their opinions, there will soon be singing editorials. Makes you gasp, doesn't it?

But there's no sense pretending that it won't happen. Let's not be ostriches about it. If radio stations can set advertising to music, and in jingles, they can and certainly will do it to opinions.

Chromatic Chrome

YOU KNOW how they sell a laundry soap like Duz. Sure as anything, the stations will carry over the technique. Suppose a broadcaster gets sore about monopolies. He'll let loose on the air waves with this:

U. S. Steel,
U. S. Steel,
Put U. S. Steel on your adding machine,
Out come the damndest profits you've seen;
When U. S. Steel gets in the swing,
U. S. Steel steals everything!

Suppose you've got a radio station down South, and you don't like the proposed civil rights legislation. You all know what you all's gwine ter do. You all's gwine ter sing:

Don' let 'em vote
If'n dollars dey lacks,
'Cause Mammy's lil' chillen like a
Big poll tax.

Suppose you have a radio station which, like many newspapers, feels it has to comment on every major event, but doesn't want to offend either side in a controversy. The radio can solve the problem just as well as the newspaper.

Let's say that John L. Lewis is stirring up a ruckus. You can let loose with a real trenchant opinion, and change the tune in the middle, just for variety:

Oh where, oh where has John Lewis gone?
Oh what, oh what will he do?
His temper cut short, his brows left long—
Hurray for the red, white and blue!

YOU HAVE a strong opinion, let's say, that the Taft-Hartley Act provision requiring labor union officers to swear they aren't Communists is a silly thing, and won't work. So you pick a hit tune from a current Broadway musical and give out with this:

When bankers stage a merger
They're not inclined to perjure,
For to lie they'd be mighty loath;
But in commie party quarrels
There are other sorts of morals——
No, you can't catch a Red with an oath.

In Army tests of fitness,
A man won't bear false witness;
Take his word or his bond, or both;
But in Russian machinations
You will find prevarications——
For you can't catch a Red with an oath.

Maybe you don't like Communists and Russians at all. So you give your listening public the benefits of your views set to the tune of "Oh Tchichornia":

Oh, Gromyko,
Oh, Vishinsky,
They'd transform Lassie
To Rin-Tin-Tinsky.
From peace and free-ee-eedom
We'd be fenced o-o-off,
By Joseph Stalin,
And Mo-o-olotov.

Donkey Serenade

YOU'D certainly find a lot of these singing editorials in campaign periods. Obviously, if you were a broadcaster with Democratic leanings, you'd put in pretty steady plugs to the effect that we should never, never put Chiquita Truman in the refrigerator.

But if you were a Republican station owner, you'd probably want to boost your party with the gayest sort of music. Take the tune of "Funiculi, funicula," for example:

Some say the world is going Democratic;
So say not we. So say not we.
We say, in accents that are most emphatic:
It's GOP. It's GOP.
Yes we, we love to spend our time in telling
Of Truman's graft; of Truman's graft;
To give our energies to selling
Ball, Buck and Taft; Ball, Buck and Taft.

Dewey, Stassen, Vandenberg are here,
Martin, Warren, MacArthur's coming near——
And Brewster, Bricker, Bridges, Brooks,
And Capper, Cooper, Capehart,
And Wayne Morse just for the looks.

It's all pretty frightening.

Adds Billions in Split Second

'Brain' at Dahlgren Will Plot Missiles

Perforated tape feeds problems into the machine

THE NAVY has bought an Atomic Age abacus.

It's a little more complicated than the old Chinese counting device. To begin with, it weighs 25 tons, contains more than a million feet of wiring and cost $600,000. Furthermore, it can do addition running into the billions in less than a fifth of a second, and in one second it can solve a multiplication problem running into the millions. Just the thing for junior's first-grade apple arithmetic.

This relay calculator, now being installed in a special structure at the Naval Proving Ground at Dahlgren, Va., will fill a room 50 by 80 feet. It's the second large-scale one constructed from the much publicized research of Prof. Howard M. Aiken of Harvard. The first, nicknamed "Mark I," is also working for the Navy, but at Harvard.

Construction of the new "mechanical brain" began in 1945, and the installation at Dahlgren will be completed by July. As many as 70 men at a time worked on its construction, and a 10-man crew will come down from Cambridge to supervise its operation at the Bureau of Ordnance center.

Most of its work will be in connection with guided missiles—predicting various characteristics of such weapons from observational data. It will be available to the other services for similar calculations.

Problems are fed into the machine by perforated tape, and the answers come out on special teletypes. The calculator can be "broken in two" to solve separate calculations at the same time, and its plug-in installation will permit the replacement of faulty parts without disturbing its 24-hour operation. A complex alarm and light system signals any breakdown.

The machine is adaptable to general scientific problems too lengthy or complex to warrant the effort of human mathematicians.

Melodrama Unreeled in 1939

D. C. Milk Probes Can Be Rugged

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

IF THE present grand jury investigation of Washington's milk supply should reach the prosecution stage through an indictment, don't be surprised if it touches on such assorted subjects as dictographs, "bootlegging," vote buying and pigeon racing.

All these, plus asphalt contracts, figured in the last milk investigation here—a 1939 congressional inquiry.

As a matter of record, the bottle of milk on your doorstep, which is delivered there by one of Washington's largest industries, has concerned Congress for many years.

In 1931 Senator Arthur Capper (R., Kans.) headed a Senate Agriculture Subcommittee investigation to determine whether area dairy farmers were getting a fair profit. Capper decided that the producers were "sitting pretty."

In 1933, following a series of stories in The Washington Post, a Senate District Subcommittee headed by Senator William H. King (D., Utah) looked into charges that a "milk trust" was operating here, and that some farmers and dairies were being "coerced" to join.

A Sectional Battle

THE 1939 investigation was demanded by Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) after the Embassy-Fairfax (now Embassy) Dairy pleaded guilty to bringing in Indiana cream without a District Health Department permit. James J. Ward, the owner, paid a $10 fine, although he insisted the cream had been examined by the Health Department and had passed the "most rigorous" purity tests.

Smith said the practice worked against dairies which met the stringent local requirements. Ward and others argued that they were forced to such measures by the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association's "dictatorial" control of this milkshed. Midwestern Congressmen, led by Representative William T. Schulte (D., Ind.), sided with the independents, and added the District Health Department to the "plot."

The Maryland-Virginia group sells the milk of farmer members to contracting dairies.

A major witness was Dr. Reid R. Ashworth, the District's chief food inspector. He charged that the dairies involved used decoy trucks, which drove around the city with empty milk cans, to draw off his men.

Ashworth also brought in the pigeons. He said one of his inspectors owned racing pigeons, and that when the other inspectors gathered to watch the racing the "bootleggers" felt free to operate.

Bruce B. Derrick, tall, hefty secretary-treasurer of the Milk Producers Association, was a special target of Representative Schulte. Derrick, a former Maryland county agent, joined the association in 1934 after serving as Baltimore milk market administrator for the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Schulte called Derrick "a cheap racketeer." Derrick denied Schulte's charge that he had threatened to drive Washington independents out of business, but he did say that the association would counter competition by slashing prices.

That issue was also raised during the current grand jury inquiry. James J. Ward of Embassy said the grand jury questioned him about an alleged association notice urging price cutting at the expense of independent dairies such as his.

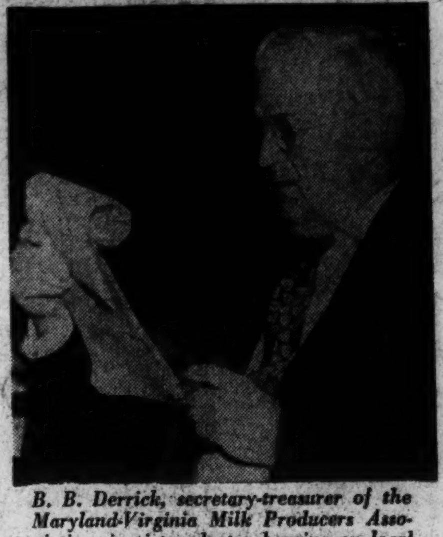
Schulte vs. Seal

ANOTHER leading figure in the 1939 probe was Elwood H. Seal, then District corporation counsel and now counsel for the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association. He also clashed with Schulte when the Congressman implied that Seal was going to become counsel for the association.

At one point when Seal, acting for the District, objected to a committee ruling, Schulte demanded:

"Are you speaking as corporation counsel or as attorney for the Maryland-Virginia association?"

"You've made that charge once too often," Seal shouted, leaping to his feet. "Either prove it or shut up."



B. B. Derrick, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, is pictured at a hearing on local milk prices

Schulte retorted that he had heard Seal tell an association official that he would "look out for their interests" in the investigation.

"You're a liar," shouted Seal.

"You're a damn liar," retorted Schulte.

"I'll punch you in the face," exclaimed Seal.

"Don't be silly," returned the red-faced Schulte.

The most sensational aspect of the investigation, however, was turned up by Washington police who listened in on hotel room conversations about several proposed "deals." It was alleged that Whiting Faulkner, postmaster at Martinsburg, W. Va., had offered to "deliver" the votes of Representative Jennings Randolph (D., W. Va.), and other members of the milk investigating committee, to the producers' association for $1000.

Randolph, then chairman of the House District Committee, vigorously denied the charge. Faulkner, son of a former Senator, admitted trying to sell the services of himself and D. C. Moler, West Virginia State senator, as lobbyists in the investigation, but denied promising to "deliver" any votes.

According to Derrick, Faulkner threatened that unless the association dealt with him, Faulkner would sell his services to Embassy-Fairfax. Derrick said he consulted the association's attorneys and rejected the offer.

This incident brought the resignation of Miss Julia Castleman, special clerk to the milk subcommittee. Faulkner had boasted that she had given him advance information about the investigation.

Appropriate Finale

ANOTHER result of the police dictograph work was a charge that a member of Congress was said to have been negotiating to have specifications of a District paving contract changed. It was later charged, and denied, that dictographs also were "planted" in congressional committee rooms.

The milk inquiry continued for several months, but the net result was "no decision" on any material issue.

Schulte at one point set up a separate subcommittee to consider his own bill, which would have permitted the shipment of Midwestern milk to the District, but was defeated on the House floor. Representative Smith led the attack on it.

The conclusion of that debate was on a note typical of the investigation.

"The man who set the (dictograph) trap," bellowed Representative John C. Schafer (R., Wis.), "is a cross between a polecat and the biggest skunk abroad in the land."

Retorted Representative Joseph B. Bates (D., Ky.), who headed the investigating subcommittee: "If I set a trap for a rattlesnake and a skunk gets in it, it's no fault of mine."

Decline In Ore Gives Break To Baltimore

BALTIMORE, March 6 (AP).—The United States steel industry—maintained since its start by native materials—is out digging holes in South America, and a lot of other places.

It hopes to supplement its present iron ore supply. Its greatest single source, Minnesota's Mesabi Range, is running out.

When foreign ore becomes an important factor in the industry, the Bethlehem Steel Corp.'s Sparrows Point plant just outside Baltimore will be occupying a strategic position.

Here at the head of Chesapeake Bay, ore can be unloaded directly from ships to furnaces of the largest tidewater steel plant in the world.

The industry realizes that the end of open pit mining in the Lake Superior region is in sight. For some pits, it will come in less than five years; for the others, perhaps within 25.

So geologists have been scouting every continent to find the richest ore fields. Iron itself is a plentiful mineral, but the industry is seeking ore sufficiently pure to use in its furnaces without the expense of refining.

Fields are under stepped-up development in Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Peru and Venezuela. Others are in India, Cuba and Sweden. An apparently rich field is being explored in Labrador.

The 300-million-dollar Sparrows Point plant can draw ore from every part of the world without the expense of shipping it by rail.

This 3900-acre mill was founded in 1891 as the Maryland Steel Co. of Baltimore County. Bethlehem acquired it in 1916. Partly because of Sparrows Point, Bethlehem has been one of the leaders in expanding foreign fields, mostly South America.

To transport the rich hematite, Bethlehem has utilized its huge shipyard at Sparrows Point to build fast ore-carrying ships. The South American fields soon will be serviced by a fleet of eight postwar boats capable of carrying 24,000 tons of ore each.

This does not mean that mining in the Lake Superior region will cease. Beneath the relatively pure hematite are thick layers of a hard, iron-bearing rock, taconite. Because they do not wish to be largely dependent on foreign ore, several large steel concerns are spending huge sums constructing processing plants to concentrate the rocky taconite.

Elephantine Blunder by Ad Man

it to (Speaker) Joe Martin.

"The No. 1 donkey out of our molds received by Senator Taft was intended for President Truman and the elephant President Truman received was for Senator Taft. We are holding the No. 1 elephant for the actual Republican nominee.

"Very confusing, isn't it? We hate to put you to any trouble but would appreciate your returning the donkey to us or sending it to President Truman. The California climate does things to people . . ."

Jack Martin forthwith mailed the laughing donkey to Matthew J. Connelly, secretary to the President.

"Until we received a letter this morning," he wrote, "we were under the impression it was supposed to be laughing at our elephants . . . This seems to clear up the mystery."

Wire Trouble

THAT wasn't Taft's first unintentional tangle with the White House.

Not long ago the Ohioan stepped off the Senate floor to hold a campaign huddle with two members of his staff—Representative Clarence Brown, his campaign manager, and Dewitt Sage, his contact man.

They conferred in the office of Senate Secretary Carl A. Loeffler, near the Senate chamber.

Taft needed some primary campaign data from his office and Sage picked up a telephone to order it for him.

"Hello," said Sage, as the voice answered. "I want the office of Senator Taft."

"Sorry," said the voice, "But Senator Taft isn't here—yet."

Sage was talking to the White House. Former Senate Secretary Leslie Biffle had neglected to remove his direct wire connection when Loeffler took over his office.

Burt's Silent Partner

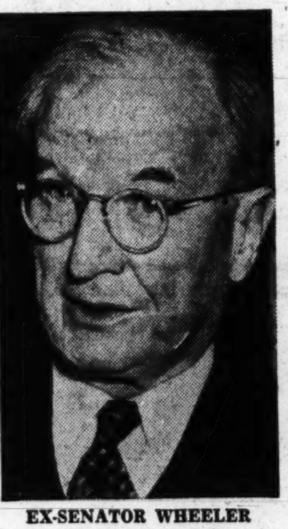
SENATOR Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, the last Democrat who bolted his party to run on a third party ticket, was prompted by quite another reason than was the current Wallace-Taylor third-party break.

It was in 1924 that Wheeler jumped the ticket to run with Senator Robert M. La Follette, sr., on a Progressive platform against John W. Davis, the Democratic nominee, and Calvin Coolidge, Republican.

Reminiscing the other day, Wheeler said it wasn't just because Davis was a Wall Street lawyer, and his party was swinging conservative, that he decided to run with La Follette.

"The Ohio gang's Harry M. Daugherty had threatened to indict me on a trumped up charge if I ran with La Follette," Wheeler said. "I had to run to call his bluff."

Wheeler said any parallels between the 1924 third party try and the current Wallace-Taylor bolt are few and far between. While Wallace blasts Democratic policies, Wheeler said he aimed most of his fire at Republicans and advised La Follette to do the same.



EX-SENATOR WHEELER
. . . His bolt was vindicated

His most effective vote-getting number was a speech addressed to an empty chair dragged up on a stage in Des Moines, Iowa. Wheeler told his audience the chair represented Calvin Coolidge. One by one he put each of the issues of the day to the invisible Coolidge. The answer of course was—silence.

La Follette and Wheeler polled 4,800,000 popular votes, against 15,725,000 for Coolidge, the winner, and 8,385,000 for Davis.

When the campaign was over, Wheeler dropped his Progressive label and became a Senate Democrat again. He wonders whether Taylor can do it.

"It wasn't easy," said Wheeler. "For a year or two my colleagues were mad at me, but it blew over. They never did take away any of my committee assignments."

His toughest trial came when he ran for reelection to the Senate in 1928. His opponent staked his campaig on Wheeler's 1924 run-out.

"My answer was, 'Sure, I bolted,' and I told them why. I won that election, 4 to 1."

Wheeler gets cautious when he talks about President Truman's 1948 prospects, but he thinks the Administration is underestimating the size of the Wallace vote. He believes 90 per cent of Wallace's total count will come out of the Democratic barrel.

All he would say on the record:

"Any split in the Democratic Party makes it very difficult for the Democrats to win. In addition to the Wallace split in the North, there is a very deep cleavage in the South over the civil rights issue. If my impression is correct there is much more danger of the South leaving the Democratic Party than there has ever been before in my time."

11 Qualities Are Sought

Picture Tests Pick Executives

By Lloyd Brady
Associated Press Staff Writer

CHICAGO, March 6.—Laboratory tests are being used to tell whether a person has the makings of a business executive.

The tests were developed by a group of University of Chicago psychologists headed by Dr. Burleigh B. Gardner. They say they may solve an ancient problem of business—how to select potential executives without investing costly training that may prove useless.

The tests make use of a series of pictures, and the person merely tells a story suggested to him by each picture. This takes about 40 minutes. Then another person, who has never seen the subject of the tests, spends seven hours in interpreting the verbal replies.

"Every now and then," says Dr. Gardner, "a young man, because of technical abilities, has been promoted upstairs, and soon afterward his department begins to divide itself into a group of snarling individuals, with organizational harmony dead or dying and the work of the office degenerating into costly inefficiency.

11 Common Qualities

THE interpretation of the tests is made in terms of a man's total personality—mental abilities, emotional difficulties, and so on. In addition, the expert looks for 11 qualities of executiveship. These were determined by testing 103 of the topmost executives in the business world, although Dr. Gardner declined to give their names.

These 11 qualities were possessed in common among the 103. They were:

Executives are people "who must accomplish to be happy."

They accept authority.

"All of the successful executives have strong interest in achievement, material rewards and prestige, in that order."

They have high organizational ability.

They are decisive, "although their decisions may be wrong at times."

They are "not easily influenced by outside pressures."

"They are essentially active and aggressive persons with a need to overcome a sense of frustration."

The executives are interested in "the practical, immediate and direct."

In his relations with superiors, the executive tends to identify himself with them. His attitude toward inferiors tends to be detached and impersonal.

No Maternal Tie

"IN A SENSE the successful executive is a man who has left home. He feels and acts as though he were on his own, as though emotional ties and obligations to his parents were severed," says Dr. Gardner.

"In general we find the relationship to the mother to have been the most clearly broken tie. The tie to the father remains positive in the sense that he views his father as a helpful but not restraining figure.

"Finally, he must need to operate within an established framework—that is, know his place in an organization, and be within that organization as a needed part."

Of the executives tested— other than the original 103—all but three reports jibed with company estimates, Dr. Gardner said. The three were "startlingly" at variance, "but within four months all three came a cropper that validated test results."

Mind 'Rules' Dice Better At Distance

NEW YORK (AP).—The power of mind over matter is just as great at 30 feet distance as it is at 3 feet in tests made at Washington College, Chestertown, Md., and reported in the Duke University Journal of Parapsychology.

In fact, at 30 feet the mind power worked a little better than closeup. These experiments are part of a series originating at Duke University.

Dice-throwers try to influence the turn of the galloping dominoes. In the Duke, and other similar experiments, minds are reported showing a little influence.

When thousands of throws are averaged with people trying to think success, the averages are mathematically better than chance.

But in 768 throws, at 3 feet, the excess due to mental effort was only 39 and at 30 feet 119. The 39 is not enough to be certain, mathematically; the 119 is considered good evidence, mathematically.

The Washington College dice throwing was conducted by Dr. C. B. Nash and Miss Alice Richards. Forty-eight students used their mind powers on the dice. There was no hand throwing. A string was pulled to tip over a box containing the dice, which then rolled down an incline and across a flat to bounce against a conventional dice backstop.

Opposite Camps Want Martha Taft to 'Run'

grudge-carriers than are their husbands. Mrs. Taft undoubtedly feels more resentment against Dewey than Taft does for the 1940 contest, in which Taft might have been nominated in place of Wendell Willkie if Dewey had not held onto his delegates so long.

Besides, the ambition to occupy the White House may burn much more fiercely in Mrs. Taft's breast than it does in Senator Taft's. He would not be the first man in public life whose own ambition was fanned by that of his wife.

There is no question that Martha Taft is one of the Senator's great campaign assets. Her vivacious and friendly personality, her graciousness and her personal charm go a long way to offset his own lack of color and his difficulty in unbending. When she occupies the speaker's platform with him, local chairmen always ask her to make a few remarks. She responds with a few brief, bright sentences which help take the curse off his own deadly serious, hammer-and-tong, factual discourse.

For Women Only

MARTHA TAFT likewise is in great demand as a speaker herself. Her audiences usually are composed of members of women's organizations. These organizations always have a seating problem, because so many men try to get in to hear Mrs. Taft that there aren't enough chairs for the women.

To meet that problem, the local chairmen have been forced to resort to sex discrimination and bar men from the audience. That ruling even closed the doors at Council Bluffs, Iowa, to the Washington correspondents accompanying the Tafts on their recent political tour.

Mrs. Taft has one handicap which afflicted Willkie. She is cramped by a radio microphone. She can lay them in the aisles with her epigrams when she gives her immediate audience to think about; but when she knows she is on the air she is not so hilarious.

An experienced public speaker, Mrs. Taft handles herself well before an audience. She knows how to make effective reference to the fact that she is the mother of four grown sons, and that she is a grandmother, without getting sloppy about it. She knows how and when to laugh in order to encourage her audience to do likewise.

She is plump in a motherly way. Aboard the Taft Pullman car, she wields both needle and electric iron to make sure that her husband's clothing is in good order.

Steeped in Politics

SHE is the daughter of a solicitor general of the United States and a granddaughter of an Irish immigrant who became chief justice of Minnesota's Supreme Court, a Federal judge, a member of Congress and an ardent follower of Abraham Lincoln. Thus she has a strong heritage in politics.

She became acquainted with Bob Taft in the White House when he was a college student and his father was President of the United States.

Here are some quotations from Martha Taft's speeches:

"When my husband goes out campaigning —when he just goes out—I like to go with him."

"I always find that statistics are hard to swallow and impossible to digest. The only one I can ever remember is that if all the people who go to sleep in church were laid end to end, they would be a lot more comfortable."

"President Truman feels with Mark Twain that the first thing to reform is the habits of other people. Bob Taft feels that the first thing to reform is the habits of government."

"If you have a $20 bill, you should keep it as a souvenir, because it carries a picture of the south portico of the White House without a porch. I suggest that President Truman make that a portable porch so he can take it back to Missouri with him after the election. If the porch costs $15,000 and Mr. Truman sits on it every evening in June, July and August and on warm evenings in May, it will figure out to $150 a sitting."

Bums Trade Stanky to Braves for Sanders

A Day at Redland Hunt

Blue Echo (No. 3) with Davis Rust 3d astride is ahead at an early stage of the feature race of yesterday's Redland Hunt, opening meet of the season. Big John (No. 10), piloted by Frank Gall, follows. The event was won by Sun Wonder, owned and ridden by Beverly Byrd, shown in center picture with the coveted Redland Bowl trophy. Right, Mrs. Steadman Teller, Rockville, is carried off the field by Sandy Spring firemen after her mount, Gracias, fell at the final fence in the pair race. She was not seriously hurt.

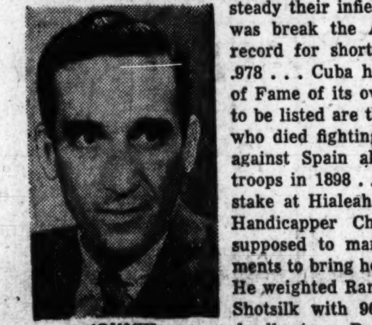
To Whom It May Concern



POVICH

ORLANDO, FLA., March 6.—One of the reasons Shortstop Mark Christman resented the whole idea of being asked to take a $1500 salary cut from the Nats was his fielding record last season . . . The Nats bought him from the Browns last spring to steady their infield, he says, and all he did was break the American League fielding record for shortstops with an average of .978 . . . Cuba has started a baseball Hall of Fame of its own, and the first 14 names to be listed are those of the 14 ball players who died fighting for Cuban independence against Spain alongside of United States troops in 1898 . . . The $20,000 closing day stake at Hialeah was a triumph for Track Handicapper Charley McLennan who is supposed to maneuver the weight assignments to bring horses together at the finish. He weighted Rampart with 120 pounds and Shotsilk with 96, and they finished in a deadheat . . . Buck Newsom is hinting that he will announce tomorrow the name of the major league club he has decided to give the benefit of his pitching genius at $20,000 for the season . . . And on the other hand he hints that he is just about to sign a radio broadcasting contract that will guarantee him $50,000 a year for three baseball recordings weekly on a network originating in Detroit.

TERRY MOORE, for years the greatest center fielder in the National League when he was playing with the Cards, has authored a book called "Covering the Outfield" . . . Broadcaster Bob Wolff, who made recordings at the camps of the Nats, Tigers, Yankees, Reds and Cardinals during his stay in Florida, reports that the Reds were the most cooperative club and the Yankees the least willing to lend themselves to radio interviews . . . Manager Johnny Neun of the Reds called a special meeting of the Cincinnati players and commanded them to turn down no request . . . Jimmy Garroute, the 16-year-old Oklahoma jockey, who rode 46 winners in 48 days at Tampa's Sunshine Park, is the latest protege of Guy Schults, the former rodeo performer who also developed the talented Jessop brothers, Job, Dean and Del . . . Babe Ruth, now fighting his toughest battle against ill health, was also a hospital case 25 years ago this week, at Hot Springs, Ark., where he was bedded down with the flu . . . Johnny Mize and Johnny McCarthy, two first basemen of the New York Giants have two things in common—the same initials, and the same birthday, January 7, 1913 . . . Bobby Locke, the South African golfer, reveals that he wears knickers only in tournaments, and long pants while practicing on other days, because of his short supply of long stockings to go with his plus fours.

LOU BRISSIE, the sensational pitching rookie from Savannah who is now with the A's, was wounded in Italy by the same German shell that killed 11 of his buddies . . . Closest to the shell when it exploded, Brissie was wounded only in the leg . . . Jim Petroskey, the smart little shortstop the Nats were grooming on their Chattanooga farm club, is no more. He has changed his name to Jim Clark, legally . . . Rocky Graziano's offer to give his end of the purse in the Sonny Horne fight in Washington to juvenile delinquency is gracious enough inasmuch as Rocky was one of the outstanding juvenile delinquents . . . This year's training camp of the Nats has seen a change in policy: No ban on golf by the ball players . . . Pitcher Tom Ferrick who used to be with the Athletics, makes the amazing statement that Connie Mack told his pitchers to never mind backing up any base . . . "He said there were enough other ball players to back up throws and, anyway, pitchers were too apt to throw the ball away when they did get it" . . . Eddie Lyons, the Nats cocky second baseman from Chattanooga, has not conceded the second base job to Al Kozar who came to the club in the Stan Spence deal . . . "He'll have to hustle to beat me out," says Lyons, "and I was a better second baseman in the Southern Association than he was most of last season."

DESPITE BUCKY HARRIS' assertions that Yogi Berra is the Yankees' No. 1 catcher, most of the other clubs in the league declare that young Ralph Houk will end up with the Yanks regular catching job and Berra will return to the outfield . . . The Acushnet No. 3 is the latest thing in long-flight golf balls and the demand for it is far ahead of the production line, but it's no ball for duffers; cuts too easily . . . Before Connie Mack signed Rudy York, he polled his players to get their view about the veteran first baseman released by the White Sox . . . When a ball player is spiked on the foot, he may be yelping either from pain or the realization that a new pair of baseball shoes will cost him $24.50 . . . The shoes are manufactured from kangaroo hides, and they must be young kangaroo or they don't last . . . At this time a year ago, the two major league presidents are reminding the ball players by official bulletins that the $25 per week they get as incidental expense during spring training must be reported as income on their tax returns : . . Clark Griffith predicts that Havana would support a big league team better than St. Louis or any other cities who may be bidding for the Browns' franchise.

Sun Wonder Is Redland Hunt Victor

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Beverley B. Byrd's Sun Wonder won the Redland Bowl, featuring the Redlands Hunt's point-to-point races over a course near Olney, Md., yesterday.

T. T. Mott, jr.'s Chen was second, two and one-half lengths behind the winner, with Marian Curran's Lump Sum third.

A field of 13 competed over a soggy course and Sun Wonder's time of 8:10 3/5 was believed to be a record for the four and one-half mile course.

A crowd estimated at 2000 saw the races.

Two riders were injured during the four-race program. They were Mrs. Steadman Teller and Miss Marlynn Himes.

Mrs. Teller fell with her mount Gracias at the final fence in the pair race, the horse apparently rolling over her. She was taken to the Bethesda Naval Hospital for treatment of lacerations about the face.

Miss Himes fell with her mount after two miles of the race and was taken to the Montgomery County General Hospital with a knee injury. Several other falls occurred without injuries to the riders.

Mrs. Teller was teamed with Mrs. Richard Hawkins, jr., who was riding Yardstick. Mrs. Hawkins' mount finished first but the team was disqualified by the elimination of Gracias.

Victory in the race went to T. T. Mott's Melody Spar, ridden by Thigpen Wins '1000' at N. Y.

New York, March 6 (AP).—Phil Thigpen, Seton Hall sophomore, proved tonight that his recent national AAU victory was no fluke by defeating a hand-picked field in the 1000-yard run at the Knights of Columbus indoor games.

Thigpen scored by four yards in 2:13.6 to go one-up in his duel with Reggie Pearman of New York University, the national AAU outdoor 800-meter title holder, who ran fourth tonight.

Joe Nowicki of the New York Athletic Club was a surprise runner-up two yards in front of Dave Smith of Georgetown, who spurted in the stretch to grab third place from Pearman by a yard.

Thigpen held his lead through the first five of the six and a quarter laps, passing the quarter mile mark in 54.6 seconds, but Nowicki came from far back to take command at the start of the bell lap.

Nowicki passed the half mile post in 1:57.5 and then faded as Thigpen recaptured the lead half a lap from home and held it the rest of the way.

Virginia Boxers, Penn State Draw

State College, Pa., March 6 (AP). Charles (Chuck) Drazenovich, of Brownsville, Pa., punched out a victory in the heavyweight bout tonight to earn Penn State a 4-4 draw with the University of Virginia, in the seasons closing boxing duel meet before an overflow crowd of 6000 boxing fans.

Earlier, Penn State's Johnny Benglian ended his season undefeated by outpointing Virginia's hitherto unbeaten Grover Masterson in a thrilling 130-pound bout. Ralph Shoaf, Virginia, 175 pounder, kept his record clean by stopping Paul Smith in the 175-pound match.

Nats Expect a Man, Get a Boy in Kozar

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

ORLANDO, FLA., March 6.—Al Kozar checked into the Washington training camp today and Clark Griffith blinked twice before he could muster a perfunctory, "Glad to meet ya, Sonny."

It was Griffith's first glimpse of the man for whom he had given up Stan Spence to the Red Sox, and he was more than mildly startled. Seemingly it was a boy he got for Spence, not a man, and not a very big boy at that.

Young Kozar is, indeed, a baby-faced lad looking like a teenage refugee from a prep school instead of a .339 hitter with New Orleans last season who will reach his twenty-fifth birthday next July.

"Everybody says he's a great young ball player and I hope they're right," said Griffith somewhat suspiciously. "He ain't very big, is he?" There was disappointment in the old gentleman's tone.

Kozar strips down to 168 pounds and the records do show that he was a standout in the Southern Association. The Detroit Tigers attest that they offered the Red Sox $85,000 for him before the deal was made for Spence.

The Nats haven't added any whoop and holler guy in Kozar, however. He's soft-spoken when he does talk and says no more than is essential to be polite.

Under relentless quizzing, it was learned that his folks are of Slavish extraction, and work in the Pittsburgh steel mills where he did a brief turn himself after coming out of the Army.

HE SAID HE spent three years in the service, half of it in the Pacific, "But I wasn't any hero. Had a safe job as tech sergeant with headquarters in New Guinea and the Philippines and played a lot of baseball."

The Red Sox grabbed him out of highschool in Pittburgh when he was 17 and sent him to Danville and he didn't bother about any more formal schooling. They promoted him to Scranton the next year and then he got "greetings" from F. D. R. In 1946 he was back at Scranton and then the Sox moved him up to New Orleans last season. In every succeeding year he increased his batting average.

He likes the whole idea of joining Washington. He says: "There was no place for me with the Red Sox as long as they had Bobby Doerr, and I can't play anywhere except second." The Nats gave him a $1000 raise over the $5000 minimum for major league rookies, he says.

In the Washington camp he figures he has to beat out Eddie Lyons for the second base job. He thinks Lyons is a god second baseman, too. He thinks Washington has got the best yung outfielder he ever saw in Gil Coan who was in his league

Rodenberg May Step Aside As Baltimore Colts' Head

By Bus Ham
Post Reporter

Bob Rodenberg, Washington sportsman, may step aside as president of the Baltimore Colts of the All-America Football Conference because of financial difficulties.

A meeting will be held Monday in Baltimore by 30 business and financial leaders, Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro and Jonas Ingram, commissioner of the conference, on the team's financial status.

Rodenberg said last night that he "wants to do whatever is best for the Baltimore team and the league."

"Frankly, I do not know what will happen at Monday's meeting," he said. "If they want me to stay on in some capacity, I'll be glad to do so."

Rodenberg admitted that he "knows when I'm licked financially."

Rodenberg said that he has "$132,000 of my own money" invested in the Baltimore team after "14 months of work without a penny of remuneration."

Last season the Baltimore club drew 172,000 paid patrons to home games and lost $166,000, Rodenberg disclosed.

"I know the club will still lose money next season," he said.

Commissioner Ingram, in Baltimore, said over the telephone that "the conference has not taken over the Baltimore franchise."

"All that I am here for is to try to refinance the club," he said. "It looks as if there is plenty of Baltimore capital available to zx things up ok."

Ingram estimated that from $250,000 to $300,000 would be "needed for the 1948 season."

As to Rodenberg's status, Ingram said: "He's had a year's experience and may be a valuable man to have around. You can't tell what will happen at Monday's meeting."

The Baltimore team is the third in the conference to experience financial trouble this year. Branch Rickey recently added the football Dodgers to his Brooklyn holdings. The All-American conference picked up the franchise of the Chicago Rockets for a new group to take over.

Rodenberg personally has been unsuccessful in a fund-raising campaign the past several weeks.

It was reported that at last month's conference meeting in Chicago Rodenberg was given until today to complete refinancing plans.

Salmagundi Wins Santa Anita Derby

Arcadia, Calif., March 6 (AP).—Swinging into high gear in the drive down the stretch, favored Salmagundi captured the $100,000 Santa Anita Derby in a photo-finale with Call Bell today as Santa Anita wound up its 1948 turf meeting.

Robert S. Howard's Drumbeat, the long shot of the race, finished third.

A crowd of 61,000, largest in the eleven editions of the derby, witnessed the mile and one-eighth fixture.

Victory for the son of Hash, a $20,000 purchase by William G. Helis two years ago at the Keeneland, Ky., sales was worth $79,300 net and brought the youngster's winnings to $147,425.

It was Salmagundi's second major stakes win in a row. Two weeks ago he whipped this same Call Bell, owned by Miss Mary Strnad of Northridge, Calif., by a length and a half for a $50,000 prize.

Solidarity Folds

The gross value of the race was $126,850—the last of purses aggregating around three million dollars dished out by the Los Angeles Turf Club in the 50-day meeting.

Solidarity was never a factor in the field of eight and ran out of the money.

The time was 1:51 1-5, slow compared to previous runnings. Bymeabond skipped the route in 1:50 in 1945.

Otto Greiner Has Record 64

Gainesville, Fla., March 6 (AP). Al Smith, Winston?Salem, N. C., pro, took over the lead in the Gainesville Open golf tourney here today with a 36-hole score of 137; but he had to share laurels with Otto Greiner of Baltimore.

Greiner set a new competitive record of 64 for the par 71, 6250-yard course. He was out in two under par at 34 and come home in five under with 30.

Smith, who shot a 34-35—69 today to go with his yesterday's 68, was two strokes in front of Greiner and National Amateur Champion Skee Riegel of Los Angeles, both with 139. Riegel today scored 36-34—70.

In setting the course record, Greiner got good results on his short iron shots and was deadly in putting. He picked up birdie fours on the third and fourth holes going out, then birdied the tenth, thirteenth, fourteenth, fifteenth and seventeenth coming in.

Hoppe in Hurry To Beat Navarra

Chicago, March 6 (AP).—Willie Hoppe, world's three cushion billiards champion, today defeated challenger Ezequiel Navarra, Argentine titlist, 50 to 35 in 38 innings—the shortest game of their 450-point match.

Hoppe, winner of three of the first five blocks, now has a total of 250 points against the 29-year-old Navarra's 224. Both had high runs of six in the first game.

Ohio Girl Wins Title

Ormond Becah, Fla., March 6 (AP). Carol Diringer of Tiffin, Ohio, scored her first major golf victory here today when she defeated Polly Riley of Fort Worth, Tex., 3 and 2, in the final match of the South Atlantic Women's tournament.

Boston Must Give Rowell, $60,000 in Big 'If' Deal

Bradenton, Fla., March 6 (AP).—President Branch Rickey of the Brooklyn Dodgers amazed the baseball world tonight when he announced he had bartered his spunky second baseman, Eddie Stanky, to the Boston Braves for First aBseman Ray Sanders, holdout Outfielder 'Bama Rowell and a reported $60,000 cash.

In the event that Sanders, inactive since the middle of the 1946 season because of a badly fractured arm, is unable to make good, the Braves, it was reported, would send the Dodgers an additional $60,000.

The Dodgers, it was said, planned to install Sanders at first base and use Jackie Robinson at his natural second base position. Robinson played first last season.

Rowell, who played left field most of last season for the Tribe, will be sent to the Dodgers' International League farm at Montreal.

Leo, Deacon Differ

Manager Leo Durocher of Brooklyn, told reporters at Ciudad Trujillo in the Dominican Republic, where the club is training, that Eddie Miksis, utility infielder, would be the second baseman.

Branch Rickey, club president, countered with "I have said before and will say again that the world's best second baseman today is playing first base." Rickey referred to Robinson.

He added that the trade was "the natural result of the fact that Durocher feels Miksis is ready for the big leagues." He said that Stanky's holdout siege this Spring had nothing to do with the swap.

Stanky Was Dodger Sparkplug

Stanky, "a holler guy," has been one of the Dodger sparkplugs ever since he was traded to the Brooklyn club by the Chicago Cubs in June of 1944 for Pitcher Bob Chipman.

This Philadelphia native, who will be 31 years old next September 3, has been Brooklyn's lead-off batter and noted for his ability to draw bases on balls. He led the league with 148 walks in 1945.

Stanky, reported holding out for $20,000, signed his Brooklyn contract only last Monday. He got around $14,000 last year and probably signed for around $17,000. The Dodgers did not disclose the terms.

The former Dodger batted an anemic .252 but set a National League fielding rceord for second basemen last year. He committed only 12 errors in 820 chances for a .9853 percentage. That bettered the 1943 mark of Cincinnati's Lonnie Frey who fielded a .9851.

He has been described by Dodger Manager Durocher as a ball player who "can't field, can't hit and can't run but is a great ball player."

Stanky Stubborn Holdout

[The United Press story said Rickey, who chastized Stanky for being a prolonged holdout this season, apparently became peeved at him when Eddie refused to come to terms in time to attend the Dodger managerial school at Vero Beach, Fla.

Before the school opened late last month Rickey said that he would be "greatly disappointed in Stanky if he doesn't sign up and come to the session."

Stanky made a trip from his home in Mobile, Ala, to New York to discuss contract terms with Rickey and left stating that "he offered me $40,000 worth of baseball information and a very small raise."]

An aggressive type who fights hard to win, Stanky will add pep to the Tribe infield. He's also deft in completing and starting double plays, a weakness in the Braves' defense last season.

N. C. State Beats Duke For Title

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Durham, N. C., March 6.—With over half of the capacity crowd of 9000 shouting, "Beat Duke," the North Carolina State Wolfpack responded tonight with a 58-50 victory for the championship of the Southern conference.

The cakewalk that powerful State was expected to enjoy against the surprising Blue Devils never materialized. Duke gave the Wolfpack the battle of their lives, holding the upperhand most of the first half and early in the second half.

But Duke's advantage wore away after three minutes of play in the second halfg when Eddie Bartels, sophomore center, hooked a goal to shoot State into the lead.

With Sophomore Ceep Youmans of Miami, Fla., their offensive leader, and Guard Dick Gordon of Jacksonville playing a magnificent floor game, the Blue Devils held State scoreless for eight minutes of the first half and enjoyed a 27-24 lead when the 20-minute session ended.

Gordon and his backcourt mate, Tommy Hughes of Sumter, S. C., harassed the State set-shot stars so effectively that the defending champs made only 10 per cent of their shots before intermission.

It was a different story after the rest period, however. Never once losing its poise, State set out quickly to retain the championship it was virtually conceded before the tournament opened.

Working the ball down court brilliantly and swiftly, State uncorked a fast offense with Warren Cartier and Paul Horvath as its leaders.

Fed constantly by their teammates, Cartier and Horvath accounted for 23 of the 34 points State scored in the second half Cartier, high man for the evening with 20 points, got 14 of his markers in the second session.

Reds' Hurlers Sttill Tough

Tampa, Fla., March 6 (U.P.).—Singles by Ted Kluszewski and Claude Corbitt and an infield out by Kermit Wahl gave Coach Phil Page's team a 1 to 0 victory today over Coach Long George Kelly's crew in a Cincinnati Reds' intra-camp training game.

The winning run was scored off the veteran Bucky Walters. All of the other pitchers who worked, Tommy Hughes, Harry Gumbert, John Hetki, Herman Wehmeier and Walker Cress were very effective, each going two runless innings.

Passeau Roving Coach

Chicago, March 6 (AP).—Claude Passeau, a pitching star with the Chicago Cubs for eight years, today was appointed a roving coach in the Cubs' minor league farm system.

Terp Riflemen Win 173d Straight

The University of Maryland rifle team won its 173d straight match yesterday, defeating the Frederick (Md.) Rifle Club, 1407-1382.

Art Cook, Maryland's holder of junior world records, was high shooter with 293. Charles Simpson led the losers with 282.

Other scores: Maryland, Mel Bowers, 281; David Weber, 279; James Wells, 278; Howard Waters, 276. Frederick, M. J. Painter, 278; Lucille Harbaugh, 275; Dorsey Shipley, 274; Arthur Rickell, 273.

St. John's Beats Central, 53 to 31, for Title

On the Line

—With Considine

NEW YORK, March 6 (INS).—It can be done with 24 tons of beef, six tons of pork, three tons of bacon, six tons of chicken, 33 tons of green vegetables, 36 tons of potatoes, 12 tons of canned fruit, 18,000 eggs, 7½ tons of butter of margarine and 108,000 chocolate bars.

Sure, this is a sports column. Keep your shirt on, will you?

Considine

In addition, there must be 14 cwt. of dried milk, 9000 dozen dried eggs, 9000 dozen frozen eggs, three tons of livers and kidneys, six tons of flour, six tons of sauces (tomato, mayonnaise, salad dressing, etc.), four cwt. of ice cream powder, one cwt. of pickles, three cwt. of fruit juices, three tons of canned fish, six tons of dry cereals, six tons of coffee, 12 tons of sugar and one-half cwt.'s of salt and pepper.

What can be done? Simply this:

With these and other stores, adding up to about 200 tons of edibles, the 6000 athletes who compete in the Olympics in July can toe each mark with an equal amount of food in their tummies. To this tonnage—which the sportsmen of America can easily provide—will be added tons of fish, vegetables, fruit and milk supplied by the British from limited stores, and other tons of food brought in by such nations as have food to spare for men and women who run, jump, grapple and throw things.

THERE MAY BE some who will wonder why the United States is expected to furnish the bulk of the food, especially in view of the fact that the best our kids could do in the recent winter Olympics was take third place.

Well, in the first place, we offered to do this, and the offer was gratefully accepted by the International Olympic Committee, which is headed by Lord Burghley, the former hurdling champion. And we, with the help of other countries whose people are eating, can afford it.

Despite the outcome of the winter Olympics, this country is about a 1-to-50 favorite to win the summer end of the games. The summer end, of course, will involve sports which favor the well-nourished and the muscular; the short and long races, the high and broad leaps and the putting of shot, discus and javelin, etc.

We must face the fact that if we do send food (food in which our own athletes will share, of course) there will be events won by healthy, apple-cheeked American kids while a few human skeletons wearing the colors of the starveling nations will be collapsing in his wake.

While this certainly would be no reflection on the Americans, the fact remains that the victory would be tainted and the rewards would lack lustre. The mood of the world being what it is, our kids probably would have their brains booed out, too, in such a turn of events. But most importantly, the kids themselves would derive no satisfaction out of winning with the food cards stacked in their favor.

OUR MARSHALL PLAN is an attack on Communism as realistic as that which could be made by an armed force. It is simply replacing bullets with biscuits. The issue remains the same.

Competing in the Olympics will be men and women from all the Slave states—Poland, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Hungary, Romania, Byelorussia, The Ukraine, Albania, etc. It is obvious to state that anything we can do to fortify them, physically and spiritually, may strengthen them to resist the fantastic forces which have conquered them.

You may or may not know that the United States is getting a horrible press through eastern Europe. The controlled press—which is becoming a redundant phrase because there is no other kind—is daily telling more than 100 million human beings that we are a greedy, selfish, heartless people who want to wring the last advantage out of every deal.

Junk like that, repeated often enough, eventually is believed. It is doubted in the long run only by the presentation of defensive testimony. Our supplying of food for an event which will gain more world attention than even an important meeting of, say, the United Nations, constitutes a great retort.

The tonnage listed above probably sounds a bit thunderous. As a matter of fact, it will space out to something less than the caloric content of the average daily American meal. The average daily American meal for non-athletes, as a matter of fact.

THE 24 TONS of beef spread out to eight ounces a day for each athlete for three weeks. The bacon spread to one ounce a day, the chicken to two ounces, the cereal to the same, the fruit to four ounces, the coffee to two ounces, the icecream powder to 1/16th of an ounce, the flour to two ounces, etc. the boys and girls won't be able to stage any bacchanals.

From the start of this idea I've been convinced that the sports fans of America—long since proven to be the most generous group of humans on earth—could easily and willingly finance this.

With that in view—and with the State Department's blessings—plans are afoot for the formation of a large committee of sports editors and sports columnists who will serve along these lines. But more anon about this, save to say that the entire United States contribution could be lost in the corner of the cargo space of a liberty ship.

Nations like Canada, Mexico, the Scandinavian countries, the South America countres, Australia, South Africa and Switzerland will be able to supply ample food for their contestants.

ALL THE OTHERS have been asked to submit samples of the menus they'd like to see their athletes served, as well as to state their abilities to provide such food. Spain, for instance, said its athletes would be able to get along on ths diet:

Breakfast—10 grams of ground coffee, 150 grams of milk, 30 grams of sugar, 15 grams of butter and 125 grams of bread; lunch—rice soup, liver, peas, cherries; dinner—veal steak, red cabbage, bread, peas, potatoes and a banana.

South Africa, on the other hand, said it was prepared to serve this menu to its people:

Breakfast—stewed prunes, whole wheat cereal, fried eggs, toast and butter, fresh fruit, tea, coffee or milk; lunch—grilled steak, lettuce, tomato and carrot salad, coconut custard, brown bread and butter, honey, tea, coffee or milk; dinner—barley soup, lamb chops and mint sauce, mashed potatoes, peas and pumpkin, custard, biscuits, cream cheese, coffee, tea or milk.

IT SHOULD be one of the more interesting Olympics. The Russians finally have decided to enter a complete team, which is certain to give the games something of the flavor of the 1936 Olympics, where a sharp nationalism revealed itself for perhaps the first time. That this will be repeated, in vew of present world conditions, is almost inevitable. If it is not then we can point to the Olympics and mark these games as the true beginning of the peace.

Britain can ill-afford to play host to the games. The erection of the Olympic Village near Wembley Stadium will tax its housing program. The cost to the British will tax the over-taxed Britsh purse and the food which they will supply will mean that stern rationing there must continue a bit longer.

But they are looking forward to the contests with much the same fervor as they looked to the wedding of Elizabeth and Philip. This will "take them out of it." This will be a breather in the life of a country which, in its own phraseology, has "had t."

Duff Breaks Hurdle Mark

Champaign, Ill., March 6 (AP).—Lloyd Duff of Ohio State shaved a tenth of a second from the American indoor 70-yard high hurdle record of :08.5 in the Big Nine indoor track and field meet today.

Led by Duff, Ohio State dethroned Illinois in a fight-to-the-wire finish as meet champions.

Defending champion Illinois finished three points behind with 40 losing its title when the Buckeyes copped the closing mile relay.

Duff was clocked in :08.4 as he bettered the American, as well as the Conference and Illinois Armory record.

Defending Champion Bill Porter of Northwestern, who ran the semifinals in :08.5, was ahead of Duff until he knocked over the third from last hurdle. Offstride, Porter finished second.

Porter and Bob Wright of Ohio State had shared the American and Conference :08.5 mark, while the same Armory reading had been claimed by Porter and Harrison Dillard of Baldwin-Wallace.

Duff's brilliant hurdling performance folowed a triumph by the Buckeye senior in the broad jump.

Chuck Fonville of Michigan bettered his own Conference shot-put record by more than 3 feet with a preliminary toss of 56 feet 3⅝ inches.

Fonville's best warm-up toss came on his third try and toppled his 1947 record of 53 feet 2½ inches.

Jack George Ties Scoring Record at 31

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Firing accurately from every corner, Jack George scored 31 points and led St. John's to a 53-31 victory over Central's Vikings last night in the finals of the Metropolinight in the final shredshrd shroo tan before 2741 spectators at Richie Colisieum.

As he led the Cadets to their first Metro crown in 10 years, the 6 foot 1 inch star tied the tourney's all-time scoring record set by Central's Jim Pantos just the night before.

Ironically, George's record-tying field goal, a lay-up with a minute to play, was scored off Pantos, who had been assigned to guard him during the second half.

It was obvious from the beginning that the jittery Vikings, Interhigh hampions, were in for an off-night. They missed their first four shots.

Nobody Can Stop Him

On the other hand, the Cadets, or rather George, couldn't miss. Ross Keith, assigned to guard George during the first half, elected to kep George outside the foul circle. But when George swished in his first three set shots, the Vikings allowed George to drive in. But they couldn't stop him under the basket either.

St. John's ran up a 15-5 lead in the first quarter, and made it 26-11 at intermission. George, by this time, had scored 15.

Pantos, usually a dependable defense man, was then assigned to George, but Jackie would not be stopped. He scored six in the third quarter as St. John's made it 39-21. And he capped his performance with 10 in the last quarter.

Coach Withdraws George

Though George was only a point away from a new record, St. John's Coach Joe Gallagher removed George with 50 seconds left to allow his reserves to play.

Sharing honors for the Cadets was little Billy Martins, who did a superb defensive job on Pantos. He held the Viking star to one field goal and two foul goals.

It was the last game for the Cadets before they play in the Eastern Catholic Interscholastic invitational tourney at Newport, R. I. It gave them a 26-1 record on the season. They won their last 22 in succession.

GW High Wins Shoot

George Washington High of Alexandria won the Washington metropolitan area junior championship, a section of the National Rifle Association's meet conducted simultaneously in the Nation and Honolulu yesterday.

The sectional competition was conducted in Maryland University's Armory rifle range with 16 teams from the District, Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania.

GW set a record team total of 738 out of a possible 800 in the fourth annual shoulder-to-shoulder shoot, to beat out St. John's first team which had a score of 730.

GW's individual scores were Jack Barton, 97 prone, 87 standing, for 184; Dave Gates, 100 prone, 86 standing, 186; Edgar Lee, 110 prone, 88 standing, 188; Bob Baker, 97 prone, 83 standing, 180.

Behind St. John's were Montgomery Blair, 714; George Washington's team, 706; Randolph Macon Academy, 696; Arlington Rimfire Junior Rifle Club first team, 680; St. John's second team, 699; George Washington's third team, 647; Carson Long Institute of New Bloomfield, Pa., 632; Arlington Rimfire second team, 631; McDonogh School of Baltimore, 625; Calvin Coolidge girls, 624; Montgomery Blair second team, 623; Montgomery Blair third team, 618; Fork Union Military Academy, 571 and McKinley Tech girls, 542.

Howard Waters, a Maryland U. sophomore, had the best individual score in the open shooting, with 100 prone and 91 standing for 191.

The three best girls scores were those of Carrie MacDonald, 178; Duane Thompson, 170, and Jean Smith, 162. All are Calvin Coolidge High students.

W & L Is Cool To Crockett

Washington and Lee took a dim view of yesterday's report that American University's Reggie Crockett wished to return to school—and basketball competition.

"There's no way on earth Crockett could be eligible here next year, or any year," said Richard A. Smith, W. & L. athletic director.

Crockett was an All-Virginia center before transfering this season to American U. After playing 14 games, he quit the squad.

Yesterday in Baltimore, Crockett said he had talked with Carl Wise, W. & L. basketball coach, about reentering Washington and Lee.

"I don't want people to think I am atramp athlete," Crockett said, "but, if I can't get back in Washington and Lee, I'm going to enroll in some school around New York.

Lew Worsham, Little Lose in Miami 4-Ball

Miami, Fla., March 6 (AP).—Lew Worsham, Washington, D. C.,'s U. S. Open Golf champion, and Lawson Little of Cleveland, recent winner of the St. Petersburg Open, were defeated by Dick Metz, Arkansas City, Kans., and Skip Alexander, Southern Pines, N. C., 3 and 1, today in the $10,000 international four-ball golf tournament here.

Bobby Locke, Johannesburg, South Africa, and Lloyd Mangrum, Chicago, battled to a tie with Sam Byrd, Detroit, and Johnny Revolta of Evanston, Ill., in 39 holes.

The foursome will resume their match tomorrow morning.

Defending Champions Ben Hogan and Jommy Demaret won their opening-round match by defeating Ralph Guldahl of Chicago and Jom Turnesa of Elmsford, N. Y., 5 and 4.

One of the seeded teams, Sammy Snead of Hot Springs, Va., the present British open champion, and Clayton Heafner of Charlotte, N. C., lost one-up on the thirty-sixth hole to two Argentine champions, Roberto de Vicenzo and Enrique Bertolino.

Jim Ferrier of San Francisco and Cary Middlecoff of Memphis, after trailing by one hole at the end of the morning 18, came back to beat E. J. (Dutch) Harrison of Little Rock, Ark., and Bob Hamilton of Evansville, Ind., 4 and 3.

Tony Penna of Cincinnati and Claude Harmon of Mamaroneck, N. Y., turned back Fred Haas, jr., of New Orleans, and Dave Douglas of Southern Pines, N. C., four and three.

Herman Keiser of Akron, Ohio, and Johnny Palmer, Badin, N. C., trailing two down at the end of 18, came back to defeat Vic Ghezzi of Kansas City, Kans., and Chick Harbert, Detroit, two and one.

Ellsworth Vines, Los Angeles and Ed Furgol, Pontiac, Mich., won from Norman Von Nide, Sydney, Australia, and George Schoux, Mamaroneck, N. Y., 1 up.

The field of 32 golfers automatically will be cut to 16 for tomorrow's second round play.

Grays Sign Rookie Shortstop Bob Boston

Washington's Homestead Grays, set to open spring training at Daytona Beach, Fla., on March 27, yesterday announced the signing of a rookie shortstop, Bob Boston, formerly of the East Liverpool Golden Stars of Ohio. Boston, 6 feet, 4 inches, 212 pounds, was the leading hitter in the East Liverpool City League last year. He batted .560 in 62 times at bat.

Went to post at 5:06. Off at 5:06½. Start good from gate. Won all driving. Winner, b. c. (3) by Hash—Manatella. Trained by W. Booth.

SALAMAGUNDI, $5.70, $3.00, $2.60; CALL BELL, $3.10, $2.90; DRUMBEAT, $8.40.

SALAMAGUNDI, under snug restraint for the first half mile, was between horses to the backstretch, came to the outside on the stretch turn, responded readily to pressure and, under strong handling wore down CALL BELL in the stretch to ge up in the final srides. CALL BELL followed close on the pace the first half mile, took command when ready and drew out on the turn, rallied gamely in stretch and just failed to last. DRUMBEAT, in hand to the second turn, raced a trifle wide down the backstretch, was roused on the stretch turn and closed fairly well in the drive. MAY REWARD forced the early pace in hand, took command between calls leaving the backstretch, saved ground the rest of the way but was tiring in the final eighth. SOLIDARITY, steadied along for five eighths, saved ground to the stretch turn, came out but failed to respond when put to pressure. PENNON saved some ground and never threatened. FLAMING BEAU had speed, saved ground, but was through after five eighths. STARTING TIME bolted entering the first turn and was pulled up.

Salmagundi Wins Derby

Solidarity, Hal Price Headley's Pennon, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Simpson's Flaming Beau and Mrs. Ann Pepper's Starting Tide, who bolted on the backstretch and dropped out.

Salmagundi has been nominated for the Kentucky Derby, as was Call Bell.

Flaming Beau set the pace and hel dit over May Reward, Call Bell and Salmagundi, virtually in that order, until near the turn of the backstretch.

Winner Pays $5.70

May Reward, fourth in the crowd's favor at the betting booths, came up, and as the pack hit the stretch Call Bell, with Jackie Westrope aboard, grabbed the lead.

Longden then gave Salmagundi the word and he surged forward and caught Call Bell at the finish—and the eye of the stewards in the photo windup.

Solidarity, another Kentucky Derby nominee, stumbled coming out of the gate and never could get going.

The handle was $739,597, shy of the record $781,300 bet last year.

Salmagundi paid $5.70, $3 and $2.60; Call Bell, $3.10 and $2.90, and Drumbeat, $8.40.

Md. Wrestlers Leave for Meet

Seven University of Maryland wrestlers will leave College Park today for the Southern Conference championships to be held at Washington and Lee in Lexington, Va., tomorrow and Tuesday.

The Terps have a 5-and-5 season record and have won five conference matches. In conference competition they downed VMI, VPI and North Carolina State and lost to Duke and Washington and Lee.

Same Old Script

Williams Drives in Winning Run for Williams' Squad

Sarasota, Fla., March 6 (AP).—Ted Williams drove in the winning run with a single to left center field in the seventh inning today as the "Teds" defeated the "Verns," 5-4, in the first intracamp game of the Red Sox preseason training program.

Several hundred free customers, who cheered lustily yesterday when Williams larruped three drives out the park, again shouted for Williams today as the team named for him defeated that named for Vern Stephens, shortstop obtained from the St. Louis Browns in the off season.

Yanks Pamper Bob Brown

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 6 (U.P.).—Bucky Harris today displayed a first baseman's glove, brand new.

"This goes to Bobby Brown when he arrives on Monday," the Yankee manager said. "I will hand him the mitt and say, 'make the most of it' because Brown very well could turn out to be our regular first baseman."

Brown had been given permission to report late in order that he could take his examinations at Tulane University.

Walker Signs

Clearwater, Fla., March 6 (U.P.).—National League Batting Champion Harry Walker, on of the most stubborn of the 1948 crop of holdouts, finally agreed to terms today and advised the Philadelphia Phillies he would report Monday "in top condition."

The Phillies didn't reveal what they were paying Walker, but it was indicated that he signed for more than $20,000. He turned down the club's offer of $18,000, stating he was holding out for $30,000, "because that's what the St. Louis Cardinals paid the 1946 batting champ, Stan Musial," Walker batted .363 last year.

Now It's Official—Warriors Win

New York, March 6 (AP).—Philadelphia was named winner of last Saturday's Basketball Association of America game with Providence by League President Maurice Podoloff today. Podoloff made his decision after a 3½-hour conference with game and team officials.

When the game ended Providence was believed the winner, 84 to 83, on a last second goal by Ken Sailors. Later the two referees ruled that Sailors' shot was made after the gun and that Philadelphia was the winner, 83 to 82.

George Named 'Most Valuable' on All-Metro Team

Five in NIT

This Proves Hoyas' Foes Were Rugged

DURHAM, N. C., March 6.—That Georgetown played a rugged basketball schedule this year is evidenced in the selections for the National Invitational Tournament. The Hoyas played and lost to five of the eight teams chosen for the New York show. Halfback George McAfee of the Chicago Bears, is here resting after an operation on his right toe. The Bruin speedster says he'll be ready to go soon and "Lujack and Layne will have to show plenty to keep me out of that backfield." Saturday marked the fifth time in six years Gerry Girard has coached the Duke basketball team that his Blue Devils have reached the conference finals. Four days ago Duke wasn't even certain it would receive a tourney spot as its 8-7 record left it in a three-way tie for eighth place. But the Devils got in when officials decided to allow ten, instead of eight teams, to participate. Sammy Snead has won two tournaments (Texas open and Seminole pro-am) since announcing his retirement three weeks ago.

COACH EVERETT CASE of N. C. State's Hoosier Hot Shots is one of the wealthiest coaches in that country. He owns a chain of restaurants in Indiana, but basketball is his first love. Although the State job is his first college coaching berth, Case makes $1000 more per season than State's head football coach. Rocky Graziano has promised Sonny Horne a shot at the middleweight crown if Horne whips him in their 10-round title bout at Uline Arena April 5. Maryland students call last month's issue of the monthly Terp magazine, "College Ring Magazine," as five pages are devoted to the Old Liners' boxing team. The editor of the publication is Heinie Miller, Maryland boxing coach. Cecil Travis has become a full-time Nat scout and told reporters, "I'm going to spend a lot of time watching semipro teams in small towns like those I played in."

N. C. STATE is completing work on a coliseum which will seat 14,000 for basketball. Tickets for Saturday night's Southern Conference finals were sold for $5 each by players on teams which had been eliminated. While Washington raves when 5,000 attend a college or pro game, the Conference meet here attracted 41,000 paying customers in four days. Conference football coaches spend their afternoon hours watching Duke's spring football practice. While 200 of Coach Wallace Wade's gridiron are bumping heads in one corner of the lot, Coach Jack Coombs has 146 baseball candidates working out on another corner. MORRIS SIEGEL.

5 Schools Place Men On Top Club

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Jack George and his once-beaten St. John's teammates come up with most of the honors in The Washington Post's annual selection of 1947-48 all-star scholastic basketball teams.

Nineteen-year-old George, a senior, is named most valuable player in the Washington area, and forward on the All-Metropolitan and All-Private school teams.

St. John's, winner of the Catholic high championship with a 24-1 record, is the outstanding team in Greater Washington. The Cadets compete in the Eastern Catholic interscholastic invitational tournament April 3-5 at Nowport, R. I.

Pantos Picked

Being named the top basketball player in the area is the second such honor for George this year. The Washington Post picked George as the outstanding football player after he led St. John's through eight straight victories without a defeat.

Master of every type of shot, George compiled a 15-point per game average. The versatile 6 foot 1 inch star was also an excellent bal handler, and set up many scoring plays for his teammates. His coach, Joe Gallagher, said of George, "he was the difference between Stt. John's being a championship team and just another good team."

Kingsbury High

The All-Metro team consists of the best players from The Washington Post's All-Private, All-Interhigh and All-Suburban teams. The first string All-Metro, averaging 6 fet in height, made 74 points per game.

Kingsbury, at 6 fet 4, is the team's tallest player, the leading scorer with a 23-point game average, and its best man on backboard rebounds. Pantos, at 5 feet 9, is the shortest, but its best defensive player. He was also the fourth leading scorer in the Interhigh League.

The 6-foot Brizendine is the best ball handler on the team, and has the best one handed set shot. He is considered the best collegiate prospect on the team. Rorer is the best two handed set shot artist, and one of its best defensive players. He led the Northern Virginia conference in scoring with a 10-point average.

Soccer Playoff

In the playoff for Washington and suburban Soccer League second-half honors, Sugar Radio and Marlboro meet at 2:30 p. m. today at Gonzaga field.

Ken Stribling Meets Brown

Ken Stribling, Washington middleweight who has lost only twice in the last three years, will face Randy Brown, of New York, in tomorrow night's feature boxing match at Turner's Arena.

Stribling, who has been mentioned as a possible summer opponent of Laverne Roach, current middleweight sensation, will be favored at 7-5 to whip Brown, victor over Artie Bethea here a few weeks ago.

Brown has beaten Danny Martin, Deacon Johnny Brown, Danny Kapilow, Ernie Forte and Kenny Harris in recent years, but may not be able to handle the hard right hand shots thrown by Stribling.

Ken has been impressive of late in downing Frank Lacey, Johnny Walker and Kid Wolfe. He also has victories over Joe Cannon and Frank Sweeney to his credit.

In the preliminaries, Johnny Hansbury and Jerome Pratt meet in a five-rounder and in two fours, Kid Willie and Bobby Suma clash and Kid Ferris takes on Mose Herald. Two more fours will be added to the card, which opens at 8:45 p. m.

Sonny Boy West, Garcia Booked

Sonny Boy West, District of Columbia lightweight, has been signed to meet Buddy Garcia of Mexico in the Liberty Athletic Club's 10-round feature bout at Uline Arena March 15.

With a record of 27 victories in 28 starts, West has defeated such well known boxers as Del Webb, Biff Jones, Maxie Starr and Johnny Forte. His only loss, to Larry Lasane, was later avenged

Scholastic Boxers Draw

Winchester, Va., March 6.—Middletown and Stephens City High School boxing teams fought to a 3-3 tie here last night.

Ed Erdelatz Quits Navy For Pro Job

Eddie Erdelatz, assistant football coach at Navy, resigned yesterday to become line coach of the San Francisco 49ers of the All-America Conference, The Washington Post learned.

In professional ball, Erdelatz will serve under Buck Shaw, an old friend. Erdelatz coached at St. Mary's College in California when Shaw coached at Santa Clara.

San Francisco is Erdelatz's home town.

The Navy Athletic Association said Erdelatz's resignation has "regretfully accepted." It had no word on his successor.

Navy's new head mentor, George Sauer, had asked that Erdelatz be retained. Sauer brought two aides with him from Kansas but said he wanted two additional assistants preferably from Capt. Tom Hamilton's staff.

Sauer succeeded the captain at Navy's grid helm this year. Hamilton became director of athletics.

Erdelatz was the second Navy assistant coach to resign this year. After a year at Annapolis, backfield tutor Bob McNeish recently became V.P.I. head coach.

Erdelatz graduated from St. Mary's in California in 1935, spent six years as assistant coach there and at San Francisco University. He served at St. Mary's preflight school during the war and came to the academy in 1945 while still an officer.

Maury Coach Shifts

Norfolk, Va., March 6 (AP).—Thomas W. (Woody) Gray, Maury High School basketball and assistant football coach, has been named assistant football mentor at Woodrow Wilson High School, Portsmouth.

NEW REDSKIN—Dan Sandifer, Louisiana State University backfield star, yesterday was signed by the Washington Redskins for the 1948 season. Sandifer, 21, starred in the North-South All-Star games of the past two seasons. He is a fine running back and excellent on defense . . . two departments in which the Redskins urgently are in need of bolstering

'Skins, Bears Play Sept. 19

The Chicago Bears and the Washington Redskins will meet in Baltimore next September 19 in the Variety Club's fourth annual benefit game for the Boys Clubs of Washington and Baltimore.

Frank Boucher, chief barker of the local chapter of the Variety Club, and Carter Barron, founder of the game, announced the contest at a press and radio luncheon yesterday.

This year's game will feature such established National Football League stars as Sammy Baugh of the Redskins and Sid Luckman of the Bears plus a brilliant crop of newcomers.

The Bears will have Quarterback Johnny Lujack and George Connor, tackle, from Notre Dame, and Bobby Layne of Texas in their lineup for the first time, while the Redskins will present Harry Gilmer, the Alabama boy who some day may succeed Baugh as the team's passing mainstay.

In the three previous benefit games, the Variety Club realized approximately $100,000 for distribution to the Boys Clubs. When the Bears and Redskins met in 1945 in Baltimore, 45,580 fans paid to see the Bears win by 20-14.

In the other two games of this series, the Redskins defeated Detroit's Lions, 21-14, in 1945, and won from the Green Bay Packers last year, 21-13.

Levin, Rhode Tangle Verbally About Time

Wrestlers Dave Levin and Dutch Rhode are moving their scraps from the Turner ring to the public domain for a few days.

The boys are squabbling over the time limit for their match at Turner's Wednesday night. Dave wants a fight to the finish, Dutch wants a regular one-hour limit and Turner wants more customers.

Navy Has It Easy With Army, 49-36

West Point N. Y. March 6.—Jackie Robbins, captain of the Navy quintet registered twenty-one points to pace the Middies to a decisive 49 to 36 victory over Army before an over-flow crowd of 5500 in the caverous Field House today.

It was the twenty fifth meeting in the service school rivalry which dates back to 1920. The Cadets, despite today's loss, their second in a row to Navy, still hold a 14 to 11 advantage.

The Middies were in complete command as early as half time, holding a 25 to 18 point lead. Commanding the back-board and playing a possessive type of ball, the Blue and Gold simply outclassed the hapless Cadets in the second half, opening up bulges of 13, 14, 17 and finally 18 points, before Ben Carnevale withdrew his regulars in the closing minutes of play.

Robbins' chief aides were Midshipmen John Barrow and Bob Searle who, with 13 and 11 points respectively, also outscored the best individual effort of the Cadets. Bill Yeomans, Captain-elect of Army's 1948 football squad, paced the Cadets with ten points.

Army Fencers Triumph

West Point, N. Y., March 6.—Army's fencing team won its most important meet of the season, defeating Navy, 15½ to 11½, on the Academy's strips today. It was the first loss of the season for the Midshipmen and Army's first victor yover Navy since 1941.

House Republicans Rout Senate and Court

House Republicans outslugged the Senate and Supreme Court All-Stars, 24-7, yesterday in a Congressional pages softball game on the Ellipse.

Pete Collins pounded out three triples for the winners and Bob Hand hit two doubles and two singles for the All-Stars.

Wilkinson Tells All-America Dodgers Are Raiding Players

Norman, Okla., March 6 (AP).—Football Coach Bud Wilkinson charged today the Brooklyn Football Dodgers sent a scout onto the University of Oklahoma campus to sign up three of his players.

He demanded that the All-America Pro Conference stop it.

"It is my sincere belief that as commissioner of the league you should prevent this activity on the part of your league representatives," Wilkinson wrote to Admiral Jonas Ingram, conference commissioner.

"Not only are you destroying the good will of the colleges but you are weakening your position with the general public by publishing rules and then completely failing to live up to them."

Rapacz Case Recalled

Wilkinson recalled that Center John Rapacz had been lost to the Sooners because he signed an undated contract with the Cleveland Browns.

"When he was sold to the Rockets (Chicago) a short time ago," Wilkinson wrote, "his contract came to light. Since he had signed a contract and received money, he was a professional and we have declared him ineligible for further competition."

Wilkinson told Ingram that three other players with eligibility left "are being contacted repeatedly by representatives of your league. The Brooklyn Dodgers sent a scout to our campus yesterday in an effort to get them to sign."

The Oklahoma coach said the All-America League rules forbid offering contracts to college players who have eligibility remaining.

Rickey, Voyles Notified

Copies of the letter were sent to Branch Rickey, owner of the Dodgers, and Carl Voyles, coach.

Wilkinson declined to name the three players sought by the Dodgers.

Rapacz, Oklahoma's All-Big Seven Conference center, withdrew from the university recently after he was barred from future intercollegiate play.

He acknowledged accepting $1000 for signing an undated contract with the Cleveland pro team.

After it was disclosed Rapacz had been traded by Cleveland to Chicago, he said he would not play for the Rockets.

Kozar Looks Like Boy

last year, and he figures that if he makes the Washington club he'll bat second.

The infield situation in the Washington camp is taking on more interest these days, incidentally. A tremendous impression was made today by a little-publicized rookie from Augusta, Ga., of the Sally league, Clarence Difani who can play second third or short.

Difani is of French forebears, not of Italian as his name would imply. He's a strapping sx-footer of 185 pounds and big as infielders go. He's going to get a shot at Eddie Yost's third base job in the hope he'll add some hitting power to the Washington club.

Difani batted .315 with Augusta last season. Scout Mike Martin turned him up after going to Augusta to scout on outfielder named Ralph Brown, who was the fastest man in the league. In a 100-yard race Brown barely nosed out Difani, and the latter looked like the better hitter so Martin lost interest in Brown and signed the infielder.

Shortstop Mark Christman, the club's last holdout, came to terms with Griffith today and signed a contract after successfully holding out against a $1500 in his $10,000 salary.

Christman is insurance against any failures by the rookie infielders the club is ready to start with . . . Dean Stafford, the big outfielder from Texas was another arrival today but his fellow Texan, Larry Drake, is detained by the illness of his wife . . . Stafford is the biggest man on the squad with the exception of some of the pitching giants, and according to Scout Joe Cambria, the longest hitter . . . Eddie Yost, and Earl Wooten also checked into camp but too late for the practice . . . Mickey Vernon was in uniform for the first time and acted like the best hitter on the club . . . The pace of the workouts was stepped up considerably with George Myatt, the Chattanooga manager, and Eddie Lyons, both holler guys, on the scene in uniform . . . When the Nats open their exhibition game season against the Athletics at West Palm Beach this weekend, Manager Joe Kuhel will start all rookie pitchers.

Sun Wonder Wins Race

Miss Judy Johnson and Miss Helen Horst's Shotgun, ridden by the owner.

The only other pair to finish was Woodwind and Wood Secret, owned by John Hopewell.

Only two horses competed in the heavyweight race won by Dr. Thomas Hughe's Grand Trap, ridden by Frank Worrell.

The Stabler Brothers' Happy Girl, winner last year, was second.

The Gap Hunter's Race brought a thrilling neck finish with Miss Nancy Hanna's Smokey first, ahead of Miss Jane Blunt's Tiny Mite.

Hospital authorities reported no serious einjuries to either injured rider. Miss Himes was discharged from Montgomery County General Hospital after examination revealed no serious injury. Mrs. Teller was admitted to Bethesda Naval Hospital with "lacerations of the scalp and a sprained right shoulder."

REDLAND BOWL—Won by Beverley Byrd's Sun Wonder, ridden by owner; second, T. T. Mott, jr.'s Chen, ridden by Miss Judy Johnson; third, Marian Curran's Lump Sum, ridden by Marian Curran, jr. Time, 8:10⅗.

Miss Wilkins Wins

New York, March 6 (AP).—Barbara Wilkins of New Rochelle, N. Y., dethroned defending champion Nina Irwin of New York, 6—4, 4—6, 6—4, today in the final of the 1948 Eastern Indoor Tennis tourney.

GW High Wins State Track Title

Charlottesville, Va., March 6.—Scoring 24 points, the track team from George Washington High of Alexandria won the State interscholastic indoor championship here this afternoon.

Second place went to Washington-Lee High of Arlington, which registered 16½ points.

Most of George Washington's points were piled up by Bobby Jones, Bill Dudrow and Bob Hanna. Each was a first-place winner.

Jones, titleholder in the half-mile, made a runaway of that event, which he negotiated in 2:06.3, finishing by nearly half a length ahead of the field.

Hanna, also a gridiron star, captured the 50-yard dash in 5.6 seconds, while his teammate, Dudrow, easily annexed first place in the high jump with a leap of 5 feet 9 inches.

An outstanding performance was turned in in the pole vault by Beecroft of Newport News, who cleared the bar at 11 feet 6 inches.

Augusta Military Academy alone failed to score.

Landon Ties For Title, 43-40

Overcoming an early 15-2 deficit, Landon School rallied to defeat St. Andrew's 43-40, yesterday at Landon to tie St. Alban's for the Interstate Athletic Conference championship.

Woody Jennings and Don Dudley, scoreless until the last minute, dropped the deciding baskets for Landon. Gil Bogley, tennis star, was high for the winners with 15 points.

The victory gave Landon a 5-1 league record and an overall mark of 11-5.

How would you like to write a check for $2,498.94 to yourself dated New Year's Day 1958? You can do exactly that by signing your name any time in January to an authorization form at your bank which will permit them to take $18.75 a month from the funds you have on deposit and buy one $25 Savings Bond for you every month for the next 10 years. The Payroll Savings Plan—which is the partial payment way to buy Savings Bonds where you work—is equally powerful in producing a sizable nestegg out of regular savings.

Chesapeake Oyster Comeback Mapped

Federal and State Help to Be Sought In Program to Stimulate Production

Annapolis, Md., March 6 (AP).—A new effort for rehabilitating the Chesapeake Bay oyster will be suggested soon by Senator Louis L. Goldstein, Calvert County.

His plan centers on the use of cooperatives to bring the bay back into substantial production.

The Democratic Senator, who heads the Chesapeake Bay and Tributaries Committee, was one of the strongest opponents of leasing the bay to individuals as proposed at the 1947 General Assembly.

In the cooperative plan, he will seek the aid of the Federal and State governments. From the Federal Government, he would get the initial financial assistance for a group of Calvert County watermen, and from the State government, the supply of shells and seeds needed.

He proposes to ask the Tidewater Fisheries Commission to open Flag Pond Oyster Rock in Calvert County for oyster cultivation as a beginning. This was closed in 1941 for wartime reasons.

The actual lease would be to the cooperative, and if it failed, the Rock would be opened again to free fishing.

Goldstein said he had consulted State legal authorities and that "we think the plan will work."

"I want to repeat again that I am opposed to leasing out the bay to individuals. The plan would enable oystermen to keep the bay from getting out of their hands."

4-Year Corn Borer Cost Is Put at 130 Million

Blacksburg, Va., March 6 (AP).—Losses in the 28 States infested with the corn borer have amounted to $130,000,000 in the past four years, according to a United States Department of Agriculture report released here.

The report, released through Virginia Agricultural Extension service, said the 1946 borer damage in the Nation had multiplied seven times over that of 1941. Extension service specialists said while the borer is not a serious threat in Virginia it has infested some counties in the northern section of the State in recent years.

Soil Survey Workers To Discuss Mapping

Blacksburg, Va., March 6 (AP).—Workers in the State-wide soil survey program will discuss problems of soil mapping and classification at a conference on the Virginia Tech campus Monday and Tuesday.

Attending will be representatives of Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station and of the two agencies cooperating with the station in the survey program—the United States Bureau of Plant Industry and the United States Soil Conservation Service.

Severe Face Burns Suffered in Fire

Camp Ritchie, Md., March 6 (AP). A 19-year-old nurses aide received first degree burns on her face in a fire which early today destroyed a barracks at this former military training center.

The barracks was used as quarters for nurses and attendants at the temporary State chronic disease hospital located here. The hospital itself, with its 77 patients, was not threatened by the blaze.

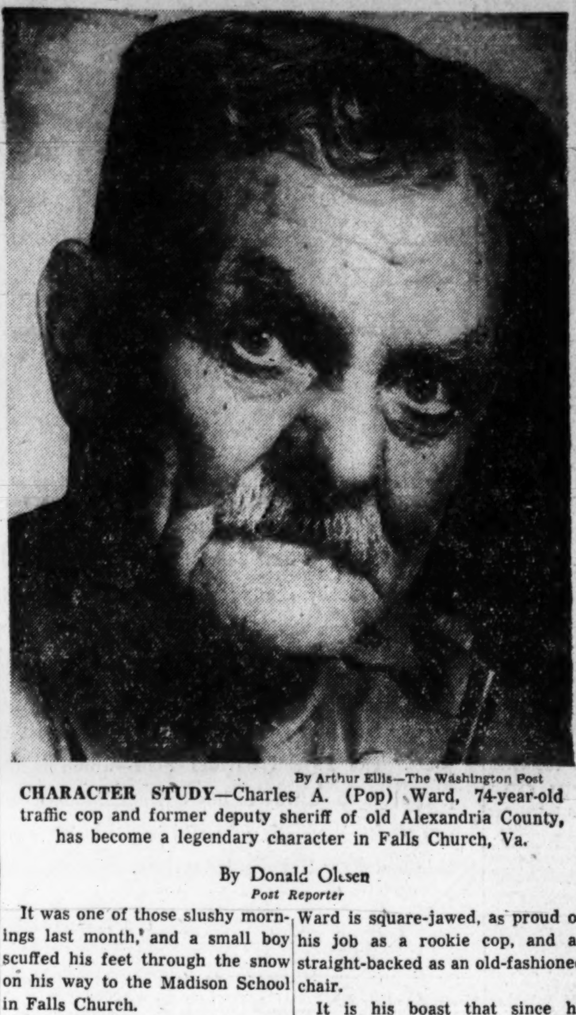
Miss Doris Brown of Sabillasville, Md., suffered face burns as well as arm and hand wounds when she ran through the building to waken others who might still be sleeping.

Embezzlement Suspect Returned From Texas

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 6 (AP).—Allen Gutske, 24-year-old former manager of a chain department store here, was returned to Martinsburg from Waco, Tex., yesterday on a charge of embezzling about $5000 from the store's funds. He was jailed to await a magistrate's hearing next week.

He had been with the store about a year, the last three months of which he had served as temporary manager.

Falls Church Cop Who Is 'Pop' To Pupils Mothers 'Em, Too



By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

CHARACTER STUDY—Charles A. (Pop) Ward, 74-year-old traffic cop and former deputy sheriff of old Alexandria County, has become a legendary character in Falls Church, Va.

By Donald Olsen
Post Reporter

It was one of those slushy mornings last month, and a small boy scuffed his feet through the snow on his way to the Madison School in Falls Church.

Opposite the school, a tall, brush-mustached figure in a policeman's uniform stopped him. "Where'r your rubbers, son," the cop asked.

"Aw, Pop, I left 'em home," the child said.

"Well you go home, put 'em on, and don't let me see you again today without 'em," said the cop. The boy did, too.

Because of incidents like that, Charles A. (Pop) Ward is as much a Falls Church landmark as the town's 1765 Episcipal Church. Like the church, he carries much of the region's history with him.

At what he says is 74. Pop Ward is square-jawed, as proud of his job as a rookie cop, and as straight-backed as an old-fashioned chair.

It is his boast that since he took the traffic post at Madison School six years ago, "there's never been a child hurt nor a fender scratched."

Pop was born, by his own retarded calendar, in 1873 in Georgetown, when the area was a "regular deep-water port" and the four-masted sailing ships and steam packets unloaded goods from all over the world.

Since then, he found time to fight in the Spanish-American War, raise a family, dodge bullets, knives and bottles as an Arlington Deputy Sheriff, work as a singularly successful tinsmith, and put in odd duty variously as a fireman and policeman.

His tenure as an Arlington deputy about the start of the century was a lot more exciting. In those days, Arlington—then Alexandria County—had a bawdy fringe bordering the Potomac from the present 14th st. bridge to Rosslyn, he explained.

Within this sin-happy strip of ginmills, gambling hells, and bordellos, Pop was shot at, stabbed, and once wounded by a bullet. He still has the scar on his leg to prove it. In 1902, he was one of about 20 men who conducted an "ax party" against the vice centers.

Thrives on Whisky and Onions

Today, Ward occupies a small, neat room in the rear of a delicatessen at 501 N. Washington st. He shares the space with a bed, a swivel chair, a wood-burning stove, a "half-bath," and two doors which stay open to the weather even when it bites.

County's Ban On Abattoir Under Attack

With a half-built abattoir on their hands, a Maryland farmers' group has began a court fight against the licensing ordinance which ruled out their Gaithersburg, Md., enterprise.

The suit contesting constitutionality of the ordinance was filed Friday in Montgomery County Circuit Court for Southern States Cooperative Service, Inc. Named defendants are the Montgomery County Commissioners and Clitus O. Bourdeaux, jr., an attorney whose home is a few hundred feet from the proposed slaughterhouse.

The ordinance, passed by the County Commissioners last September when the abattoir was being built, provides for a $500 annual license fee, and forbids such operation within 500 yards of any dwelling. Bourdeaux, the suit says, led the fight for passage of the ordinance.

James H. Pugh, former State's attorney, offering for the farmers' group, said the suit contests constitutionality of a 1945 law passed by the Maryland General Assembly authorizing county commissioners to enact ordinances relating to health, safety and pubic welfare of county's residents.

Work on the abattoir, he said, is being pushed, and completion is expected this summer at a cost of $10,600.

Libya Study Opened by Big 4 Group

Cairo, March 6 (AP).—The Big Four nations today launched a study of what to do with Libya, potential base of American and British power to resist Communism in Europe.

A commission representing the United States, Russia, Britain and France left Cairo by plane for Tripolitania, where the British military administration has been repairing roads, barracks and other facilities and the Americans are tidying up the wartime air base at Mellaha.

In addition to the American airfield, able to handle Superfortress bombers and giant transports, the commissioners will glimpse the big British operated airport.

From these airports planes can fly nonstop and back to points in Europe some 2000 miles away.

In Tripoli the commission will hear spokesman for Arab, Italian and other residents.

The commission will report to the Deputy Foreign Ministers, who have until September 15 to agree on the future of Italy's former African empire. If no agreement is reached the question will go to the U. N.

Carpenter Union Plans to Rejoin Trades Council

Cumberland, Md., March 6 (AP).—Local 1024 of the AFL Carpenters Union plans to rejoin the Allegany Trades Council, also an AFL organization.

The carpenters withdrew from the trades council recently when the council refused to disaffiliate from the Western Maryland labor unity conference. The carpenters objected to the fact that the president of the unity conference, William B. Coleman, had refused to sign the non-Communist oath under the Taft-Hartley Act.

The resignation of Coleman, the carpenters said, has removed the principal cause of their withdrawal. Meanwhle, Willam Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, informed the carpenters he will investigate their charges against the Trades Council.

Father Slain on Auto Ride, Prince of Arab Kingdom Says

Paris, March 6 (U.P.).—Prince Seif el-islam Abullah, one of the 16 sons of the slain Iman Yahya, ruler of the Arabian kingdom of Yemen, said tonight his father was killed in gangster style by a volley of machine-gun bullets while he was touring the countryside.

Abdullah, chief of the Yemen delegation to the United Nations, told a news conference his aged father died while out driving in mid-February with his first minister, an aide and a grandson.

An automobile suddenly pulled up alongside the Yahya's car and riddled it with more than 200 bullets, he said. All the occupants were killed instantly, he added.

Abullah said he did not believe Sayed Abullah Ibn Ahmed El-wazir, who now is running Yemen, led the plot, but charged El-Wazir "had a hand in it."

The prince said his eldest brother, Prince Eeif el Islam Ahmed, now is rallying an army for a march on Sana, a capital of Yemen.

"The situation will resolved shortly," Abullah said.

Continuance of Nuernberg War Crimes Trials Debated

Nuernberg, Germany, March 6 (U.P.).—Whether the Nuernberg war crimes trials will continue is the subject of much debate here.

On Tuesday, Alvin D Rockwell, top legal adviser to Gen. Lucius D. Clay, assured the press of continued United States congressional financial support.

Rockwell also rejected any suggestion that Brig. Gen. Telford Taylor, chief prosecutor, will be fired, or that German-administered denazification proceedings will take over.

Thus the Nuernberg trials appeared to be good for another six to eighth months. Two cases are nearly over, two more are at the halfway mark and two otners are about to begin. Contracts to civilian employes extend well into November.

But despite these official assurances, some observers predict that the trials will soon come to an abrupt end or Taylor will be relieved of his job, or both, as the result of the attack against "unfair" trials delivered 10 days ago by retiring Judge Charles F. Wennerstrum of Chariton, Iowa.

Taylor's reply, observers said, backed up their view the trials will be closed down soon or Taylor eased out.

Delaying actions have been executed consciously or unconsciously by almost every party to the proceedings.

In addition only a few of the death sentences so far pronounced have been carried out—with the exception of the top Nazis who were first to be tried.

Leesburg Police School Graduates 13 Trainees

Leesburg, Va., March 6 (Spl.).—Thirteen persons were awarded certificates for completion of courses in the police officers' training school here last night.

Presentation of the awards was made at a banquet by Town Sergeant James A. Thompson to S. P. Alexander, C. F. Reed, C. S. Hutchinson, S. C. Bell, William J. Harper, Frank G. Orrison, Winslow Williams and Jack C. Von Berg of Leesburg; Maurice Cornell, Purcellville; M. L. Holler, Lovettsville, and Roy Lanham, Clayton Tinsman and Stanley E. Wilson, Middleburg.

The school ran a month with officers of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and local men as instructors.

Blaze Destroys Three Buildings In Goldsboro, Md.

Goldsboro, Md., March 6 (AP).—A house, the postoffice and general store of this Eastern Shore hamlet were destroyed last night in a fire.

W. C. Jones' general store and apartment over it burned to the ground. So did Leroy Cartwright's two-story frame house. All that is left of the postoffice is the brick walls.

The fire started in Jones' store, and it took three fire companies two hours to get it under control. Fire engines from Denton, Mary-

Southern Belles To Reign at Ball

Busy as little boll weevils at cotton picking time are these young lovelies who will represent the various cotton-producing States at the Cotton Ball on March 10 at the Shoreham Hotel. Above, left, is Miss Nell Eastland, daughter of Senator and Mrs. James O. Eastland, who will be Miss Mississippi. Sewing cotton bolls to the gown which Nell will wear is Miss Missouri—Evelyn Kem, daughter of Senator and Mrs. James P. Kem

MAID OF COTTON for 1948 is tall, brunette Miss Matilda Nail of Texas, who will be in Washington to attend the ball. She is pictured in one of her many cotton costumes, made for her by leading American designers. Created by Eta, it is of white organdie with rows and rows of tiny pleats at the neckline and on the wide skirt

By Marie McNair

WHEN Mrs. Wayland Brooks, wife of the Senator from Illinois, jumped into print as an author, she landed right in the middle of one of Chicago's biggest dailies.

A diary—kept on her European trip last fall, painted such a clear picture that the Chicago paper printed it verbatim in three installments. Seventeen down-State journals offered it to their readers, too, featuring it in serial form.

Mary Brooks kept a record of her trip solely for herself and family. At least that was her intention. But when she got home and friends besieged her with questions, she turned the book over to some of them to read. "Why, you should print that," one of them suggested.

Here was an opportunity to let people in on Europe's plight as seen by a feminine eye. As the wife of a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee, Mrs. Brooks had opportunity to see much more than the average American tourist.

With Mrs. Styles Bridges, the only other Senator's wife in the party, she talked with the people, visited the destitute in their homes, saw what they had to wear, what little they had to eat and the meager supplies in their cellars.

In Berlin she saw frail, white-haired women without shoes digging trenches, removing war's rubble. In rural France, she saw barns bursting with wheat, yet near starvation in the cities. Why? Because, according to a high official, in answer

'How Old Man's Changed,' Quipped Senator Barkley As He Viewed His Portrait

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

AT A RECENT party given by Journalist Ruth Montgomery, Senator Barkley of Kentucky was presented with a portrait of himself. The presentee was handsome Bill Hunt, who manages several dozen profitable (still) agencies in China, and loves to toss about expensive gifts. The painting showed the Senator in a sternish, statesmanlike pose, instead of his more familiar, smiling self.

The gift was a complete surprise, and after Senator Barkley had looked it over, he told a story in lieu of an acceptance speech. Out in the Midwest, an old Swedish immigrant, father, grandfather of innumerable children, up and died. He'd never had as much as a snapshot taken, so his offspring hired an artist to recreate a likeness of grandpa.

With considerable skill the artist pieced together a portrait from descriptions given by the old man's relatives. When the painting was hung, a favorite son returned on a visit to the family homestead. While sisters and brothers eagerly awaited a verdict, he surveyed the masterpiece from all angles, right, left, up and down. Then he turned and drawled, "Yumping yimminy, how the old man's changed!"

Success Story

JUST A BRIEF week ago this department ran an item about Polish Prince Sanguszko, who's contemplating buying a farm in this vicinity because he wants his son educated in the United States. The prince, who was smart enough to salt away his ducats in Brazil, remarked casually he was willing to spend some $500,000, not zlotys, for a slice of Virginia or Maryland territory. The mention of so many dollars flushed almost every real estate firm in Washington. No less than 18 people either called or wrote, offering palatial country estates!

Here's our favorite real estate success story. Pretty, Vienna-born Gertie d'Amercourt arrived in Washington four years ago with her French husband who headed the Air Training Center. Realizing rents were high, she saved money; after a year put her all into a house. Next move was to do over two small Georgetown houses, rent them profitably. When her husband returned to France she stayed on, assuming almost full support for her three children.

A year ago she joined a real estate firm headed by a retired Army colonel. In 12 months she has sold 19 houses! To the French Embassy's Armand Berards, former Polish President Mikolajczyk, to mention a few. Recently she has bought herself a large house in Chevy Chase. What's her secret? First, Mme. d'Amercourt never lets business interfere with pleasure; next, she's nice to look at, full of fun, gets around a lot among the Capital's well-heeled foreign population!

Celebrities Interview Celebrities

EACH WEEK at the Monday cocktail hour a new kind of stunt is to be pulled in the Shoreham's plush Palladium Room. It's called a "Celebrity Interview," and selected members of the press will interview, of course, a celebrity. These get-togethers will be sponsored by different organizations. As a starter, Monday's celebrity interview is taken over by the United Service to China with smart Dr. Jimmy Yen, the director of the mass-education movement in China, as victim. His old pal, Supreme Court Associate Justice William Douglas, will act as moderator, and such China experts as charming Lieut. Gen. Al Wedemeyer are going to be on hand.

Bits of This and That

THE FUSS over President Truman's naming Thomas McCabe as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board has fathered a silly wisecrack down in the Senate. Mr. McCabe heads Scott Tissues, so, inevitably, it's "from tissue to issue." In the same vein, there's a new name for the Benelux countries (Belgium, Netherlands, Luxembourg). It's "Spaakistan" . . . Former Senator Burton Wheeler is having fun these days, profitably. He's busy trying a case which falls under a law he himself thought up and sponsored . . . Recently, there was a movement afoot to modernize Navy uniforms. Though handsome drawings were made to show off projected improvements, the idea collapsed because both officers and gobs dislike change. However, by underground route we've heard one important change will be made—zippers are being substituted for buttons!

Dixieland Dance Will Pay Honor To King Cotton

By Peggy Preston

THEY'LL strike up the band with "Dixie' Wednesday night in the ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel and the third annual Cotton Ball will get under way.

The dance is to be a salute to the South's most valuable product—cotton. And, incidentally, a tribute to Dixie's fairest daughters who will be represented in the Maid of Cotton and her Court, made up of young girls from each of the 18 cotton-producing States.

Members of the State societies of Texas, Tennessee and Mississippi, who are sponsoring the ball, plan to transform the ballroom into a "Cotton Heaven" for the occasion. Bales of the white, fluffy product will line the walls and be stacked as though on a levee before a huge backdrop on which is painted a Southern plantation scene.

To further insure proper atmosphere one member from Texas has composed a song, which will be played right after "Dixie." It is called "Let's Get On That Cotton Pickin' Ball." Translated, northside, that means, "Let's Get On The Beam."

DISTINGUISHED guests will be announced as they arrive with a fanfare of trumpets. Miss Margaret Truman, First Daughter of the Land and of Missouri, is scheduled to attend with a group of 10 guests. Diplomatic and official society will be well represented and many acceptances have been received from Yankees, including Speaker of the House, Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr.

The Supreme Court delegation will be headed by those famous Kentuckians, Chief Justice and Mrs. Fred M. Vinson and their son, Jimmy, who will escort "Miss Kentucky" of the Maid's Court. Cabinet members to be present include the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John W. Snyder, the Secretary of Labor and Mrs. Lewis B. Schwellenbach, the Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Kenneth C. Royall.

THE YEAR'S maid is a striking, 19-year-old from Fort Worth, Tex., Miss Matilda Nail. She was selected by the American cotton industry to be its representative in a tour of 30 cities in this country, and Paris and England.

Her escort for the ball and "King of Cotton" for the night is Jack Tunstill, also of Fort Worth, reputed to be one of that city's most eligible bachelors.

The maid and her attendants will all wear evening gowns of such fabrics as organdie, gingham, calico and chambray. Most of the feminine guests

ENJOYING his role of "stylist" for the Cotton Ball is Representative Joe L. Evins of Tennessee, who looks on approvingly as Harriet Cooley creates a cotton gown for Miss Mary Lou Rutledge. Miss Cooley, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Harold D. Cooley of South Carolina, will be her State's representative. Miss Rutledge, daughter of Justice and Mrs. Wiley B. Rutledge, will be Miss Virginia. This will be one formal ball where silks and satins will be frowned upon. Calico and gingham, organdie and chambray will have their night in the fashion spotlight, and the Maid and her attendants will lead the parade in wide-skirted, old-fashioned dresses of familiar old fabrics. The ball will open with a cotton fashion show

Diplomatic Circling

By Elizabeth Maguire

"NOW we can breathe freely," says Mme. Slavik, wife of the former Ambassador of Czechoslovakia whose resignation as his country's envoy to United States was front-page news during the past week.

"It is hard to serve two ideas at once," she explained, following the news of her husband's resignation to the government in Prague, now Communist dominated.

A pretty woman with charm and intelligence, she filled the roll of ambassadress admirably. Like former Ambassador Hurban and his wife, who are now in Prague, the Slaviks were popular members of diplomatic society.

They have already moved from their house and are spending a few days at the Shoreham. After a vacation out of town, the Slaviks will settle down to a new life, plans for which have not yet crystallized.

In an interview this department had with Mme. Slavik about a year ago, she stated she had mastered about five languages. but had never quite digested Russian.

WHILE Lady Inverchapel enjoyed the warm sun of Nassau last week, the Earl and Countess of Airlie were guests of the British Embassy for three days. The Earl is representative Peer for Scotland and Lord Chamberlain to the Queen. After a short visit in Boston, the Earl and Countess sailed Friday on the Queen Mary.

The Agricultural Attache of the Spanish Embassy and Senora de Echegaray, their friends will be glad to hear, are expected back the latter part of this month, after a long vacation in Europe.

Sir Girja Bajpai, former Ambassador of India, is coming to America again, this time to serve on the Indian delegation to the Security Council of the U. N. He will replace Mohammed Abdullah within a few weeks.

The Pakistan Embassy has a new chancery at 2343 S st. It is the former residence of Mr. and Mrs. Leland Harrison. The property runs the entire length of the block and has a lovely garden. The staff are still looking

Miss Bielaski Is Bride of Mr. Balsley

At a quiet ceremony yesterday at St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, lovely Miss Ruth Cary Bielaski became the bride of Lieut. Comdr Frank Henry Balsley, USN, of Washington. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Rosalyn Calais Bielaski of Washington and Frederick Bielask of Mexico City, Mexico. The bridegroom is the son of Capt. Alfred Henry Balsley, USN (retired) and Mrs. Balsley of St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, formerly of Washington.

The Right Rev. Angus Dun, Bishop of Washington, officiated at the ceremony. He was assisted by the Rev. Harold Sedgwick, rector of St. Thomas' Church. A small family reception followed the ceremony at the Washington Club.

Mr. Bielaski gave his daughter in marriage. She wore ivory satin of period design with hoop skirt and long train. Her veil of illusion fell from a headdress of Chantilly lace. The bride wore her great grandmother's cameo brooch, and her flowers were a cascade bouquet of white lilacs.

Mrs. Draper Laurence Kauffman of Washington the former Margaret Cary Tuckerman, was matron of honor, and the bridesmaids were Mrs. Charles B. Hines of Peekskill, N. Y., and Miss Mary Elizabeth McLaughlin of Washington. The three attendants wore nile green taffeta gowns with ostrich plume bonnets. Mrs. Kauffman carried copper-colored African daisies, and the two bridesmaids carried pale yellow marguerite daisies.

The bridegroom's father was best man. William Sale, Raymond Hazebroek and Robert Homann of Washington, Samuel Baugh, 2d, of Jamestown, R. I., and Barclay Preston Schoyer of Pittsburgh served as ushers.

Mrs. Balsley is a member of the Junior League of Washington, and she attended Smith College. Commander Balsley attended the University of Virginia, where he was a member of Phi Kappa Psi.

The couple will be at home after March 29 at 1432 36th st. nw.

Mothers' Club Meets Tuesday

A joint meeting of the Alpha Delta Pi Mothers' Clubs of George Washington University and University of Maryland will take place Tuesday, March 9, at 8 p. m. at the sorority house at College Park, Md. Guest speaker will be Mrs. James McManaway, wife of the acting director of Folger Shakespearean Library. She will discuss her trip to Stratford, England, last summer to attend with her husband the International Conference on Shakespeare.

To Entertain

Mrs. Charles W. O. Bunker, wife of Admiral Bunker, will entertain at tea on Thursday at her home in Bethesda, in honor of Senorita Minerva Bernardino, who will leave shortly as Dominican delegate to the Bogota conference.

MRS. WILLIAM MORAN of Arlington with her 3-year-old daughter, Kathleen, starts out on the after-nap outing. Kathleen's early attempts at conversation are the object of many a family joke. She continuously switches back and forth between her father's Yankee accent and her mother's English expressions. Her parents met in England during the war

Report After Two Years

British War Brides Take American Roots In Homes of Their Own

By Norma Foust

ON FEBRUARY 12, 1946, some two thousand British girls got their first glimpse of America from the rail of the Queen Mary as it entered New York Harbor.

These were war brides who came across the ocean to join the Yankees they had met and married in England.

The average girl arriving here then knew only her husband in this country, had no apartment of her own to go to, was very lonesome and longed to be able to "plant her roots" somewhere. After such a long period of uncertainty, she wanted most of all a place to call home.

But now that average British bride of two years back is an American housewife and mother—comfortably settled in her own apartment or GI-financed house. She cooks American food and loves it, furnishes her home after American styles and customs and gets a special thrill when her American child says he's "two and a half" instead of "two and a hawlf," when asked his age.

The British bride, of course, was at a disadvantage compared to the American bride of two years ago, who had her family near by to consult about choosing furniture for her new home.

Most of the English girls lived with husband's parents until an apartment or house could be found. Then the task of furnishing the new home—all the way up from pots and pans—posed quite a problem. There wasn't time to make a painstaking study of the prices and stocks in different furniture stores.

Quite a few did as Mrs. William Moran. Soon after she landed in this country her husband bought a five-room bungalow in North Arlington. Pat Moran had always thought she'd furnish her new house to model her old home in England, but she abandoned that plan on the premise: "When in America, do as Americans do."

After one afternoon's shopping in one department store, she had the whole house furnished—not by following a certain period or her English-bred tastes, just buying what she thought best suited a modest American family.

FRIED CHICKEN—a dish almost unheard of in England—is the Sunday favorite for most British brides. Sunday dinners also usually include pastries made from our ready-mixed baking packages. (The gingerbread and devil's food cake mixes are the most popular.)

Corn on the cob, another novelty for the new American housewives, and grapes and oranges are other regulars on their menus.

American-style Italian spaghetti is Mrs. Lawrence Kennedy's favorite food discovery since she has been in this country. She and her husband and 3-year-old Larry, jr., and 1-year-old Patricia Ann, live in a two-bedroom apartment in the George Pickett Homes, Arlington.

Ena Kennedy has been perfecting her Italian spaghetti for a year, and now it's "the best I've ever tasted," boasts her husband.

Although she is thankful to be able to serve her family a heretofore unimaginable variety of good food, Pat Moran had considerable trouble getting her stomach accustomed to the new richness in her diet after arriving from England.

But that didn't stop her from learning how to cook the American dishes for her family, even though it meant fixing separate foods for her self until her system braced itself against the new diet.

The main difference between Amrican and British recipes, Mrs. Moran, says, it that in this country we serve almost everything with rich sauces and gravies and we place fruits, vegetables, cloves and bay leaves in the same pot with our roast meat.

There are a few special dishes that can't be matched by American recipes, the British bride and her American family all agree.

Yorkshire pudding—despite competition from exciting new American foods—still occupies a favored spot in the diet the war bride serves her family. And her family always asks for more. It's a potato substitute very much like

FIRST symptoms of spring found Dorothy and Charles Gantt eager to begin the garden behind their new house in Arlington. It'll be the first garden they've had since their wartime wedding in England where former Infantryman Gantt met his bride, then a British nurse. "But it won't seem like a real garden without plenty of British polyanthus and anemones," Dorothy insists.

The Service Set

SERVICE society's first large post-Lenten wedding has been scheduled for April 3 and the leading lady is charming, blonde Patricia Bellinger.

The daughter of Vice Admiral and Mrs. Patrick N. L. Bellinger will be married in the Navy Chapel on Nebraska ave. to Edwin Harvey Chamberlain of Greenwich, Conn., who's the son of Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Chamberlain. A small reception will follow at the Bellinger home.

After their honeymoon, the young couple will reside in New Haven while the bridegroom finishes his studies in economics at Yale University.

The first in a round of shower parties planned for the bride-elect took place yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Edward Finkensteadt. It was a luncheon and kitchen shower with Mrs. Finkensteadt and her daughter Sophie—down from Briarcliff Junior College—sharing hostess duties.

The guests included Misses Miriam (Minsie) and Eleanor (Bay) Bellinger, sisters of the bride-to-be; Betty and Emily Arnold, Edith Redway, Evelyn Maddox, Patricia Apple and Mary Allen.

The Chief of Staff and Mrs. Omar Bradley were guests of honor at a large reception Friday at the Fort McNair quarters of Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. J. Lawton Collins.

Assisting Mrs. Collins in the dining room were Mrs. Kenneth Royall, Mrs. Gordon Gray, Mrs. Raymond McLain, Mrs. Wayne Stewart, Mrs. Bradley's sister; Mrs. Harry Hill, Mrs. Carl Spaatz, Mrs. John L. DeWitt, Mrs. Lesly J. McNair, Mrs. Wade Haislip and Mrs. James Collins, sister-in-law of the hostess.

Guests included, for the most part, Army friends of the Bradleys, and others who dropped in were Mrs. George Mesta, Sir Willmott and Lady Lewis, Admiral and Mrs. Louis E. Denfeld, Vice Admiral and Mrs. A. W. Radford, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Clifton B. Cates, Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Royal, Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. John L. Sullivan, Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. W. Stuart Symington, Mr. and Mrs. David Lilienthal and John Hennessy of New York.

A HOUSEWARMING party will be given this afternoon by Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Thomas Timberman at their new quarters at Fort McNair. Since the Timbermans and their two children returned from China some three months ago they had been subletting a house in Falls Church, Va.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Robert W. Harper have invited more than a hundred friends to a cocktail party Tuesday at the A. T. C. Officers Club at Bradley Point.

A SPRING fashion show and tea will be given Wednesday afternoon at Bolling Field Officers Club by the Air Force Officers' Wives Club.

MISS CATHARINE F. LEAVEY
. . . to be bride

Major General and Mrs. Edmond Harrison Leavey of Washington have announced the engagement of their daughter, Catharine Farrington Leavey, to Robert Atkinson Hite, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Hite of Honolulu, Hawaii.

Miss Leavey was graduated from Mount Vernon Seminary in 1941 and from the College of William and Mary in 1945. She is a member of Phi Beta Kappa. Presently she is employed by the National Gallery of Art. Her father is chief of transportation, U. S. Army. Her grandfather, Wallace Ryder Farrington, served as governor of the Territory of Hawaii for eight years, and her uncle is Joseph R. Farrington, present delegate to Congress from Hawaii.

Mr. Hite was graduated from Washington and Lee University in 1947 after serving as an officer in the Air Forces. He is a member of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity. He has done graduate work at University of Virginia and is presently enrolled at Columbia University. His father was secretary of Territory of Hawaii under Governor Poindexter.

Bachelor Muses About Proposals

By Genevieve Reynolds

"NOTHING to this leap year legend," declares current "baby" in Congress, 31-year-old William Jennings Bryan Dorn of Greenwood, S. C. "I haven't had a proposal yet.

"Where are all the rich widows and predatory femmes I was warned abounded in the Nation's Capital?" he queries with a twinkle in his blue eyes.

The bachelor Representative had been told that the manless situation was so desperate here that he could expect at least a proposal everytime he stepped out.

Young Dorn was elected to the State Senate at the age of 24 and was the youngest man ever to be seated by that body in the Palmetto State. He's a fluent speaker and an expert dancer, both square and ballroom. When the Congressional Club stages a supper and barn dance Wednesday, W. J. B. Dorn will be on hand to call the sets and to promenade.

BITS OF THIS AND THAT . . . Having one member of the family in the hospital is enough to keep a woman on the qui vive. But Mrs. Everett Dirksen, wife of the Illinois Representative, managed to take care of two members of her household in two separate hospitals and plan programs for two meetings last week. The Representative was undergoing treatment at the Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital and the Dirksens' daughter had her appendix removed at Doctors Hospital. Both are back home but the family trip to Puerto Rico had to be canceled for the second time . . . Representative Harry McGregor of Ohio is a television enthusiast. His dinner guests are sure to get their favorite program, prize fights, baseball games and all.

FLASHBACKS: When Mrs. Tom Connally, wife of the Lone Star State Senator, first entered official life in Washington, she was a shy beautiful teen-ager. One day the youthful bride went to call on a Cabinet wife. The hostess took one fleeting glance, and directed her to the back room to talk with her daughter. Recalling the incident the other day at the Sixty-eighth Congress Club's luncheon, Mrs. Connally laughingly remarked, "Not even the daughter appeared interested in talking with me. I stayed a few minutes and went home."

for a suitable house for an embassy.

Henry White, former high official of the Treasury Department, was decorated with the Legion of Honor on Thursday in a ceremony which took place in the French Chancery. The French Ambassador, Henri Bonnet, conferred the honor.

The Minister of New Zealand and Lady Berendsen will return to Washington on the 19th. They flew from Auckland on Friday.

Return to Shoreham

Dr. and Mrs. Ivy Pelzman, who have been vacationing at Hollywood Beach, Fla., will return to their apartment at the Shoreham this week.

Second Boat Race Dinner Party Is Planned

The second annual Oxford-Cambridge boat race dinner will be held at the Mayflower Hotel on Friday, March 19. Sir John Balfour, Minister of Great Britain and Oxford graduate, will act as toastmaster.

Speakers will include Joseph Harsch, foreign news commentator and correspondent; Otto Reuchlin, Minister of the Netherlands, and former United States Ambassador to the Netherlands, Stanley Hornbeck. The latter two are Oxford alumni, while Mr. Harsch is a Cambridge graduate.

The first boat race dinner, held last year, was so successful that the committee decided to make it an annual affair. Over 400 Oxford and Cambridge men, representing 15 nationalities living in the Washington area, have been invited this year.

The committee points out that the list is necessarily incomplete. Any additional names and addresses should be sent to Malcolm Henderson at 2900 29th st. nw.

Avoid Criticism of Child to Gain Confidence

Try to gain the entire confidence of your child when she comes to you with her problems at adolescence. If you feel you cannot understand her viewpoint, ask for more details and try to put yourself in her place and be her age for this once. Avoid criticism unless it is necessary as you will quickly destroy these confidences if your judgment is rapid and harsh.

Club Group Hears Talk By Dr. Byrd

Annapolis, Md., March 6.—Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, addressed members of the Naval Academy Women's Club on Tuesday in the lounge of the North Severn Officers' Club. His subject was "Our Obligations in Modern Education."

Mrs. Rollo N. Norgaard presided, and a musical program was presented by Robert Jachens, choir director of the Calvary Methodist Church and former soloist at Radio City Music Hall. He was accompanied by Miss Marjorie Baker. Mrs. Elmer M. Jackson, jr., program chairman, introduced the guests.

A luncheon preceded the meeting, with officers and standing committee chairmen as guests, besides the guests of honor. A tea concluded the afternoon's program, with Mrs. Paul Heineman, hospitality chairman, in charge of arrangements.

An innovation at the Naval Academy this year is the series of "at homes" which the superintendent, Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, jr., and Mrs. Holloway are giving for the brigade of midshipmen. The party on Thursday afternoon was for midshipmen of the Second Battalion, and before the year is over every midshipman will have an opportunity to call upon Admiral and Mrs. Holloway.

At Thursday's party, Mrs. Holloway was assisted by a number of officers and instructors and their wives from the Academy and young ladies from the vicinity.

Attache Is Guest

Among the distinguished guests here last weekend were Capt. Frederick Stamm, Netherlands Naval Attache, and Mrs. Stamm, of Washington, who were the house guests of Capt. and Mrs. Basil N. Rittenhouse. After attending various sports events Saturday afternoon, the Rittenhouses and the Stamms were present at a dinner preceding Saturday night's boxing matches at the academy, the dinner being given by the commandant of midshipmen, Capt. Frank T. Ward, jr., and Mrs. Ward, at their quarters.

Miss Edith Wallace of New York, was also a weekend guest of Captain and Mrs. Rittenhouse, and attended the midshipmen's hop on Saturday night with her fiance, Midshipman Robert Mercer. Miss Wallace and Midshipman Mercer are planning to be married in June following his graduation from the Naval Academy.

Mr. and Mrs. James P. Costello announce the engagement of their daughter, Patricia Anne, to Ernest F. Hare, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest F. Hare of Phoenix, Ariz.

The bride-elect is a student at the University of Maryland, and Mr. Hare is attending Loyola College in Baltimore. No date has been set for the wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Lamb have announced the marriage of their daughter, Dorothy Lucille, to Richard Gordon Hines, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hines of Galesville.

The wedding took place on Friday at the Eastport Methodist Church.

Capt. Wilson D. Leggett, jr., head of the Navy Experiment Station, and Mrs. Leggett have returned from a visit to Tarboro, N. C., where they attended the wedding on Saturday of Mrs. Leggett's niece, Miss Alice Howard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rawls Howard, to William Mason Smith Lesesne, jr., of Charleston, S. C.

The final cotillion of the season for the younger set was held at Carvel Hall on Friday evening in the ballroom. Chaperones for the affair were Mrs. Arthur A. Ageton and Miss Sue Munford. Mrs. William H. Duvall is director of the group, assisted by Mrs. Joseph D. Lazenby. Joshua Cockey of Baltimore is the dancing master.

Move to Alexandria

Capt. and Mrs. Bosquet Neill Wev, who had been residents of Annapolis for a number of years, left this week to make their home at the Park Fairfax, Alexandria. They were accompanied by their son and daughter, Neill, jr., and Constance. Capttain Wev is now on duty in Washington. Many informal parties were given the entire family before their departure.

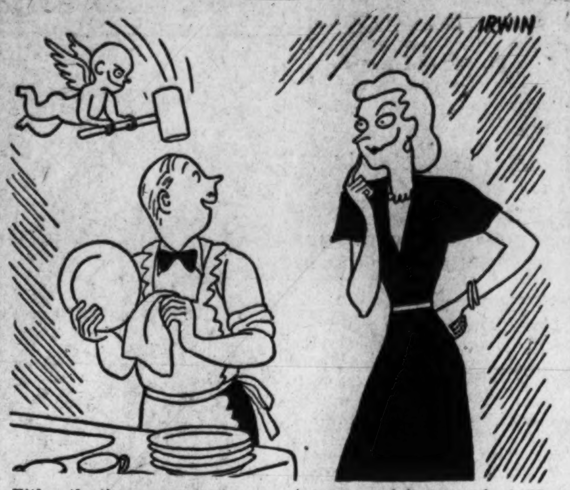
The Wev residence at 14 Franklin st. has been leased to Comdr. and Mrs. Simon E. Raney, who moved in at the end of the week.

Captain Gearing, who is retiring from the service this month, has just completed duty at the Naval Ammunition Depot, Dover, N. J. Their son, Sinclair, is a student at the University of Mexico.

Leap Year Brings Out the Beast in 'Em

Is This a Bachelor's Sour Grapes, Or Benedict Trying On a Doghouse?

By Tom Cullen



LEAP YEAR in Washington doesn't mean a thing. The girls chase the men here every year, and all year long.

They started this practice years ago when, in looking around for ways to save money, they found that it was cheaper to semisupport a husband than it was to hire a maid. And the man hunt has been on ever since.

They operate like this. You meet her at the morning office crossword puzzle contest, a second time at the drinking fountain, and a third time when she just happens to be on the same elevator as you are. The fourth time, when she is standing behind you in the cafeteria line, you just have to invite her to lunch. This leads to a dinner and movie on your next payday, and one week later, which is between paydays, she just has to suggest that you "whip up a dinner" at her apartment.

When you get there (and find her two roommates just happen to be eating out that evening), she puts on a dainty apron and heads for the kitchen. You sit down and debate with yourself. Shall you offer to help or shall you just be a heel and read the paper. You decide not to be a heel and offer your services (if you hadn't, you'd have been washed out right there).

NEXT day you find out the cost of a steak, and after saving for two weeks, suggest another dinner in her apartment with you furnishing the groceries. This time she has to let you help, and if you show any talent for cooking the steak and attendant vegetables, two months are lopped off the time you might otherwise have been a bachelor. Prospects who can cook are very, very scarce. However, she still doesn't let you help with the dishes but does mention that some of the furniture, too heavy for a girl, needs to be moved. This you do with alacrity, and with the domestic feeling getting stronger all the time, ask if there isn't any more man's work about the place to be done. She casually mentions a leaking faucet, knowing all the time that she hasn't got a pipe wrench and washer, and you haven't either.

This provides a mandate for you to go back the next night, with a pipe wrench and box of washers. This time she accepts your offer to help with the dishes, at which you show much promise, and later watches you change the washer in the faucet, remarking all the time how clever you are and how nice it is to have such a handy man to do things for her.

BY NOW she has inspected your talents in cooking, dishwashing, dusting and sweeping. You have passed all tests and are now ready for the slaughter. On your next visit you suggest a movie. She demurs with the remark that you have been spending entirely too much money on her, and starting right then, she is going to help you by staying in a few nights.

Then one night going home on the bus you get what you think is a brilliant idea—it will be the last idea of your own you'll ever have. The thing to do is to get married.

Then the next night you gaily start out to "surprise" your little girl. Instead of handing her your coat and hat as you usually do, you walk right over to the closet and hang it up yourself. She knows then the big moment is at hand.

You have your proposal all made up but never do get it out. Either the time never seems propitious, or when it does, you can't seem to remember what you were going to say. So you decide to write her a letter. But she decides to take matters in her own hands. As you get ready to leave, she smiles sweetly and says:

"Wouldn't it be wonderful, darling, if you never had to go home again, ever?" And you, overjoyed at the easy solution, reply:

"Aw, Gee, honey, wouldn't it?"

YEARS later you'll realize that it wasn't you who proposed at all.

After a few necessary preliminaries, and a lot of giggles, you decide to get the license right away (after marriage it is known as a contract). You're so excited that you forget to read the fine print and wish forever thereafter that you had. You find later that the fine print contains more things you never dreamed of, and that the little girl has not only read them—she has memorized them.

But right now you have a lot of plans. The date, best man, bridesmaids, place of honeymoon and other preliminaries have to be decided. When it is all over, you find that you have had your own way in two things. You selected your own best man from a group of three she suggested as having the complexion and color of hair to match the bridesmaids; your practical suggestion of holding the event the day after payday also was adopted.

The big day finally arrives and after the ceremony, which you never remember much about, you are on your way. Your plans for a Bermuda honeymoon are shelved in favor of her suggestion that you visit her Mom and Pop.

THEN comes the return home and the time when you start looking married life in the face. Your troubles, at this point, have just commenced.

You return from your honeymoon to find that the roommates have moved out with their share of the apartment furniture and you start in making an inventory of what now belongs to you. You find that you have springs but no bed and mattress, a lamp but no end table, one cup and three saucers, a dustpan but no broom, six spoons, one fork and no knives, and a dining table but no chairs.

So with the little woman to guide you, you make a tour of the furniture stores. At its end you find that you owe several hundred dollars that you didn't owe before, which you are going to liquidate over the next 12 months in what are facetiously known as convenient payments (no payment is convenient, Mr. Bachelor).

THE FINAL payment date arrives, but along about that time, the little woman whispers that Junior is en route and you are about to become three. So you put off your vacation again and the furniture payments continue in the form of a nest-egg for a local obstetrician and the things Junior will need when he gets here, which are multitudinous.

Junior finally arrives and after the initial shock of being a father wears off, you are again faced with the realities of living. You find Junior somewhat confused as to when he is supposed to sleep and for a while at least, he is apt to live just the reverse from you and sleep in the daytime and stay awake at night. This leads to some strong conversation with his mother as to whose jurisdiction he comes under at 2 a. m., but in any event, you take your turn.

FINALLY you get your vacation and you return with the solemn resolve that never are you going anywhere again until Junior can feed, clothe and do certain other things for himself. Otherwise it isn't worth it.

You are not too long back from your vacation when Jr.'s mother whispers (and you will be allergic to whispers ever after) that Jr.'s sister is en route and you are about to become four. Junior's sister arrives on schedule and soon makes her presence felt in the laundry basket, which is one of your chores.

Jr.'s sister isn't around too long before it becomes apparent that two bedrooms aren't enough. She keeps waking Jr., or vice versa, and things will be complicated later on anyway. So the answer is a house and you start looking around. You decide not to rent, as most landlords, who are, understandably, the originators of birth control, frown on your mention of children and besides, you are tired of paying off someone else's mortgages. So you buy a house under FHA's 25-year plan, which takes all of your savings, and adds the care of a lawn to your household duties.

Now with a wife, two kids, a house and a 25-year mortgage, you give up any thought of leaving Washington in the near future. You hear about jobs in other cities occasionally, which you'd like to have, and there are other places where you'd much sooner live. But you look around at everything that has to be moved, figure up the cost and change your mind—you'd have a hard time getting across the street. You are in Washington to stay.

And that, Mr. Bachelor, is what can happen to you.

Planning Own Wardrobe Adds Color to Your Life

By Dorothy Draper

EVERY year when those inevitable lists of the ten best-dressed women appear I make out my own list, just for fun! For some very understandable reason, my list and the list in the newspapers never agree. That's because some of the best-dressed people I know never cross the paths of the so-called "society" editors.

There's a young business woman, for instance, who has to make frequent lectures around the country in connection with her specialty. She is famous for her chic and sparkling appearance.

"I have one good black suit," she said. "With different accessories, this will see me through almost any event. Yesterday I wore it with a small turquoise-blue felt hat, turquoise blue gloves and just a touch of turquoise at the throat, made by loosely knotting a small turquoise scarf."

I was fascinated. "Tonight," she went on, "I'm wearing the same black suit with a black satin scarf, hat band and gloves trimmed with shiny sequins. I bought plain black gloves, plain black scarf and a 1½-inch ribbon band for my black felt hat. I sewed the sequins on myself. I have different colored plain and figured hat bands and bows that help spice up this same hat."

ANOTHER friend on my best-dressed list does intriguing things with ribbon. One of her tricks is to buy a yard and a half of 5-inch sky-blue ribbon, (about $1) make a generous bow, put a pink rose in the middle of it and help disguise an old dress with this arresting over-sized boutonniere.

After observing a number of smart women I am convinced that the best-dressed people don't go about buying their clothes in any hit or miss fashion. They think of a basic wardrobe and build their accessories around that. They choose either a dark dress with matching accessories, such as black dress, black shoes, black hat and gloves. Or a dark or light dress with sharply contrasting accessories with some such accessories as pink gloves and perky pink felt hat.

From observation, the rule then seems to be to buy one basic dress or suit and splurge on the accessories for variety.

MISS KATHARINE PATTERSON
. . . to be married

MR. AND MRS. Howell E. Jackson of Okendale Farm, near Middleburg, announce the engagement of Mrs. Jackson's daughter, Miss Katharine Patterson, to Mr. Chiswell D. L. Perkins, jr., of Greenwood, Va.

Miss Patterson attended La Petite Ecole Florentine, Florence, Italy, and graduated from Miss Porter's School, Farmington, Conn. During the war she served as a Red Cross nurse's aide at Ashford General Hospital, White Sulphur Springs, and more recently studied nursing at the University of Virginia Hospital, Charlottesville, Va. Mr. Perkins attended Virginia Military Institute, the University of Alabama and at present is attending the University of Virginia, where he is a member of the Beta Theta Pi Social Fraternity. He is a veteran of four years' Army service as an officer in the Combat Engineers, serving in both the European and Asiatic theaters. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Chiswell D. L. Perkins of Greenwood, Va.

The wedding will be at Okendale Farm, near Middleburg. Mrs. Jackson is the daughter of the late John H. Patterson of Dayton, Ohio.

Benefit Dance

The dance which took place on Friday evening at Burrland, near Middleburg, for the benefit of the Loudoun County Polio Fund, was a great success. Young people attended from Warrenton, Leesburg, Winchester and Berryville as well as Alexandria and Washington. Dr. Rufus Humphrey of Middleburg is being congratulated on the success of the party and Mrs. R. A. Parham upon the decoration of the house. Among those who reserved tables—all entertaining friends—were Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Whitney, who had as one of her guests Miss Mary Rogers, daughter of the late and famous Will Rogers. Others entertaining parties of friends included Miss Jean Humphrey, Mr. and Mrs. Turner Wiltshire and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Kirkpatrick, jr.

Col. Richard J. Kirkpatrick, United States Army Air Corps, of Warrenton, has recently returned to Virginia from China, where he has been on duty. Colonel Kirkpatrick has been in the service since the beginning of World War II. He also served in World War I as aide to the late Gen. "Billy" Mitchel. Colonel Kirkpatrick has been decorated twice by the Chinese government, has been given a pension for life by the Russian government for assisting in the Battle of Kaleve. Colonel Kirkpatrick has come back to Virginia to take up farming activities on his lovely place, Twin Oaks, near Warrenton.

Mr. and Mrs. Southgate Morison of Baltimore spent the weekend with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel H. Morison, at their home, Welbourne, near Middleburg. Welby Carter Wood of Baltimore was also a guest at Welbourne, for the weekend.

Visitors From Canada

Mrs. George Jacobson of Montreal, Canada, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Horace Moffett, at their home near The Plains. Mr. and Mrs. Roger Lambdon of The Plains entertained at a dinner party in honor of Mrs. Jacobson on Thursday evening.

Mrs. Norman K. Toerge has returned to her home near Middleburg from a visit of several weeks at Aiken, S. C. Mr. and Mrs. Stephen C. Clark are at their home in Middleburg after spending the winter at Aiken, S. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver D. Filley have opened their Virginia home and are here for the spring foxhunting season.

The Marchesa Compolatorra will arive in Virginia the coming week to visit Mr. and Mrs. James B. Skinner at their Middleburg home. She is coming from New Orleans, La., where she has been staying with her mother, Mrs. L. H. Hardie, for six weeks. The Marchesa was formerly Miss Betty Hardie of New Orleans and Washington, D. C. From here she will be en route to Madrid, Spain, to join her husband, where they now reside.

Miss McGowan Is Engaged to Wm. Bell, Jr.

Harris and Ewing
MISS MARGARET R. McGOWAN
. . . fiancee of student

Announcement has been made by Mrs. Mary E. McGowan Chappell of the engagement of her daughter, Miss Margaret Roberta McGowan, to William G. Bell, Jr., son of the acting postmaster of Washington and Mrs. Gordon Bell.

The bride-elect, daughter of the late Joseph F. McGowan, attended Nativity School, served during the war with the WAVES and is now employed by the Post Office Department.

Her fiance, a veteran of service in the Navy, is a student of Virginia Polytechnic Institute at Blacksburg, Va. No date has been set for the wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Rixey Smith to Entertain

MR. AND MRS. Rixey Smith will entertain a company of 10 in honor of the Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. H. Graham Morison at the dinner dance at the Sulgrave Club Thursday, March 11.

Orchestra to Honor Miss Truman

Margaret Truman will be guest of honor at the final report luncheon of the National Symphony's sustaining fund drive at 12:15 p. m. tomorrow in the ballroom of the Mayflower.

Since the emphasis of the luncheon will be on the last-minute reports of the 10 committees, which, for the past five weeks, have solicited funds to obtain the $165,000 necessary to sustain the National Symphony beyond the current season, the heads of these groups will be seated with Miss Truman and Campaign Chairman Edward Burling, jr., at the head table.

The committee chairmen are Mrs. John H. McCormick, Air Force; Mrs. Gordon R. Young, Army; Mrs. E. C. B. Danforth, associations; David B. Karrick, business; Mrs. John S. Graham, education; Charles T. Reyner, vice chairman, Government; Mrs. Delmer S. Fahrney, Navy-Marine; Mrs. Charles Bittinger, Orchestra Guild; Mrs. Paul Magnuson, residential, and Mrs. Robert LeFevre, suburban.

Among honor guests will be Miss Rita Dimitriou, first lady of the Athenian stage, at whose instigation the Old New Orleans Restaurant, where she is now appearing, contributed a portion of its proceeds for one week to the symphony fund.

Your Questions on Homemaking

Could you tell me how to remove a cigarette scorch mark on my ivory colored rayon damask tablecloth? I have hand-laundered the cloth and the scorch mark did not disappear and I fear the scorched place in cloth will, in time, become a hole.

This might remove the scorch mark: Dampen a clean white cloth with hydrogen peroxide. Place it over the stain and cover with a white dry cloth. Press on top of the dry cloth with a medium warm iron. If the top cloth becomes wet, change it for a dry cloth, for ironing, directly on a damp cloth might cause rust stains on the rayon cloth. If this treatment lightens the stain, but does not completely remove it, it may be repeated. Rinse well. Dampening the stain with water and placing in the sun might also help. If the fabric was very badly burned it may wear through in time. To strengthen the spot and put off the day of a hole appearing, a piece of fabric similar to the cloth could be sewed with tiny stitches to the wrong side of the cloth under the spot.

When do the cherry trees bloom in Washington? A friend of mine is anxious to visit me at that time this spring. J. A. L.

I am told that it takes a week to 10 days of 70-degree daytime temperature to bring the cherry tree buds to full bloom. In the past they bloomed as early as March 15 and as late as April 20. They have started or been in bloom, in the past, more often from April 1 to 10 than at any other time.

I have a real New England braided wool rug, which I wish to have cleaned. Please tell me the best way to have this done. A friend of mine sent hers to the laundry, and it came back almost in loops, the braids separated, and the whole rug roughed up. I wish to avoid this happening to mine. H. B.

Send your rug to a rug cleaning firm which will shampoo it or clean it with dry cleaning fluid. Cleaned in this way, the rug will hold its shape and the braids will stay together. For such a firm, look in the yellow pages of the teleprone directory under "Rug-Cleaning."

AT breakfast, lunch or dinner, the sausage-and-apple combination is equally appropriate. These apples were pan-fried lightly in the same pan with the sausages. The trick is to get them a bit crisp, but not cook them to the mushy stage

Could you advise me how to remove hair grease spots from wallpaper without damaging the paper? R. J. F.

Cover the spots with a paste made by mixing carbon tetrachloride or other noninflammable cleaning fluid and corn starch. Spread the paste thickly over the stain and allow to dry. When dry, brush away with a soft brush. Several applications may be necessary to remove all the grease. If the wallpaper is old or soiled, it is wise to clean the area surrounding the stain before applying the cleaning paste to avoid a dark soiled ring forming. Also, test the effect of the paste on an inconspicuous spot to see the effect on the wallpaper color before applying to the stain.

Please advise me as to the proper care and cleaning of leather upholstered furniture. I should have thought saddle soap the proper cleanser, but was told by a friend that sweet milk should be used to clean it. Some of the cushions look as if they might crack in those places that "wrinkle" when sat on. Do those place need special treatment? We are moving to another city soon, and the furniture may have to be stored for a while. Is special care advised for that period? J. H.

You will find, I believe, that saddle soap or cleaner and preservers sold especially for leather will keep your leather upholstery soft, pliable and clean. If you use milk to clean it, it might develop unpleasant odors as time goes on. Use commercially sold leather preserver or rub it with a mixture of 2 parts lanolin and 3 parts pure neat's-foot oil to prevent it from drying out. Mix lanolin and neat's-foot oil over heat in a double boiler. When cool, apply with a soft pad or brush. Let the oil stand on the leather for several hours to absorb. Then rub with a soft cloth to remove excess oil and develop a sheen.

Before storing, clean the upholstery well with saddle soap and give it an oil treatment as described above. When clean and oiled, cover tightly with a cloth or layers of paper fastened in place to completely cover. Store the piece where it won't become excessively hot in summer and where the air is not so humid as to cause mildewing or mold forming on leather.

Have you any suggestions for salvaging a broadloom rug in wine color? The rug is in excellent condition and just three years old, but it shows every crumb and every speck of dust. The problem of keeping it clean looking is difficult now that I have a child. I've been considering dyeing it. Is this ever practical? J. A. C.

Dye jobs on broadloom rugs are sometimes satisfactory, sometimes not. They're quite expensive—the cost runs from $32 to $40 for a 9 by 12 foot rug. This is for dyeing the rug a darker shade, which probably would not help you much, since one dark color is almost as bad as another when it comes to showing up dust and lint on its surface. At least one local company can have the rug dyed or bleached a lighter color, such as smoky gray, and claims that the results are quite satisfactory. This process is more expensive than dyeing the rug a darker shade. It costs about $6.50 more on a 9 by 12 rug. The company can be reached by telephoning DIstrict 6878.

Attention all readers who have sent in recent flower questions! We regret that, since we do not have authoritative information on this subject readily available, we have discontinued the answering of such queries.

My daughter had some stamp pad indelible ink splashed on a pink silk blouse. The blouse is made of thin, real silk which my husband brought back from Japan. Have you any suggestions for removing the spots? T. B.

Such stains can sometimes be removed by soaking in kerosene for several hours, then washing thoroughly in soap and warm water. Another possibility would be to soak the spot in turpentine for a few minutes, then sponge with denatured alcohol or dry cleaning fluid.

I have an old piano which is black (I believe the wood is oak) and I would like to refinsh this so that it will go with my limed oak furniture. How shall I go about it? S. F.

This is going to be quite a task and will take a lot of patience. Briefly, the steps are as follows: (1) The application of paint and varnish remover and the removal of the old finish with a putty knife and fine steel wool. (If the finish is lacquer, by any chance, use lacquer thinner instead of the varnish remover.) After remover is used, go over piece with denatured alcohol. (2) Bleach with a commercial bleach, following instructions on the package. When wood is dry, sandpaper surface with fine-grained paper and brush off dust well. (3) Rub on white lead or apply a coat of flat white paint. Wipe off almost at once, against the grain. (4) After a day or two of drying, apply a coat of varnish or shellac. Sandpaper lightly after surface is dry, then apply several coats of liquid wax, buffing each well.

Some experimentation with the bleach on an inconspicuous part of the piano will probably be necessary in order to get it the same shade as your other furniture.

Can you tell me the best way to remove the black marks caused by water on parquet floors? I have used a cleaning fluid and very fine steel wool but haven't made any impression on them. J. C. R.

Since water is more likely to make a white mark than a black one on most floor finishes, I am at a loss to understand why it has stained your floor in this manner. The spots sound more like grease stains. At any rate, it will do no harm to try the following: Cover the spots with a poultice made of plaster of Paris or Fuller's earth mixed with carbon tetrachloride, leave for awhile, then clean off with carbon tetrachloride. Have the room well-ventilated while you are using the tetrachloride, as the fumes can be injurious if breathed in large quantities. Keeping the floor waxed will help to prevent further staining in the future.

Could you tell me how to remove finger nail polish from a pink cotton print sun-dress? The polish was spilled last summer. I have not tried in any way to remove it for fear of discoloring the material. A. B. A.

Wet the stain well with carbon tetrachloride or spot removing solution, then apply a drop of banana oil to the stain. Place stained area over an absorbent cloth so it doesn't spread. When banana oil has softened the stain, brush lightly with a soft cloth using an upward motion to pick up the dissolved polish. To remove color remaining after polish is dissolved, apply a bleach. One safe bleach is sodium perborate. Dampen the stain with water and sprinkle with the perborate, allowing it to stand 30 minutes. Rinse well with clear water. Always test the effect of the bleach on an inconspicuous spot before applying to the stain.

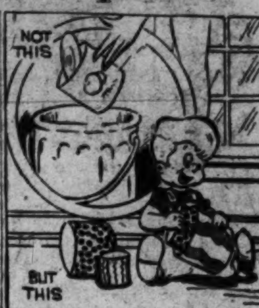
The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne



We Americans throw away many useful things. One of the most common articles in almost every home is the good old tin can in which so much of our food comes into the house. There usually isn't much use for them once the hash, the corn or the beans have been extracted.

For the under-6 youngster and even for those a bit older, however, a set of nested cans nicely painted is quite a satisfactory plaything. Of course, their tops should have been taken off with the kind of can opener that neatly cuts the tin close to the side of the can and bends down the remaining bit so fingers can't possibly be cut.

You may have to save cans for a week or so until you get enough to fit inside one another, only to be taken out to build a "swell" tower.

OUTFITTERS TO GENTLEWOMEN SINCE 1903

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 8, Who Was "Only Child" With Parents And Grandparents for Years, Now Has Brothers And Cousins and Creates Havoc With Jealousy

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We have a little girl, Sharon, 8 years old, whom we love dearly, but she is the biggest problem our married life is facing. We hope you can help us understand and correct the difficulty.

For years Sharon was the only grandchild on either side, and naturally received full benefit of the love and attention of fond grandparents. But now there are several grandchildren, including Sharon's two little brothers.

If one of the other children receives attention or a gift, Sharon becomes jealous and cries that no one loves her any more. She wants everything for herself and will lie to get it. She has always had a vivid imagination, but now it is turning into lies that are beginning to hurt.

Hourly Scenes Upset Parents

WE HAVE tried every kind of punishment and have promised rewards for truthfulness, but so far we haven't made any headway. She loves to see her two brothers punished and tattles on them for the least little thing.

With this going on, naturally my husband and I cannot enjoy our home life. Each hour finds one of us upset. We both realize there is some childish complex making Sharon misbehave, and we are very eager to help her overcome it.

I have tried treating her as if she were more grown-up than her years; and we have also tried treating her as if she were younger. In fact, we have tried everything—and now we are ready to admit our own need of help. Please, can you give us some constructive ideas? P. A.

Child Reflects Parents' Errors

DEAR P. A.: The situation calls for soul-searching on the parents' part, to discover where they mismanaged Sharon's and their own emotions in years when her pattern of temperament was being formed.

That period would cover not only the years when she was their only child (ineffably wonderful to them per se) and the unrivalled apple of the grandparents' eye, but also, and more especially, the period which introduced new cousins and baby brothers, to irresistibly compel redistribution of love and affection from interested sources.

Firstly, it seems to me you unduly stress the shift in grandparental attitude from exclusive absorption in Sharon to impartial fondness for several grandchildren. You were acutely aware of that development; that's why it sticks in mind. Which signifies that you had poker-faced difficulty yielding the spotlight to new claimants, seeing the glory of your reproductive accomplishment made commonplace.

In meeting new experiences, children clairvoyantly take their cue from the parents' unconscious response; thus in this crisis-of-sorts for Sharon you were no help, rather the reverse. She felt your tension, which heightened her anxiety at having (she inferred) inexplicably lost caste with grandparents.

Her Anxieties Need Attention

SECONDLY, in all probability your initial approach to training Sharon in accommodation to the newcomers, but particularly the brothers, was to "reason" with her that she must be "nice," must be "unselfish," must be willing to "share" or "give up," etc.,—and when she vigorously rejected the proposition, you became agitated, impatient, punitive, disapproving and so on.

Thirdly, as I get the picture, Sharon's history prior to these developments was one of inordinate adulation and tireless pampering, which made her dependent on manifestations of love-and-care far beyond her legitimate requirements as a growing child (no longer an infant),—with the result that she was disproportionately infantile for her age and emotionally conditioned to resent babies as intolerable rivals when they began to figure in her experience.

With that background, attempts to use "reason" or punishment as form of pressure to remold her responses would simply demoralize—as indeed they have, according to your story. Sharon is a bundle of symptoms of emotional insecurity. She profoundly feels that parents and grandparents have "rejected" her in favor of the younger children.

For help, she needs wise sympathetic, attentive love—and I don't mean "humoring,"—expressed in ways which make her feel very close to mother and dad, with her anxieties a matter of respectful interest that leads to understanding and healing of hurt. M. H.

Peach Surprises Are Tasty Tarts

Tarts make a pleasant change from regular pie, both for the cook and for those who eat them. Cut the pastry into circles for "Peach Surprise Tarts" and fill them with canned peaches, mincemeat and marshmallow filling. They're superdelicious.

PEACH SURPRISE TARTS

6 canned cling peach halves
½ cup prepared mincemeat
6 marshmallows
Pastry (basis 1 cup flour)

Drain peaches. Blend together mincemeat and marshmallows cut into eighths. Roll pastry thin. Cut into 6 circles (approximately 3 inches in diameter) and fit into tart pans or muffin tins. Place peach half, cup side up, in pastry. Top with spoonful of mincemeat mixture. Bake in hot oven (400 degrees F.) 35 to 30 minutes. Serve warm with hard sauce or whipped cream if desired. This makes 6 tarts.

District DAR Begins Conference

THE FORTY-SEVENTH annual three-day conference of the D. C. Daughters of the American Revolution will open with a memorial service for members who died during the past year, today, 3 p. m., at Memorial Continental Hall.

Representative Ed Gossett of Texas will be principal speaker at the morning session tomorrow and James T. Gallahorn, principal, Webster Americanization School, will address the conclave Tuesday morning following the 9:30 a. m. business meeting. A banquet honoring Mrs. Wilfred J. Clearman, State Regent of the District, will conclude the conclave Tuesday night at the Mayflower. Mrs. Rex Hayes Rhoades, treasurer general of the National Society, will represent Mrs. Roscoe C. O'Byrne, president general of the DAR, at the banquet.

Chaplain to Conduct Service

Mrs. Manly G. Miller, State chaplain, will conduct the memorial service. A candle will be lighted for each officer of the society who has died during the year, while a flower will be pinned to a large wreath in memory of each society member who died during the year.

The chaplain's report discloses a heavy depletion in the ranks—especially among the early members of the society, one who will be especially missed being Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, honorary vice president general, member of Our Flag Chapter, a charter member, with a long, active career in the society. Another prominent member who died during the past year is Mrs. G. Wallace W. Hanger of Captain Molly Pitcher Chapter, at one time a candidate from the District of Columbia for president general, and a past vice president general.

Reports of State officers, committee chairmen and chapter regents will be featured at the meeting on Monday. These reports reveal the constructive work of the DAR and disclose some of its little known achievements and activities.

Voting to Be on Tuesday

The morning session on Tuesday will be devoted largely to balloting. Preceding the report of the tellers, Mrs. J. Edwin Lawton, chairman, will report on the Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins Memorial Fund, and a program will be presented by the Junior American Citizens, of which Mrs. David H. Baldwin is State chairman.

Featured entertainment at the banquet Tuesday will include a pageant of the State committees; music by the United States Navy Band Orchestra with WAVE Marie McLean as vocalist and William T. Cameron, harp soloist. Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, wife of the president of George Washington University, will preside as toastmistress. Mrs. Clyde M. Hamblin is general chairman of the banquet.

Agi Jambor, famous Hungarian pianist, has returned from a tour of Sweden, where she played in 18 concerts. She has joined her husband, Dr. Imre Papal, at their home in Georgetown.

RE-COLOR it with Canute Water
A few applications of this delightful beauty aid will re-color your gray hair completely – similar to its former natural shade. In one day if you wish – gradually if you prefer. Then primp just once a month to KEEP it young looking.
Do not confuse Canute Water with tints or rinses that wash off. Shampooing actually improves the rich, warm new color and leaves your hair fresh, clean and natural to the touch. You may even curl it or get a permanent, if you wish.
No Other Product Can Make All These Claims REALLY SAFE! Skin test NOT needed. Colorless and crystal-clear. Proved harmless at one of America's Greatest Universities. Thirty years without injury to a single user.
Is it any wonder that leading dealers in most of America's largest cities sell more Canute Water than all other hair colorings combined! At drug stores everywhere.

Wedding Bells Ring

Miss Betty Jane Hinkson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Hinkson of Takoma Park, Md., was married to John Nicholson at 4 yesterday afternoon at St. Luke's Evangelical Lutheran Church. The Rev. Robert E. Lee officiated.

Mr. Nicholson is the son of Mrs. Dorothy Nicholson of Silver Spring, Md.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a traditional white wedding gown made with a bertha trimmed in lace. Her veil was of illusion.

The couple left for a wedding trip to Florida and will live in Silver Spring when they return.

Van Hoose—Weakley

Arlington Presbyterian Church was the scene yesterday of the wedding of Miss Ruby Lee Weakley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Weakley, and Lewis E. Van Hoose, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Van Hoose.

The Rev. Walter F. Wolf officiated at the ceremony at 2 o'clock which was followed by a reception in the church.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore white satin trimmed in pearls, a finger-tip veil of nylon tissue trimmed in lace and she carried white roses and orchids.

Miss Kathleen Reiter, maid of honor, wore blue satin and carried deep pink roses. Mrs. Sarah Bowman and Mrs. Gloria Simmerman, the bridesmaids, wore pink and yellow taffeta, respectively, and carried brandywine and talisman roses.

Clyde A. Mason was best man and Noel K. Dawson and Leonard C. Thomas were ushers.

The couple motored to Florida for their wedding trip.

MRS. BINFORD S. LUSE
. . . bride of Air Force member

Given in marriage by Representative George P. Miller of California, the bride wore white marquisette fashioned with a scalloped, lace trimmed bodice. Her veil fell from a Juliet cap and she carried white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Kathleen Cabe of Asheville, N. C., sister of the bride, served as maid of honor wearing orchid marquisette with a headdress of mixed flowers to match her bouquet.

The bridesmaids, Mrs. Elwood Quinter of Arlington, Va., and Miss Gloria Berglund of Washington, were gowned in yellow and blue marquisette respectively, and wore headpieces of flowers matching their bouquets.

Sergt. Kenneth Bailey of Bolling Field was best man and the ushers were Lieut. Floyd Robertson of Alexandria, Frank Ed McAnear of Arlington, Va., and Leighton Cain of Washington.

The couple will reside in Washington after a trip through Virginia and North Carolina.

The bride has been employed in the office of Representative Miller on Capitol Hill for several years. The bridegroom, who has been with the Army Air Forces for 14 years, was graduated from the Air Technical Training School at Rantoul, Ill. He is stationed at Bolling Field.

Tour of Georgetown Homes to Be April 2, 3

Nearly a quarter of a century ago when the Georgetown house tour was initiated as a means of financing the social welfare department of St. John's Episcopal Church, Georgetown parish, visitors were taken around in sightseeing buses, stops being made at each house in the catalog.

Today visitors walk the short distances between houses, so Mrs. Irvin D. Foos, chairman, and her committee members have arranged the two-day tour on Friday and Saturday, April 2 and 3, with the walking problem in mind.

Among the houses listed for the opening day, all west of Wisconsin ave., are those of Mrs. John Boit, 1318 30th st.; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gay Hooker, jr., 3304 O st.; Mr. and Mrs. Harry LeRoy Jones, 1310 34th st.; Mr. and Mrs. J. Noel Macy, 3339 N st.; Mr. and Mrs. John J. McCloy, 1430 33d st.; Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey G. Parker, 3314 O st.; Mr. and Mrs. John Campbell White, 3255 N st., and Mr. and Mrs. Walter White, 3327 N st.

The 10 houses listed for the second day are those of Lord and Lady Balfour at 1224 30th st.; Mr. and Mrs. Kenyon C. Bolton, 3123 Dumbarton; Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Bradley, 1633 21st st.; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., 1339 29th st.; Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, 3130 P st.; Representative and Mrs. Christian A. Herter, 3108 P st.; Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Lee, 1344 30th st.; Mrs. Henry Leonard, 3038 N st.; Mr. and Mrs. Duer McLanahan, 2823 Q st., and Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, 3023 Q st.

Mrs. Lyon leaves tomorrow by plane for the Philippine Islands to join her husband who was recently appointed executive director of property management, U. S. Philippine Alien Property Administration.

En route to the West Coast, Mrs. Lyon will visit her sister, Mrs. George Cropper in Cheyenne, Wyo. In Los Angeles, Calif., she will be the guest of Mrs. Grace Bowles Hedges. There alumni of University of Southern California will honor the Washington clubwoman.

In Hawaii, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel P. McGregors will entertain for Mrs. Lyon, as will General and Mrs. Eli Helmik.

Rayon Types

There are two important types of rayon, and each has different characteristics. Viscose rayon is known for its strength; acetate rayon has good draping qualities. Both react differently to dyes. When both yarns are used in a fabric, unusual cross-dyed color effects are possible. Approximately 72 per cent of the rayon produced in the United States is made by the viscose process; 28 per cent by the acetate process.

Mrs. Marvin Is Speaker At Leesburg

Leesburg, Va., March 6.—Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, wife of the president of George Washington University, was the guest speaker at the Woman's Club of Loudoun Saturday at the Purcellville Library. The meeting was sponsored by the literature department, and Mrs. Frank Richardson, chairman, introduced the speaker. Mrs. Marvin gave a review of current plays on Broadway. Following the program, the sponsoring department entertained at tea in honor of the guest speaker.

On Thursday evening, the Woman's Society of Christian Service of the Methodist Church met at the parsonage, home of the Rev. and Mrs. L. C. Shearer. Mrs. Harrison Williams, of Leesburg, the guest speaker, spoke on conditions in England as she found them on her recent visit to England. Mrs. Williams is a native of England.

Mrs. Edmund Noyes and Mrs. George E. Ward were cohostesses at a meeting of Section B. Woman's Auxiliary of St. James' Episcopal Church, held Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Noyes. The group continued their Lenten study of the book, "Committed Unto Us." Later in the afternoon, they held an auction sale and raised $65 for the work of the organization.

Miss Anna F. Hedrick, Arlington lawyer and a member of the Loudoun Hunt Club, has issued invitations for a hunt breakfast at 3 p. m., March 13, at Hunting Hill, her country home in Loudoun County. Miss Hedrick is one of the masters of the Loudoun Hunt. The hunt will meet on the morning of the thirteenth and also on the twentieth, weather permitting. Hunton F. Atwell served as joint master with Miss Hedrick.

Students Are Visitors

Dr. and Mrs. Frank P. Smoot had with them over the weekend their son, Cadet F. P. Smoot, jr., student at Randolph Macon College, Front Royal, and their daughter, Miss Anne Smoot, of Washington, who was accompanied to Loudoun by a friend, Howard Coster, also of Washington. S. Fred Popkins, student at Virginia Tech, spent the weekend at his home in Leesburg. Miss Jane Atwell returned on Saturday to Averett College, Danville, after visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hunton F. Atwell. While here she had as her guest Miss Lynn Welsh of New Jersey, also a student at Averett College.

Mrs. T. Frank Osburn is visiting her mother, Mrs. L. P. Morgan, in Danville. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Richardson spent Sunday in Washington visiting friends.

Col. and Mrs. W. H. Clifford have returned to Chudleigh, their country estate near Leesburg, after spending the winter months in Florida. Mrs. Lea Macdonald of Texas, who is spending some time with the Rev. and Mrs. G. Peyton Craighill at Millwood, Va., visited her sister, Mrs. E. V. White, in Leesburg. Mr. and Mrs. Marvin M. Green of Charles Town, W. Va., and Stanley Green of Bowie, Md., spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Stanley T. Green.

Mr. and Mrs. James F. Waterfield of Leesburg announce the birth of a daughter in the Loudoun Hospital on February 29, whom they have named Pamela Karen.

Mr. and Mrs. Hayden B. Harris of New York came to Leesburg this week to occupy the residence on North King st. belonging to the John A. Gibson estate, which they have leased for a period. Mr. Harris, who has been spending a few days at the Leesburg Inn, was joined on Tuesday evening by Mrs. Harris, who visited friends in Washington before coming to Loudoun.

Chromium and Tin Need No Scouring

Chromium and tin are two metals which housewives should remember never to scour. Chromium is soft metal and wears off easily if rubbed with metal polish of any cleaning powder. It keeps its shine with no more strenuous cleaning than washing in soapy water and rinsing.

Tin pans should be allowed to become dull. They cannot be kept shining without damage. Scouring will soon rub through the thin coating of tin and leave the metal underneath open to rust. There is no advantage in shining baking tins because they absorb heat better when they are dull.

Cleaning the Fan

To clean the blades of an electric fan, especially one used for kitchen ventilating, wipe with a cloth moistened in kerosene. Washing with water is not recommended because water will not dissolve the grease and may damage the motor.

'Who Dunit' Author Turns to Novels

to Senator Brooks' questioning, the farmers refused to sell, the franc's valuation what it was then, and with nothing to buy in return.

Seeing herself in print hasn't created any definite urge to write, says the Senator's wife. Someday she may do more, but at the moment tutoring an ill daughter is keeping her pretty busy.

IF ELEANOR PIERSON would ever light long enough she could put "finis" to that novel of hers already six chapters completed. The bright and pretty wife of Warren Lee Pierson, former president of the Export-Import Bank, is dividing her time between Washington and New York, is torn between taking a house here or keeping the apartment that she has at the Shoreham. Meanwhile she's writing sporadically, her latest endeavor being a travel article in Town and Country on her recent visit to Cairo, Athens and Rome.

MRS. PIERSON

Washington was the setting for Eleanor Pierson's second who dunit, "The Defense Rests," and she kept her friends guessing in whose house on Woodland dr. that the murder scene was laid. Locale for her first book was in the U.S.A. and Brazil, and she turned that out while Mr. Pierson was hospitalized upon their return from a trip to that South American country. When a book's in the making, the author refuses all luncheon engagements, works straight through the day until her husband gets home from the office. She writes in longhand and makes several drafts before she's satisfied with the result.

THE Hungarian Minister and Mme. Vambery's reception Monday evening, March 15, to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the Hungarian Ides of March, will also honor their national hero of that time—Louis Kossuth.

Kossuth was the man who first instigated the revolt against the Hapsburgs, was thrown into jail where he lived for 18 months.

With a volume of Shakespeare as his only book in English, Kossuth taught himself the language during those lonely months. But to his amazement, he found he couldn't make himself understood, when, as a free man, he stopped in England on his way to America.

Incidentally, the United States regarded this Hungarian patriot, so highly, that they sent the frigate Mississippi overseas to bring him to these shores.

Kossuth lectured in this country, a village was named for him, and there's a vast collection of American literature on the man and his country.

New Yorkers will celebrate Louis Kossuth day next Sunday, by proclamation of Mayor O'Dwyer.

TOWN TOPICS: Archduke Otto, pretender to the Austrian throne, stopped in Washington briefly on his way to San Francisco where he is committed to give a lecture.

"You're much thinner than when I last saw you," a friend remarked to him at Mrs. George Mesta's cocktail party the other day. "Who wouldn't be in Europe," he returned with grimness. He'll stop here again before he flies the Atlantic.

Who are the most attractive daughters of official Washington? For answer, read the current Red Book, there're a dozen faces with the reason why.

Did you know that Drucie Snyder, daughter of the Secretary of the Treasury, hankers for a stage career? That Alice Diggs, first of the season's debutantes, likes to paint furniture, and that Cornelia Langer, the Senator's daughter, hopes to combine a writing career with marriage?

First Party Rule Is Attractive Women Guests

If you're planning a party and—as you naturally do—want it to be successful, here are some excellent tips on how to go about arranging for the affair, selecting guests, etc.

They are given in the March issue of the American Magazine by Sherman Billingsley of the world-famous Stork Club, who says that "to achieve sparkling harmony a party for adults must be composed as carefully as a melody."

Billingsley draws upon his years of experience as host to celebrities, near-celebrities and just plain people to offer some do's and don'ts of party-giving. First of all, he says, the components of a good party are good talking, good eating and moderate consumption of hard, or soft, drinks.

"It isn't the cost of a party that makes it a success," he adds. It's the guests, combined with proper food and liquid refreshments.

"It's easy to make a hit as a host or hostess," explains the Stork Club's managing director, "if you realize that women are interested in both men and women, but men, socially, are interested only in women."

Ask Attractive Women

So, whether it is a dinner for 8 or 10 at home or at a restaurant or a cocktail party for a hundred, Billingsley's cardinal rule for the hostess is—start off your guest list with the names of attractive women.

Choose persons who have something in common. But don't go to the other extreme and have everybody in the same business.

Make the wife the controlling factor. If she will be an asset, invite her and let the husband, whether he'll be a liability or otherwise, come along.

Don't try to be a peacemaker and jeopardize your party by inviting feuding families.

Make sure someone is on hand to welcome guests. Introduce people promptly, telling the folks about one another, and trying to bring together people with common interests that will stimulate conversation.

Don't Overdo Flowers

Don't overdo your decorations. Have just enough flowers so no one will notice that you have any.

Place cigarettes, ash trays and matches in profusion and give everyone a good drink, quickly.

Don't let anybody get a table off in a corner and start a bridge game.

If you have a piano and there's a pianist in the group, keep her or him away from the ivories in the early stages of the party. Talking, rather than singing, should be encouraged at this stage, else the singers are likely to keep going until they drive everybody else home.

Don't ever try to get by with just peanuts and potato chips. Serve hors d'oeuvres, preferably hot, and a buffet of sufficient quantity and variety to satisfy the appetites of all.

Provide substantial salads—chicken or lobster—that are easy to eat standing up. Your meats—chicken, turkey and cold cuts—should be sliced thin.

"If you can't give people something pretty good to eat," advises Billingsley, "don't have a party."

Tricks for Teens

By Nancy Pepper

On the list of boys you'd like least to date are those who wear their shirt collars buttoned up and go without ties. Another type of Joe to whom you'd like to give a drop dead pill is the one who removes his tie before he starts to dance and wears it in his pocket for the rest of the evening. Also—in case the men in your life care—your thumbs are down on bow ties, with or without electricity. Yes, you have your own ideas about boys' ties and you're doing everything you can to popularize them.

TULIP TIME—In one high school, the girls are buying pastel colored plain ties for their O. A. O.'s and decorating them with their own lip-prints in all-over design. To prevent lipstick smudging, they brush over each lip-print with colorless nail polish.

NEEDLE NUDGING—Boys go from one extreme to another. In one high school, it's no longer considered Smooth or Sharp to wear those violent prints or painted ties. The B. M O. C. are wearing conservative crocheted ties—preferably in murky black. And it's their O. A. O.'s who are crocheting them.

TIE WRITING—Not "Sky Writing," kiddies. Seems that boys buy plain black ties for themselves and then paint all kinds of Jive stuff over them in different colors. Synonyms for "Drop Dead" are a big favorite right now. How many do you know?

Safe Keeping

This should be of special interest to girls with small, inquisitive, brothers. No matter where you hide your most personal treasures, he's sure to find them and give the family a detailed report at supper time that night. Most small brothers are particularly interested in their sisters' mail—and the way they can memorize some passages would surprise their teachers who have trouble making them memorize their own names.

ANIMAL PATROL—One of our Hi-Style scouts surrounds the box in which she keeps her letters with her collection of stuffed animals. She can always tell when her small brother has been tampering with her correspondence by the position of the animals. After the first few times, he decided that her wrath was worse than her letters.

LOCK AND KEY—An old suitcase with a good lock serves as a safety deposit box for another teen-agers mail. She wears the key on her charm bracelet. That leaves her young brother very much on the outside—and NOT looking in, either.

IN THE BAG—Now, take the case of the blessed teen-ager who either has an ethical kid brother or no kid brother at all. She finds that a multi-pocket shoe bag, tacked on the wall beside her desk, makes the perfect file for her important correspondence. For each of her correspondents she reserves a separate pocket, with his (or her) name pinned on it. We like this idea so much, we're going to try it ourselves. All we need are the letters!

Classroom Pests

There are to me two kinds of guys,
And only two that I despise,
The first I'd really like to slam—
The guy who copies my exam.
The other is the little punk
Who covers his—and lets me flunk!

Chem Class

Sing a song of sulphide, beaker full of lime,
Four and twenty test tubes,
Breaking all the time.
When the cork is opened,
Fumes begin to reek—
Isn't this an Awful Mess
To have five times a week?

Feudin' and Fightin'

What's the score, Junior? Take out your ball pen and check each one of the subjects below on which you and your mother have arguments. If you rate 50 per cent you're average, if you rate less you're a daughter in a thousand, if you rate more—you're a square in the family circle.

Weekday Night Dating.
Date Curfew Time.
Doing homework with the radio on.
Spending nights at other girls' houses.
Clothes—You say you haven't enough; mother says you have too many.
Timing of telephone Conversations.
Radio Programs—Dad likes the news; mother prefers Soap Operas; you'll take the Disc Jockies.
Borrowing the Family Car.
Not helping enough around the house.
Putting on Boots when you're all dressed up for a date. You don't want to, of course.

TRIXIE TEEN SAYS——

Automobiles have motors only for one reason—to make them go. They weren't meant to be parked on dark roads. You make dates for only two reasons—to be popular and to have fun. Not to misbehave so you can suffer the pangs of self reproach for days afterward. Now, let's put two and two together—automobiles and YOU. You and your date ride in automobiles so you can go places. Keep the motor sparking, and you'll get to where you want to go. Shut it off for Parking, and it's "Destination Unknown." Coming to a standstill won't hurt the car; but it may be fatal to your social career, your reputation and your chances for a repeat date with the driver.

Removing Gum From Materials

Chewing gum can be successfully removed from fabrics by holding a piece of ice directly under the stuck-to part. This freezes the gum, which can then be picked off easily. Sponge with carbon tetrachloride to remove any stain.

Save Pieces For Mending

If you have extra pieces of the garment that is to be dyed, have them dyed along with the article. Then you are all set for patching when that inevitable time comes along.

Tips on Laundering Rayon Fabrics

Many of today's rayons may be washed in your washing machine, with the family wash. Among the machine-washable types are butcher linen textured spun rayons and spun rayon twills. A label on a garment or fabric will tell you when machine washing is recommended.

Rayon-and-wool fabrics should be pressed like all-wool fabrics. Steam press, using a damp pressing cloth over the fabric—or a steam iron. The iron should be moderately hot. The garment should be slightly damp when pressing is finished—never press bone dry!

Rayon hand washables should be washed in soft, lukewarm water with plenty of suds made with a mild soap. Rinse garment thoroughly until water is clear. Then wring or squeeze water out. Scientific tests have proved that wringing is no more injurious to rayon fabrics than any other fabrics.

'At Home' in America

a popover served usually with meat gravy.

Saffron cake, a rich bread served with sauce composed of raisins and saffron juice, and Cornish pasties, quite similar to our meat pies, are other English recipes not ignored over here.

SURPRISINGLY, American clothes do not receive such enthusiastic praise from the British brides as our food.

The English girl here admits our party clothes, nylon stockings and cotton summer costumes are incomparable, but she doesn't like to set aside as much of her budget for her wardrobe as her American counterpart does.

Quite a few are like Mrs. Charles Gantt, also of Arlington, who served five years as a British Red Cross nurse.

"I'd gotten so accustomed to our tailored uniforms," Dorothy Gantt explains, "I can't help feeling rather indifferent to all these fancy styles, especially the 'new look.'"

When Ena Kennedy was asked what she most appreciated about American clothes, "shoes!" was the emphatic reply.

Her husband, Larry, had sent her stockings and other clothing while she was still in England but the big thrill came when he presented her with a pair of black patent leather open-toe, open heel pumps the day she arrived. "I was tempted to spend all my savings in the first shoe store I visited here," she confessed.

"But nothing beats British tailoring," says Pat Moran, and according to the other British brides in this area, she's absolutely right! They all try to send to England for their winter suits and coats.

"THERE'S so much we have to learn about America," is a popular phrase with the British brides. They all want to do a lot of traveling in their new country.

Mrs. Ray A. Crockett of Blue Plains dr. sw., her husband and 3-year-old son, Alan, seem to have a head start on the rest.

Ray's parents drove them all out to Texas last year to break in their new car. "I'd never before realized the terrific difference between the size of England and this country until I saw Texas," she said. "And I'd never imagined there was so much I didn't know." Her husband stayed in the Army after the war, went through OCS and is now a communications officer. Right now Ann Crockett is waiting to join him at his post at Scott Field or wherever his next assignment may be.

Legends and American movies of old New Orleans have intrigued quite a number of the English girls and they've picked that city for the first long vacation trip.

AFTER two years of American home life does the British bride yearn to visit her home country?

"We all have pipe dreams of visiting England again," Mrs. Crockett admits, "but during the war, even before we were married, many of us broke off family ties—so many of us joined the services—and there'd be no real home waiting for us."

There's such an expense involved with a transoceanic visit, too, that it means to most of the young families a choice between a washing machine or other longed-for home furnishings and a visit home.

So most the British girls choose the former and invite their relatives here for a few months.

The thought of going back to England to reside is immediately dismissed by all. "I guess I would rather enjoy being in England again," Pat Moran says hesitantly, "but I really couldn't wish that on my husband. He's American all the way down to his toenails. He'd miss his home too much."

"There's so much more opportunity in this country," is Dorothy Gantt's reason for her determination to make the United States her permanent home. "Middle-class Americans have such excellent education and business advantages!"

And of course the English brides will always have—no matter how transformed they become to American ways—the British trait of wanting, more than anything, a place to "plant their roots." And now their roots seem to be quite securely planted in American soil and thriving on it.

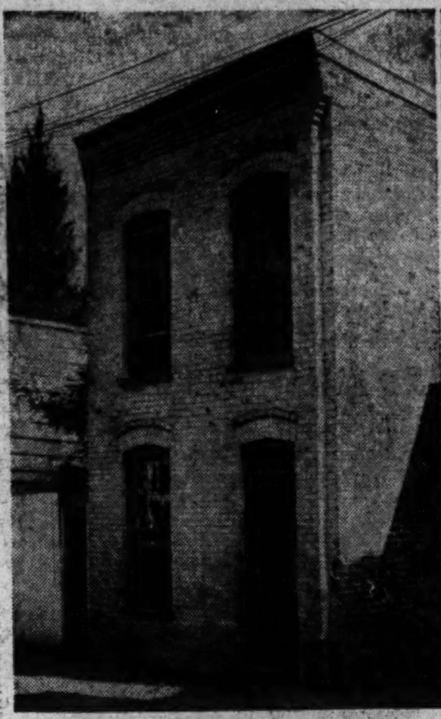
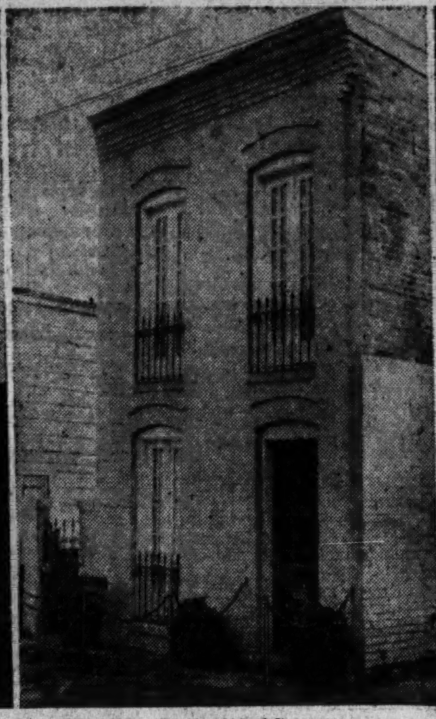
Georgetown 'Eyesore' Sparkles Under 'Carter Touch'



Here is the dilapidated two-story brick dwelling which Mrs. Carter bought in 1946 for $4,250. It is located at 2704 Poplar st. nw., a dead-end street in Georgetown



Six months later the shack had become a smart, quaint residence in the best Georgetown tradition, complete with side garden. Exterior is painted white with red front door for contrast

This is a good example of what Mrs. Carter had to work with. Windows and doors were a dead loss, but a thorough remodeling job turned it into one of Georgetown's show places. An interior picture is shown on page 7 of this section

QUAINT, historic Georgetown is often called the Nation's most famous example of slum clearance. Hundreds of dilapidated dwellings have been transformed into picturesque homes. Much of the face lifting is due to women like Mrs. James M. Carter of the Westchester Apartments.

CARTER

Mrs. Carter is one of those women who are happiest when remodeling or redecorating homes—hers, yours, mine . . . it doesn't matter. She has remodeled four run-down houses, three of them in Georgetown. Her last job was a two-story brick residence at 2704 Poplar st. It could easily have won the title of "Georgetown's worst eyesore."

The Carter touch has turned it into a bright, cheery, very livable, little residence in the best Georgetown tradition. But it didn't happen overnight.

Georgiana Carter purchased the deteriorated dwelling in 1946 for $4250. The lot was only 19 by 38 feet on a dead-end street. Four other homes had recently undergone remodeling in the same block. A predominantly Negro section was being displaced as white owners or tenants occupied the renovated dwellings.

Mrs. Carter began her project in the midst of the Nation's worst shortage of skilled building mechanics and materials. She waited four months for a contractor who never arrived. She finally decided to be her own contractor.

With one full-time carpenter, plus help at critical moments from neighborhood men, the job was started, with Mrs. Carter as general contractor, architect, assistant carpenter, laborer and general all-round materials scrounger.

The interior was nearly a complete loss. It was rebuilt to suit the architectural plan. Plaster and lath was chipped, knocked and torn off the walls. All possible materials were salvaged.

Plaster vied with nylon hosiery as critical items at that time. A Maryland supply house was discovered that allowed each customer two bags. Four trips were made before enough plaster was on hand.

The job was kept going through the winter. Mrs. Carpenter vividly recalls eating her noon lunch each day in the carpenter's truck. She worked each day from 7:30 to 4 o'clock, wearing the same checked suit through the entire project.

Six months later the Cinderella touch was evident. The home was fully completed and ready for furnishings. Mrs. Carter haunted auctions and antique shops looking for just the right pieces. A few items came from her Westchester apartment.

The finished product is an exquisite housing gem. The floor boasts a 14 by 17½ foot living room, with a small enclosed kitchen and dining room. The stairway to the second floor is a carpenter's work of art, complete with scroll woodwork.

Upstairs is a 14 by 16 bedroom and a balcony-study, which can double as a second bedroom if needed, a bath and plenty of closet space.

The exterior was painted white. A bright red door provides a striking contrast. Iron railings on each window are a Carter speciality.

The front door is a misnomer. The main entrance is gained after a short walk in the side garden. A brick wall allows privacy in the

New Building Will Replace Historic Arcade Market, Shops

The Arcadia Building, Washington's former carbarn landmark at 3134 14th st. nw., is scheduled to be razed within six weeks to permit erection of a new two-story and basement building providing all facilities found in the current structure, plus many more.

Irving Berger, of the Kass Realty Co., owners of the commercial center which includes the large Arcade Market of food stalls and stands, said application for a building permit will be filed shortly.

He perdicted the razing and completion of a new building would take around one year. The structure is L-haped, with 145 feet fronting on 14th street and 140 feet on Park road. It doesn't include buildings housing Peoples' Drug Store, Kinney Shoe Store or the Waffle Shop at the corner of 14th and Park rd.

Berger said he had no idea how much the new structure would cost.

FHA Approves Apartment Project

One new rental housing project of 36 units for veterans was approved last week by Director James A. Hewitt, District FHA insuring office.

Chatham Apartments will be erected at Merrimac dr. and University lane, Prince Georges County by New Hampshire Estates and financed by the Metropolitan Mortgage Co. with an insured mortgage of $316,800.

New 'City' Drilling For Water Supply

Carr, Inc., developers of the 2100-acre "city" planned at Springfield, in nearby Fairfax County, Va., expect to know some time this month whether they can start erecting homes on schedule this summer. It all depends on the water supply.

Edward R. Carr, corporation president, said drilling had begun to determine the availability of water. If water is not produced in sufficient quantity, then the developers will be forced to postpone building operations until water can be brought to the property by pipeline, probably sometime in 1949 or early 1950.

One well has hit water at 250 feet, he revealed. Other wells are under way. Army Engineers have approved plans for a sewage disposal plant in the development, he said.

Long-range plans call for the new city to have independent water and sewage facilities.

The Fairfax County Board of Supervisors has already rezoned 2100 acres for the planned community of 25,000. Seventeen separate rezonings cut the former farmland into rural, suburban, urban residential, rural and general business and industrial zones.

The site lies 3 miles south of Annadale, just west of the Shirley hwy., expected to be completed next year. One cloverleaf off the four-lane express highway will allow access to Springfield.

Besides the water and sewer systems, the builders plan to provide sites for schools, a bus terminal, police station, civic center, general business area and four shopping centers.

Mrs. Stout Sells Estate Of 60 Acres at Easton

Mrs. Ruth Stout has sold Tred Avon Manor, her 60-acre estate at Easton, Md., to Robert E. Grove of Pittsburgh, according to Previews Incorporated, marketing agents. Francis Bartlett of Easton was the selling broker.

The 14-room Southern Colonial residence dominates a long peninsula at the mouth of the Tred Avon River on the Eastern Shore of Maryland.

Maryland Homes Are in Middle

FHA Appraisal Rules Are Target of Probe

By Conrad P. Harness

IF THE congressional subcommittee investigating the Viers Mill Village project can prove the homes are overpriced at $8700, then the Federal appraisal system now in use all over the Nation will be open to attack. That's the unanimous opinion of builders and real estate men questioned here this week.

If field investigations prove the dwellings were appraised at a higher value than their fair market value, then Congress can be expected to overhaul the present Federal appraisal systems. If the appraisals stand up, then the entire furor is expected to subside quickly—gone, but not forgotten.

A joint statement issued by the five appraisers who set the tentative $8700 sales price for VA declared: "The entire committee feels that when the homes are fully completed as to original plans and specifications inspected by us, and providing workmanship is up to standard, that our original evaluation of $8700 is fair and reasonable and will stand up."

Representative J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.), and George Perkins, House Expenditures Committee investigator, looked over the project Thursday. Findings are expected to be released shortly.

Sigmund Sommers, spokesman for Harris Construction Corp., builders, said he would gladly open his records to any accredited investigating committee. "My hands are clean," he added. "The project can speak for itself. We certainly have nothing to hide."

Workmen Buy Homes

SOMMERS reported that several workmen on the housing project, located 3 miles north of Silver Spring on Viers Mill rd., had purchased homes. "They know value and good construction," he declared. "It stands to reason they wouldn't have bought homes here if they weren't up to standard."

Top officials at FHA have called in James Hewitt, director of the local FHA insuring office, and had him justify his appraisal of the vast housing project.

Hewitt told this reporter that "commitments for 500 dwellings were handled in the usual way. It was just another job to us. We gave them a $7700 commitment on the basis of a 90 per cent mortgage under Section 603, Title VI of the National Housing Act."

Hewitt would make no further comment other than "I don't care to get involved in any mud-slinging."

Representative Clare E. Hoffman (R., Mich.) is chairman of the subcommittee investigating the Federal appraisal system. Representatives Boggs of Delaware and Lanham of Georgia fill out the three-man subcommittee.

May Tour Country

THE Viers Mill Village complaint was only one among many from all over the country. As far as could be determined, no veterans had complained about the local project, only Montgomery County Commissioner Brooke Johns. The subcommittee, however, has scores of complaints from veteran buyers in California, Michigan and other States charging builders with erection of substandard housing.

The subcommittee plans to tour some of the larger cities to hear evidence, if necessary. No hearings will be held until investigators have surveyed several projects, it was disclosed.

Morgan Callahan, loan guarantee officer of the local VA office, who was asked for a tentative appraisal on the Viers Mill Village homes, said he knew the "project was a hot one, so I placed five of the best appraisers in the city on it, all men whose reputations are unimpeachable."

Normally only three appraisers estimate a project, he pointed out. All five arrived at the figure of $8700 on the basis of plans submitted by the builder and an inspection at the site. The $8700 figure is only tentative.

VA will issue its final price as soon as the first buyer is ready to move in and the mortgage firm re-

HAVEN'T you occasionally stopped driving to remark—"I'd like to have a place like that"—This is IT!
TOWERING oaks, dogwoods and evergreens, a winding brook with wild ferns, bordered on either side by picturesque garden walls, rustic bridges and rock gardens, create the delightful environment and setting for this artistic home.
IT overlooks U. S. Park and the lot is so arranged that no homes can be built to either side—affording quitetude and complete privacy.
1ST floor BEDROOM AND BATH is featured. Living room about 22x13.6; artistic fireplace and lovely mantel mirror; the large bay-windowed dining room and side porch 20x10 overlook rock garden and both have an unobstructed view of the miniature valley; de luxe kitchen with metal cabinets and a circular windowed breakfast room or "cocktail corner" adjoins. The 2 upstairs bedrooms are nicely proportioned—correctly and amply spaced for furniture; another tiled bath. Huge ground-level recreation room, pine-paneled, asphalt floor and wood burning fireplace. Floored and finished "work-shop" or maid's room and bath. Automatic air-conditioned heat. Built-in garage.

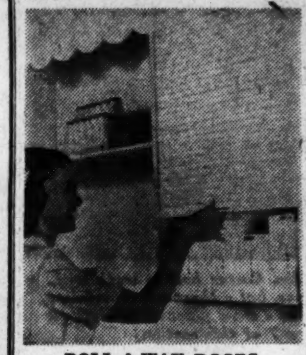
CAN-VENIENT RACK

No more fumbling in dark recesses of the kitchen cabinet when this rack is used. Made of aluminum and equipped with a durable extension spring, the rack will hold cans, jars and bottles of all sizes. The spring automatically adjusts itself to the size and shape of the object it holds. Can be used in cellar workshop to hold nails, screws, etc . . . and no bench hammering will bring them cascading down.



ROLL-A-WAY DOORS

Roll-a-way, interlocking plastic doors for kitchen cabinets, desks, luggage and even coffee tables are now on the market. The doors roll up at a touch and are out of the way. There's no stepping away from the work area to open doors . . . no bumped heads on open doors. It's a smart way to brighten and dress up kitchens.

CAR-VEND

There is no need to glance from the road when driving if your auto is equipped with this item. A fresh cigarette rolls into your hand at the touch of a finger. Dispenser comes in transparent or clear plastic with an aluminum top plate to be mounted within easy reach under the dash.

Viers Mill Is Pawn In Appraisal Battle

quests appraisal. If the builder has lived up to plans and specifications and construction is up to standard, then the original appraisal will stand.

The builder can be penalized several hundred dollars if the final product is not up to standard.

FHA Checks Compliance

CALLAHAN pointed out that his office didn't come into the picture until after the local insuring office of the Federal Housing Administration had approved the homes for 90 per cent mortgage insurance on a valuation of $8700. Thus, the Government insured the mortgage of $7700 per house.

It is up to FHA to make sure the builder complies with all plans and specifications. A full-time FHA employe is stationed at the project to check quality of materials and construction. This is a standard FHA procedure on large developments.

"The buyers aren't getting cheated," Callahan declared. "The homes may not be any bargains, but it's just what the veterans need in the way of price. My conscience doesn't hurt me about that $8700 price."

Myron Ievy, manager for Colonial Investment Co., exclusive agents for the project, said over 250 homes had already been sold. The first home is scheduled to be occupied in about two months. Over 65 were sold in one weekend following the project's opening.

The price furor was set off originally by County Commissioner Johns, who predicted the homes would become the slums of the future and were worth far below the asking price.

He told this reporter that Wilton T. Allen, in charge of the Montgomery County Assessments Office, had figures on what the homes should cost the builder to erect.

Are 'Unavailable'

WHEN questioned, Allen said no assessment had been made as yet but would be after streets were in and homes fully completed. He estimated the assessment would run between $3000 and $4000 at full value.

Allen said Johns was advised by three friends, who were builders, that the homes could be reproduced by them on their own terms at a much lower price than Haris Construction Corp. was asking. The three builders' estimate all came out within $100 of each other, said Allen, and averaged $5400.

Allen could not identify the builders. A call to Johns' office revealed the names "were not available."

The five local men who gave a tentative price appraisal of $8700 to VA were identified as William M. Throckmorten, F. Latimer Barkley, Oliver T. Carr, Richard L. Parli and William Beringer.

Project Is Not Completed

THROCKMORTEN, with 25 years' experience in the building and real estate field, is a member of the National Association of Real Estate Boards and a qualified appraiser.

"If Brooks Johns is right about that $8700 price, then the entire system of appraising as we know it is wrong," he declared. "Johns is the one who is out of step."

Another member of the VA's five-man appraising team, who requested anonymity, stated that the project looks "pretty rough right now in all this rain and mud, but I think it will be fine when it's finished.

"The $8700 figure is based on reproduction cost at today's price. Our system allows the builder a maximum of 10 per cent profit. Haris Construction Corp. has a terrific capital investment in equipment on that job. If they stump their toe one time they'll take a loss."

50% of Homes Cost Over $6700

Half of the residential homes started since last summer cost over $6700 to build while 20 per cent cost less than $3250, according to Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Builders' cost excludes sales profit, selling costs, cost of land and site improvements, etc. Construction cost should not be confused with selling price, which is usually 20 to 40 per cent higher.

Over 10 per cent of the dwellings cost $9250 and up, the bureau reported. Construction costs were higher in industrial areas than elsewhere, and higher in the North and West than in the South.

Increased Nail Production Dooms Busy Gray Market

By William G. Smock

PITTSBURGH, March 6 (AP). — Building contractors can take heart—the nail shortage seems to be slackening.

Major nail manufacturers agreed that production is up, supplies are increasing and grey-market complaints are fewer.

In the preshortage days, nails were so plentiful that anybody passing a construction job could fill his pockets for a home workshop. But since the war many jobs have been held up for lack of nails. Many contractors, harried by petty thievery, have put nails and other scarce materials under lock and key when not in use.

Ralph Scherger, president of the Allegheny County Homebuilders Association, said things go so bad that the builders were paying grey-market prices of up to $15 a keg for nails that should have sold for $4.50. He estimated February supplies at about one tenth of normal.

But things may be looking up now.

A spokesman for the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., large independent producer, said production had gained about 5 per cent so far over late 1947. He credited the voluntary distribution program adopted by producers last December with easing the shortage.

Under the voluntary program, J. & L. has been diverting production to such trouble spots in the grey market as Boston, New York, Philadelphia and other Atlantic Seaboard cities.

February Permits Recede Slightly

Building operations in the District last month followed in the same path of January construction, a report of the District Building Inspector's Office has revealed.

February valuations from building permits issued came to $4,316,472, slightly under January's total of $4,333,570. Permits were issued for three apartment buildings valued at $1,151,000 last month.

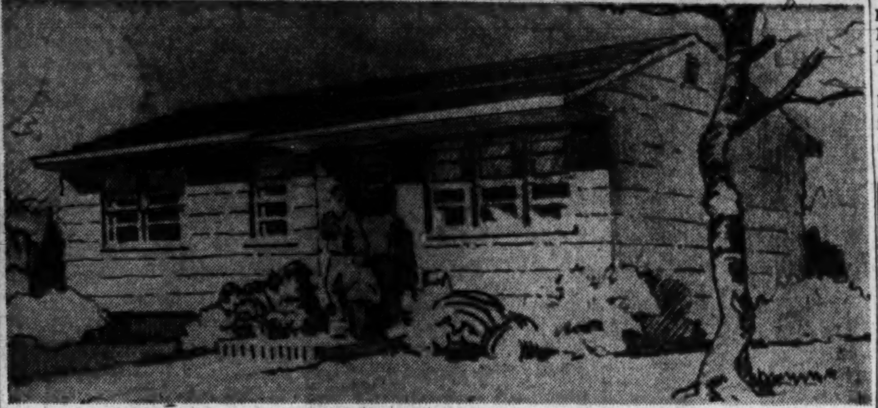
The permits allowed erection of 121 and razing of 31 brick and frame structures. The Northwest section led in the valuations of proposed buildings with $1,964,000. Runner-up was the Southeast with $613,000. Repairs to existing structures amounted to $1,232,972.

Automatic Controls

Philadelphia, March 6.—The automatic control era has reached a high point wherein one organization alone, the Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Co. and its Brown Instrument division, will this year produce more than 7000 different automatic controls for industry and home uses.

More Planned If Public Approves

$6000 'Expansible' Home Here Will Be Housing Guinea Pig



Proposed "Home With A Future" will have one bedroom, kitchen, living room and bath. Exterior will probably be frame, although beveled cinder block is under consideration.

LOCAL home builders are wrapping up a housing package this week which they hope to sell to area veterans, civic and Federal officials. It's a three-room "expansible" house expected to sell for $6000.

With one eye on the congressional probe under way at Viers Mill Village, the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington will put up one home as a test model. If it rates good comments and passes inspections, hundreds will be built. If it flops, the plan will be abandoned.

Clarence Gosnell, association president, yesterday said negotiations were under way for a site, probably in nearby Maryland or Virginia. It was also disclosed that association officials were asking price quotations on several large blocks of land for hundreds of the units if the home is favorably received.

The test house has been called "The Home With a Future." Clarke Daniel, local builder-architect, designed it. Actual cost of construction will be borne by association members.

The 32 ft. 9 inch by 15 ft. 5 inch floor plan would have a living room, dining room, one bedroom, bath and kitchen. The buyer would pay monthly installments of $45 to $50, including insurance and taxes, interest and amortization. The association predicted the house would meet accepted standards of safety, sanitation and comfort.

Don't Look for Breezeway

THE "expansible" house plan has been kept under wraps by association officials until definite arrangements could be worked out. A "stripped-down" minimum house was also under consideration. This would have been a two-bedroom frame home minus many standard items such as closet doors, guttering and downspouts, composition roofing, sidewalks, curbs and gutters, etc.

Everything possible would be stripped from the home to get the price down to low income levels. The buyer could finish the home when he was financially able. The expansible home can be expanded as the buyer's earning capacity increases.

The low-cost housing idea was the result of discussions at the recent conference of home builders in Chicago, where low-cost housing stole the show. Builders were warned that homes selling in the $4000 to $8000 range must be erected . . . or else the Government would be forced to fill low-income needs through subsidized public housing.

A minimum house is just that—four walls and a roof constructed soundly enough that a mortgage firm will lend money on it. It doesn't include a garage, breezeway, built-in snack bars or other finery.

It is known that several builders plan to erect expansible homes in 200-home blocks if the test house is successful. Further details on location of the test house are expected to be available next week, Gosnell declared.

Builder Sees Little Hope of Costs Decline

New York, March 6.—Construction programs deferred because of high costs should go ahead or be prepared to wait indefinitely, Guy B. Panero, head of Guy B. Panero, Engineers, said today.

Panero said that there is "no historical precedent in the building industry on which to hope for substantially reduced costs."

"Labor rates are so great a factor that it is almost impossible to foresee a decline in costs," Panero declared. "Our past industrial history shows that hourly wage rates once increased are seldom decreased.

"Even during the depression," he said, "hourly wage rates for field construction employes were not lowered even though building volume was at a minimum."

Panero said prospective building owners must decide "whether a building constructed in today's market can amortize itself within a reasonable period of time." If it can, he said, an owner is much better off by letting construction proceed than by waiting indefinitely for a break in the price structure.

Paper Drapes Spare the Budget

By Vivian Brown

PAPER drapes have captured the imagination of the American housewife.

No longer relegated to the summer cottage or the children's playroom, paper drapes have taken on glamour. They are at home in the living room and bedroom as well as the kitchen and bathroom.

New classic drapes, shown at the recent curtain and drapery show held in New York, look like fabric, are easy on the budget and are made of flame-resistant, plasticized paper.

Bugaboos such as rain and dust, enemy of beautiful window fabrics, needn't frighten Mrs. Housewife any more. Paper drapes are so economical that they can be thrown away and replaced at less than the cost of lining an ordinary pair of fabric window drapes.

Though most of the drapes are 90 inches long, and therefore, seemingly suitable for living room and bedroom, they can be cut off at the bottom to fit a window where a short drapery is more practicable. Strips left over can be used to cover waste baskets or other room accessories.

All draperies shown have interesting and pretty designs in muted or bold tones. Patterns designed by Steiner come in a wide range of color combinations including the pinks, greens and blues. Available in a modern stripe, homespun floral, pussy willow, feather stripe and fern damask, most of these motifs can fit any decor.

Paper draperies are easy to keep clean. A damp cloth brushed down the length of the drape will rid it of surface dust. Spots can be removed by the same methods used to rid wallpaper of stains.

In one household where paper drapes were being used Junior ruined pair after pair because he would pull on them until eventually they would tear. Mother, however, finally solved the problem. She would even the drapes off by cutting both of them at the point where Junior did the ripping job. Pretty soon they were window sill length and beyond baby's reach.

By The Associated Press

Paper Goes to the Windows . . . In a variety of motifs, these paper drapes designed by Steiner are easy to care for, economical and look like fabric

31 Houses Planned On Faraday Place

Steuart Bros, Inc., has applied for building permits for 31 homes in the 600 and 700 blocks of Faraday pl. ne. Dwellings will be semi-detached bricks, two-story and basement. Clarence W. Gosnell, Inc., is the builder.

Garden Club to Meet At Chevy Chase Home

The Washington Garden Club will hold its regular monthly meeting tomorrow at 1 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Joroleman, 6903 Brookeville rd., Chevy Chase. Mrs. James Strayer will discuss herb culture.

Southern Mill Will Produce Prefab Closet

Mass production of "Cabinet-Wall" prefabricated closets will begin this month as a result of a contract just signed between The Mengel Co. and Milton Lowenthal, designer, of 6207 Sligo parkway, Green Meadows, Md., the designer said yesterday.

Production at Mengel's factory at Winston-Salem, N. C., is expected to reach 25,000 units yearly, it was reported. John M. Gilmore, Mengel branch manager at Winston-Salem, said cost of the prefabricated units would be low enough to compete with on-site construction of conventional closets.

The unit was displayed at the recent Home Show Exposition here and was included in the model home erected by the Home Builders Association behind the District Building last fall.

The closets have shelves adjustable to any height and provide storage space for all members of the family, plus separate compartments for linens, cleaning supplies, books, victrola records, hats, household articles and luggage.

Architects Hear AIA President

OVER 125 local members of the local chapter American Institute of Architects, listened to a talk Thursday night by Douglas Orr, president of the national organization. Left to right are Slocum Kingsbury, president of the local chapter, Orr and Paul Goettelmann, local chapter secretary. Orr, a New Haven, Conn., architect, discussed the individual architect's responsibilities to the AIA and how AIA is bringing before the public the vital part played by architects in home construction

Realty Round-Up

WILFRED DE ST. AUBIN, recently returned from Hungary where he handled the American Red Cross assistance program, will address the monthly meeting tomorrow of the Washington Building Congress at the Mayflower Hotel.

The speaker has been in Europe since 1943 and reportedly has a very interesting story to tell about life in Central Europe.

BOUSCAREN

Henry L. Bouscaren, who opened his real estate office last September, has decided the time isn't quite ripe for branching out in the real estate business. He has closed his office to take over the post of sales manager for Fred A. Smith . . . More than a billion dollars has been advanced to home-seeking veterans by savings and loan associations last year under the GI bill . . . One reason for the shortage of nails has been the factor of exports. Nearly 8000 tons of wire nails were exported in the first four months of 1947. Nearly 7000 bathtubs went out of the country last April, together with 53,000 square feet of radiators . . . A large steel firm which produces steel forms for concrete buildings is dickering with local businessmen for possible erection of concrete structures for off-street parking.

And what ever happened to the solar house which Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co. was to erect in each State, plus the District? The glass firm has provided the answer: "Due to continuing fluctuations in construction plans among subdivision developers and operative builders generally, contemplated solar house projects have been delayed for a variety of reasons in most parts of the country."

The temporary 31-day extension of rent control recently voted by Congress automatically continues other provisions of the existing bill—veterans preference and controls on the construction of amusement and recreational facilities—Housing Expediter Tighe Woods has pointed out . . . Lustron will unveil its first house next month at Columbus, Ohio. The firm hopes to turn out 100 per day this summer . . . Senator Joseph R. McCarthy, vice chairman of the Joint Housing Committee, has made a section by section analysis of housing legislation proposed by him. It's a short and convenient way of reading what his proposed "Housing Act of 1948" will accomplish if it is passed by Congress.

Diesel Output Up 60%

The ratio of steam locomotive production to that of diesel-electric types is shrinking sharply. One manufacturer alone reports that diesel-electrics accounted for 85 per cent of its production in 1947, a rise of 60 per cent over 1946.

827-Unit Projects Being Planned

Preliminary plans for a 74-building, 872-unit garden-type apartment development at New Hampshire ave. and Piney Branch rd., in nearby Maryland, have been completed, it was disclosed yesterday.

The project has been named "Northwest Park" and is planned for erection in three sections of 354, 224 and 294 apartments each. Owner is Northwest Park, Inc. Victor E. DeMers is the architect. Jeffress-Dyer, Inc., 908 20th st. nw., was identified as the builder.

Buildings will be three-story and basement, of brick and cinderblock. The project is only in its preliminary stages and working drawings are expected to start later.

Builders' Plan Cuts Housing Cost

CHICAGO, Mar. 6.—A local home-building firm has worked out a four-point system which minimizes financial risk, labor costs, management overhead, and makes big building economies possible for medium and small builders. Smith and Hill, Inc., say they beat high construction costs by removing the speculative factor.

The Smith-Hill construction method is a compromise between prefabrication and conventional building. They call their product an "engineered house." Most parts are pre-cut in a year-round site factory, according to modular units. The basic Smith-Hill house boasts a 24x48-foot floor plan and sells for $11,000.

Year round, planned construction has solved the labor problem. Trade unions which usually object to imported prefab units and labor-saving devices, cooperated when Smith-Hill was able to give building mechanics, who normally lose a considerable number of work days a year, steady employment.

This eliminates special premiums, bonus payments and forced overtime which occur in open bidding for labor—all factors adding to the high cost of housing. Planned construction also enables subcontractors to minimize their risk allowances, stabilize labor costs, and make volume purchases where cost saving is involved.

Third part of Smith-Hill low-risk program is a three-part financing system. Under the usual system of financing banks advance money only as material is incorporated into the house, which forces the consumer to absorb price changes and frequently makes him a poorer risk.

Smith-Hill have sufficient bank credit to stockpile all materials at least one month in advance, letting them sell at a firm price.

Second financing feature is a packaged mortgage which includes kitchen and laundry equipment, and built-in furniture. This eliminates high monthly appliance payments and reduces the amount of furniture that must be bought. Consequently, the home-buyer is a better risk.

Third feature is selling each house before construction has begun, which gives Smith-Hill cash for down payments when necessary.

As a fourth part of their program Smith-Hill build a backlog of orders for three months from newspaper and display advertisement, at a cost of less than $35 per house, before construction starts.

Tile Production Gains

Ceramic tile in 1947 was 44 per cent greater than in 1946, the Tile Council of America, announced. Production last year totaled 89,242,000 square feet, about 27 million more than in 1946.

Edgemoor

Bethesda, Md.

This center-hall red brick Colonial home has just been attractively redecorated in excellent taste. Wallpaper selection will harmonize with practically any color scheme you desire. Floors have been sanded and given a durable new finish of lasting beauty. New Venetian blinds add interior charm.

The location, near the Edgemoor Club, on a quiet street well away from traffic roar, is an ideal spot for children.

First floor has large living and dining rooms, electric kitchen and breakfast rm.; second floor has 3 bedrooms, 2 tile baths; a large bright attic affords opportunity for adding 2 more bedrooms if needed.

The price is moderate considering the real value, location and desirability of this home. In fact, from every angle this is a rare opportunity for the home buyer. Be sure to see it.

LET'S TALK ABOUT GARDENS

Montgomery Plant Guide Aids Amateurs

Local gardeners can profit by lessons learned by the Men's Garden Club of Montgomery County, Md. The male "green thumbers" have compiled an 88-page book giving the lowdown on plants which grow well in this area.

The report covers 20 garden subjects, each chapter written by an amateur specialist who has learned his subject thoroughly through trial-and-error plantings.

A selected list of perennials which thrive in Montgomery County soils was prepared by Edward L. Stock, jr., and includes asclepias tuberosa, begonia, anemones, asters, verbena hybrids, carnation hardy hybrids and scores of others.

Special chapters were devoted to roses, azaleas, daffodils, peonies, lilies, iris, gladioluses, pansies and other plants.

The study was made by a special committee headed by Willard A. King, according to Frederick W. Lang, president of the club. Copies of the book may be obtained from Stock Bros., J. H. Small & Sons, C. F. Armiger, Inc., Bethesda Business Service or Barry-Twombly Co. at $1 each.

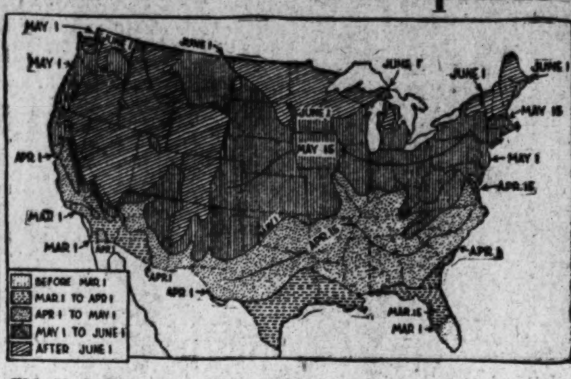
Chances of Frost in This Area Are One to Ten After April 15



This U. S. Department of Agriculture map shows dates on which the chances of damage from frost are only one to ten

IN MOST of the United States dodging frost is a chief concern of home gardeners. Is it hardy? That's the question asked about every new crop which it is proposed to grow. And hardy, to the experienced gardener, does not mean strong, vigorous, easy to grow, but merely this: Is it injured by freezing?

Because so many crops are not hardy and cannot be planted in the garden until danger of frost is over, the key date for spring gardening is the average date of the last killing frost. Every outdoor garden task must be timed with reference to this date. Of course it is never definite; seldom is it the same for two years running.

Gardeners must always take risks on the weather; but this risk can be reduced if operations each spring are based upon the experience of nearly 100 years with respect to the last killing frost in spring, is embodied in the United States Weather Bureau map which accompanies this article.

The date shown on the map for each of the various zones is the date after which the chances are 10 to 1 against a killing frost. This map may surprise you. Note that only at the tip of Florida and the southern California coast are plants safe from frost before March 1. And only in Florida, Texas and the southern half of California, can tender crops be planted safely before April 1.

Probably the best guidance you can have, as to the frost-proof date in your own locality, is the advice of neighbor gardeners. In most localities you will find there is a generally accepted date for setting out tender plants. This may vary for different plants. Remember that even plants known to be hardy when mature, are often injured by frost in their infancy, especially when they have been started under protection from the cold.

Rose Society To Sponsor Pruning Show

An outdoor pruning demonstration of rose bushes will be sponsored this afternoon by the Potomac Rose Society in the rose garden of Robert E. Scammell, 2810 Bladensburg rd. ne. The public is invited.

Experienced rose growers will demonstrate the technique of preparing rose bushes for a profusion of long-stemmed blooms. They will rid the bushes of unproductive wood and explain why each plant is pruned in its own particular style. A public address system will allow spectators to hear explanations of lecturers.

A display of injured and diseased wood will show infected types. If it rains this afternoon, the demonstration will be postponed until next Sunday at the same time and place.

The Potomac Rose Society also announced that the Annual Rose Institute, which it sponsors together with George Washington University, would be held April 1-2 inclusive at Lisner Auditorium. Prominent horticulturists will discuss rose culture.

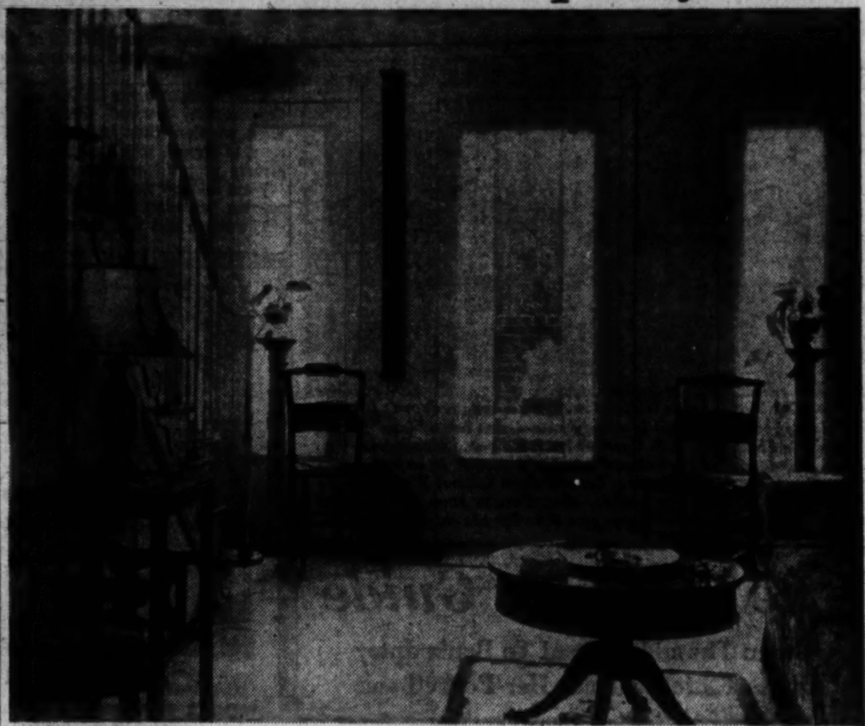
Decorator's Wand Taps 'Eyesore'



Living room for the remodeled Georgetown slum dwelling is bright and airy, looks out into small, walled garden. Furnishings came from auctions and antique shops. Mrs. Carter made the scroll work on stairway herself garden. An outdoor fountain completes the effect of quiet and dignity.

The entire project, including land cost, remodeling and furnishings cost $13,250, according to Mrs. Carter. The home is now rented to a British army officer and his wife.

Mrs. Carter reported she had received many offers to sell the home, but "I'll never sell any of the homes I've remodeled. I love them like children!"

The energetic remodeler doesn't like to stay away from her first love for long. For the last six months she has been working for the Italian Technical Delegation, but is just itching to go to the Virgin Islands.

"I've heard there are lot of opportunities down there along my line. I'd like to fix up a winter home and stay there six months of the year and rent it out the other six," she declared.

And she's just the one who can do it.

Comeback Through Color

Coat of Paint Will Transform Old Chest Into Thing of Beauty

CHEERY CHESTS . . . Made from repainted furniture; decorated with colored tape to spell out Junior's name or paste-on floral decalcomanias

IT ISN'T necessary to have a drab piece of furniture in your house. Even that old chest of drawers that you've pulled out of the attic to serve for Junior or Mary can be made to look brand new with a coat of bright paint.

Old dark furniture can be refinished for a guest room or a youngster's room in any of the pretty pastels—blue, pink, green or yellow—to change the whole picture of bedroom living from drabness to beauty.

Gaiety should be the keynote, particularly for a youngster's room. On Jimmy's chest of drawers, you can spell out his name with washable self-adhesive colored tape. You can get it in one-half, one-quarter or one-inch widths in eight colors. Jimmy will love his "very own" chest and perhaps take better care of it.

Available, also, are decalcomanias in a butterfly motif to paste over Sis' chest of drawers; in a floral motif or a Pennsylvania Dutch design for the guest room.

Whatever pattern you select can be carried out even to using it as the motif on the bed or night table. And don't forget to give your windows a shot of color.

Street Damage Report Requested

Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) Friday called on District Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West for a complete report on the damage incurred by individual property owners from the Eastern ave. widening project.

McGrath made the request during a Capitol hearing in which Eastern ave residents urged legislation to help them get additional payments for damages. Bills have been introduced to authorize the District Court to reopen the prewar condemnation proceedings which fixed payments to property owners.

West opposed the legislation, saying it would set a dangerous precedent. The hearing was conducted jointly by District subcommittees headed by Senator McGrath, and Representative J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.).

'Green Thumb' Is Road To Bankruptcy Unless Katie Padlocks Her Pocketbook

By Kate Perkins

I MUST never start a charge account at a hardware store or a nursery. I'd have to file in bankruptcy in two weeks.

All the gadgets, gimmicks, seeds and nostrums are going on display at this time of the year. Gardening, if unrestrained, can be as expensive a hobby as collecting Old Masters. In my current lavish frame of mind I could spend something like $100 for each plant I set out.

Science, as Gladys George used to say, is golden. Shelves are creaking under all the new formulas that disperse weeds via the spray method. Jap beetles, crab grass, moles, poison ivy, rabbits—anything you don't invite on the premises—may be repelled by magic from the test tube, if you've got the price. I haven't.

I already have ponied up $1.75 for some stuff to root out the poison ivy. The famous Perkins chart, drawn on the basis of neighborhood gossip, the thickness of squirrel coats and the appearance of the groundhog, indicates this will be a light year for Jap beetles. I shall eradicate them by my own invention: the gloved hand and a pail of kerosene and water. I may invest some cash to get rid of the moles by the gas route. For rabbit problems, there is Toni, the sports-loving feline, who has been practicing all winter on a single chipmunk, which has thrived on the chase.

On the matter of keeping down plant disease, I keep telling myself that I don't need a little of everything in the store. As usual I shall get a big bottle of a good, all-round spray, a nicotine solution, Bordeaux mixture. I'll have lime, a little super-phosphate, some bone meal and some fertilizer.

As for tools (and here is where I can really get into financial troubles, for the garden implement people are very ingenious) I'll stick to my wheel cultivator, hoe, spading fork, potato hook, steel rake and trowel. I shall invest in some new bushel and half-bushel baskets and I'm in the market for a new, lighter wheel barrow. Anything more than that is icing the cake.

Packages of seeds in stores affect me the way laudanum hit Thomas De Quincey. In the interests of economy, I have drawn my list of prospective plantings on the basis of my garden plan. Then I keep away from those seed displays. I had a close shave Saturday, with some herb seeds—marjoram, sweet basil and borage—but managed to put temptation behind me.

The only garden activity in my area now is concerned with planting flats and hot beds. Tomato, pepper, cabbage, broccoli and eggplant can be started now, and so can a few flowers—notably petunias. Most annuals should be sown in window boxes or cold frames in early April. The thing I can't solve this year is finding enough sunny-window space to hold all my flats. I'll never be without a cold frame another year.

The so-called "hardy" vegetables can go into the ground almost as soon as the frost is out of it and even before the light night-frosts are behind us. Peas, of course, love chilly weather and are always the first things to be planted. The cabbage family doesn't suffer from cold. Carrots, beets, lettuce, spinach, turnips and onion survive nicely.

Electricians' License Plea Turned Down

A proposal to grant masters' licenses without examination to electricians who have worked 10 years or more was turned down yesterday by the Commissioners.

The request, spelled out in a proposed amendment to the District electrical code, was backed by approximately 200 electricians who failed to pass the examination.

The Commissioners said they believed it "not in the public interest" to license candidates who showed themselves unqualified "by failure of the prescribed examinatoin."

A special committee including representatives of the local electrical industry, labor, District schools and the Department of Inspections found the examination "fair and not too difficult" and actually advocated "more rigid" tests, they said.

At a February public hearing, 18 witnesses favored the amendment, while representatives of the Local B-26, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, the Electrical Contractors Associatoin, Institute of Electrical Contractors and the Washington Building Congress opposed.

Lady Finger Bananas

"Lady Finger" bananas, which are one of the most popular varieties in countries where they can be eaten soon after being picked, but which are virtually unknown in the United States because they do not ship well, may soon enter United States markets via air shipments.

Oil Conversion Bans Considered

Plans to limit conversion of heating plants to oil in privately owned buildings are being considered by the Commissioners in view of expected shortages of gas and oil.

Limitations on installation of oil heat in new buildings also is being considered.

The Commissioners Friday asked Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West whether they had the legal right to impose such limitations on private property owners.

West said he would give a legal opinion "as soon as possible."

The move was suggested by Assistant Engineer Commissioner L. E. Cox, who said a temporary ban on conversion to gas, ordered February 27 by the Public Utilities Commission, "will cause a further load on . . . fuel-oil consumption."

Politics in the Air, Movies Take It Up

Politics is in the air and two political films are ready. Keith's gets "The Senator Was Indiscreet" Wednesday with William Powell (right) as star. "State of the Union" has been filmed by Metro. Here's Campaign Manager Adolph Menjou (extreme right) in that smoke-filled hotel room

HAZEL BROOKS, who scored in "Body and Soul," brings both qualities back to the Palace next week for "Sleep My Love." She appears with Claudette Colbert, Robert Cummings, Don Ameche

Pressure Groups and Distribution Are Chief Obstacles

Films Muff Chance to Push World Unity

By Richard L. Coe

MADELEINE CARROLL was saying the other day that she wished the movies could do a better job of telling people in various parts of the world about each other.

Now, of course, nobody likes to be lectured, but Miss Carroll wasn't thinking in those terms. Travel talks and solemnity won't do it, she mused, but it does seem a shame that so little has been done with an ideal medium to dramatize the brotherhood of man.

The semidocumentaries—from "The House on 92nd Street" to "Call Northside 777" and "T-Men"—are something of a start in this direction, emphasizing though they do, the crime theme.

Some of the Government departments are making fine contributions in this field, notably the Department of Agriculture shorts. The newsreels, hoked up as so many of the issues are with a smidget of something for everyone and subtly edited (as, for instance, in the controversial Palestine matter), are so open to question that one wishes a Ph.D. thesis would be devoted to a study of them.

Tomorrow evening, the United Nations film board will be showing four films to an invited audience. At this writing I don't know much about them, but there's hope in such an agency.

Inaccurate Notions

OUR AVERAGE feature-length films, aiming always at entertainment for the masses, make little effort at depicting the average American to the foreigners who so much admire our product for its technical skill.

Anyone who has lived abroad knows the quaintly inaccurate notions other nationals have of our fabulous country. They're inclined to think all children are as brash as Mickey Rooney's Andy Hardy, that everyone has either an automobile or a horse. The very mention of Brooklyn will bring a laugh in Tanganyika and the most civilized peoples of the Mediterranean question the Americanism of Yanks who don't carry a rod.

The better foreign films—and always remember we generally see only the better ones—give a far clearer picture of the average man (a useful, but irritating term) than do our Hollywood product.

For this we assuredly have ourselves to blame. Not only must the masses be pleased, but no one must be offended. The hew-and-cry minority groups create at the slightest suggestion that their members are anything but winged perfection is one of the fundamental reasons our pictures are so false to life. The commotion over the un-American activities hearings is but a major blast of the winds that constantly assault Hollywood from all corners.

On this point alone, it is a miracle any good pictures ever are made. No matter who is depicted as a villain, his fellows in profession, religion or social standing assault the studio with threats of general boycott.

Limited Audience

THEN THERE is the problem of distribution. While the capital of these United States runs foreign films as late as two years behind New York, Washingtonians do see more foreign films than most sections of the country.

Foreign pictures—naturally—have little exhibition chances in that stronghold of the industry, Los Angeles, and in most cities where they are shown, they're on a subscription basis promoted by small groups for one showing only.

So the better foreign pictures are allowed only a limited audience in this country and our own pictures are not allowed to compete with them in terms of reality for fear of offending the few.

Miss Carroll has set up her own film company for what she calls "feature documentaries"—true stories at the actual scene with the people whose everyday lives in the film correspond to their lives in reality.

However idealistic her plan, her real problem is going to be one of distribution. Once she gets her films made, she's going to be faced with being able to show them.

Schools Offer Best Bet

IT IS THROUGH film councils, churches and schools the best chance lies both here and abroad. (And in this connection, it's interesting to note that at the same time our interlocking system of studio-controlled theaters is under Supreme Court scrutiny, much the same matter is being argued before Britain's highest court.)

Here again, the paradox asserts itself. Film council members generally don't need to be persuaded that the chap on the other side of the globe is much the same sort of fellow he is; that's why they're members of film councils.

Church groups, however admirable, are minority forces and will tend to stick with their own minorities.

In the schools lie the greatest opportunity for making Miss Carroll's pictures tell their story. But our education set-up is such that the primary and secondary school is lucky indeed if a projection machine is available even on a part-time basis.

Powell Eyed for French Legion Tale

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, March 6.—Dick Powell is wanted for the lead in "Rogue's Regiment," the story of the French Foreign Legion in the Orient. Many Nazis are supposed to have sought sanctuary in the Legion to avoid prosecution for war guilt.

Marta Toren, Universal's new Swedish import, has the feminine lead . . . John Garfield is being paged for "The Dark Wood," which was originally announced for Tyrone Power and Jennifer Jones (not that John would play Jennifer's role too) . . . Ty looks like a ghost of his former self. He has lost that rugged, outdoor tan, and has almost a prison pallor. When I asked why, he replied, "For eight weeks, I've scarcely been off the sound stage. I don't even have time to use my desert lamp."

Rita Hayworth's closest friends believe she will reconcile with Orson Welles in Rome. One friend told me, "People overlook the fact that Rita is Latin, and the Latins never quite fall out of love with the father of their children."

Talked with Vic Mature the day before he and his bride settled into Mrs. Mildred Stewart's charming Laguna Beach home. It's a small, isolated house, with two bedrooms and a magnificent view; and the Matures have a year's lease on the place. . . . The photographs taken of their wedding in Yuma came to Hollywood by bus—not plane. When I asked why he made me work so hard to get the story of the marriage, Vic replied, "Dorothy wanted to keep it quiet." He wanted Mrs. Vic to talk with me, but she fled from the phone. "She's so modest—unlike me," explained Vic, "that she breaks out in a cold sweat at the sight of photographers." . . . Vic has 10 more days' work on "The Law and Martin Rome," and Director Robert Siodmak wants to shoot the scenes in New York. If the company goes back to the big city, Mrs. Mature won't go along.

Henry Hull, who played the poverty-stricken Jeeter Lester in "Tobacco Road" for years, gets the role of a millionaire in "The Great Gatsby." As usual, he will have to be given time off to grow his own beard. He has refused to wear any artificial whiskers since he accidentally swallowed a small mustache in the play, "The Gray Fox."

Zachary Scott, who did a fine job in "Cass Timberlane," with Lana Turner, was called back to his own studio (Warners) and put in a B picture, with an 18-day shooting schedule . . . Randy Scott and Harry Joe Brown are cooking up an independent production dealing with the birth of California as a State. They may shoot part of it in Mexico to get the old Spanish atmosphere . . . Rogers and Hammerstein offered Judy Canova $7500 a week, for six months, to star in "Annie Get Your Gun" on the road. If she accepts, the salary, plus her radio fee, will make her one of the highest paid gals here.

O-Kay for Kay

AT the dinner honoring Kay Kyser and his tenth anniversary in radio, Bob Hope introduced Jane Russell as "the girl who was discovered by Howard Hughes, who was discovered by Senator Brewster, who was discovered by Johnny Meyer, who hasn't been discovered yet." Dennis Day got the biggest hand of the evening. General Holland M. (Howling Mad) Smith, after talking with Randy Scott for an hour, later mistook the actor for Gary Cooper. Tribute was paid Kay for his countless benefits and especially his work for hospitalization and health. The shindig lasted five hours.

Arthur Lubin finished writing the screenplay, "Francis," at the Ahwahnee Hotel in Yosemite. The story is about a talking mule in the U. S. Army. The mule will carry the plot, and voice his opinions of the services, and the war in general. A mule star will have the leading role.

Charlie Morrison's fortnightly dances at the Champagne Room in the Mocambo are loads of fun and beautiful to watch. Reminds me of the old Mayfair Club, where the gals would appear after working and praying over their costumes for months. The last party I attended there was run by the late Carole Lombard. She arranged for everyone to wear white; but the party was over for her when Norma Shearer walked in wearing a scarlet dress. Carole picked up her coat, and left the place with Clark Gable running after her. That was the beginning of their romance.

There's a new cat in the Marcus Goodrich home, named Delilah. The stray kitten followed Marcus home. It was so tiny and friendly he took it in, Olivia De Havilland named it and now they are trying to protect it from their huge dogs . . . Bob Ryan's salary at RKO was tripled and he deserves it. I hear he did a great job in "Berlin Express" and he got a nomination for an Academy Award for his performance in "Crossfire."

Movie Mate Leaves Congress to Helen

THE DOUGLASES

HOLLYWOOD, March 6 (AP).—Melvyn Douglas is the only movie star married to a member of Congress. He views this distinction with pride—and misgivings! They seldom see one another.

Douglas works in Hollywood, Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas (D., Calif.) in Washington. Both are deeply serious about their careers. Both are avowed liberals.

"Maintaining a household has its difficulties, in our case," said Melvyn. "The children (Peter, 13; Mary Helen, 9) are here with me, because they're in school. Mrs. Douglas manages now and then to arrange a weekend long enough for a flying trip home, but when she gets here official duties often keep her busy. We practically have to go out of the country to see each other."

"Out of the country" was two weeks spent in Mexico City, just before Douglas started his role in "The Long Denial." He definitely doesn't hold with visiting her in Washington.

"I did once, but I couldn't take a steady diet of Congressmen," he explained. "They acted like a pack of schoolboys."

Who'll Succeed the Great?

How Holds the Piano This Power Over Us?

By Paul Hume

NINE PIANISTS (not counting accompanists) will be heard in public concerts in Washington's principal concert halls this week.

That is not an unusual number of piano players for a single week. It is only a recurring manifestation of the fact that the piano continues to be the chosen instrument for the largest number of artists.

This is a condition which has existed for over a century, and is the reason for the fact that the largest repertoire for solo instrument is that for the piano. Let us today examine this overcrowded field and endeavor to establish some guides for the young and old in the art of touching the keyboard.

We have both artistic and commercial reasons for such study. With the steady flood of pianists in our midst, we are besieged with mediocrity as in no other field, even that of singing. Furthermore, there is every sign that where once flourished a generation of great artists of the piano, we have fewer and fewer to take the places of the mighty.

Who have we today to replace Rachmaninoff, Paderewski, Petri, Schnabel, Bauer, Gabrilowitsch, Lhevinne, Hofmann, Sauer, Rosenthal, Cortot—that blessed generation now almost disappeared from among us?

Well, we have Horowitz, Casadesus, Rubinstein, Gieseking, Hess, Arrau, Novaes, Serkin, Iturbi, Brailowsky, and younger men such as Kapell,

Radio Contests Fascinate Millions

'Murder Is Naughty Because . . .'

By John Crosby

RALPH EDWARDS' Miss Hush on "Truth or Consequences" attracted an estimated 25 million listeners, which is a husky figure on any night and an incredible one on Saturday nights.

EDWARDS

His normal Hooper, around 13, shot up to 26.7, an all-time high for a quiz and stunt show. His current Walking Man contest has already brought in 1,100,000 letters, 100,000 more than Miss Hush. So many, in fact, that it comprised 90 per cent of the mail received by NBC's Hollywood office, which testily told Edwards he would have to handle his own mail after this.

Naturally, this whopping success has attracted imitators. In Cleveland, Station WJMO promptly started a "Neighbor X" program on which listeners were asked to guess the identity of prominent Clevelanders whose voices were broadcast. Washington's WWDC started a "Who's Mr. F. M." contest. It brought in 25,793 letters of which 19,120 guessed Mr. F. M. correctly as Peter Donald. The winner, an F. B. I. man, was selected over the others by virtue of the neatness, originality and logic of his letter.

One enterprising radio showman is now peddling to independent stations a complete program patterned after Miss Hush, consisting of a script and recorded voices of famous people. All the station has to provide is a master of ceremonies and somebody to open the letters.

Just to set the record straight, the famous people whose names have been guessed and who are definitely not the walking man are President Truman, Louis B. Mayer, J. Edgar Hoover, James E. West, Ed Crump, Herbert Marshall, Henry J. Kaiser, Richard Dix, Col. Edward J. Baker, Bing Crosby, Walter Huston, Eddie Cantor and Winston Churchill.

Two Kinds of Sentences

THERE are two kinds of "because" sentences which feature in the most popular of the current contests. The one used by Ralph Edwards might be called the noble cliche type ("Every one should love every one else because . . . ") and the other might be described as the sponsor worship type ("I wouldn't be caught dead chewing any kind of gum except Mumpsies because . . . ") but in both cases the essay must consist of 25 words or less.

Another current noble cliche contest is that of Abbott and Costello, who are currently seeking 25-words-or-less letters on the subject: "I want to help fight juvenile delinquency because . . . " First prize for the most eloquent fighter of juvenile delinqency is a white baby elephant. (This contest is open until June 5, in case you're interested in winning a white baby pygmy elephant.)

Contest-givers have to strain terribly to give away something that Edwards hasn't already given away. He has given away virtually everything except matching polar bears.

In the recent Eversharp-Shick contest ("I like Eversharp-Shick best because . . . " plus 25 words

. . . time out for lunch on a beach on Bermuda's south shore

Girls 'Recuperating' From Bermuda Trip

A LADY wants not for companionship in Bermuda, two girls in a position to know said yesterday.

Gini McNaught of 4615 21st st. nw. and Audrey Hall of 4815 4th st. nw. now are recovering a bit from their gloom at being whisked home from the sunny Atlantic isles. They are the ladies who spent nine days in Bermuda at the expense of The Washington Post after winning a "Government Girl" contest in connection with the Mary Worth comic strip.

Gini and Audrey are home now. "Never," both girls said earnestly, "had a better time." Swimming, dining, dancing, basking, it was all there, they said.

Asked if they met any Englishmen, they said no, just Americans. Air Force men and Navy men seemed to be in abundance down there and if what the girls say is true, it must be nice duty.

Gini was apparently the only casualty. She took on a bad sunburn near the end of their stay and had to stay home from work (Veterans' Administration) one day.

BILLY GILBERT, the screen comic, starring in the Oscar Straus operetta, "The Chocolate Soldier," which begins its final week at the National tomorrow night. Keith Andes, Doretta Morrow and Ruth Gillette are others in the large cast

Spike Clowns for Harry, Anticipates Run Here

SPIKE JONES breezed into town and out again yesterday to help the White House Correspondents entertain President Truman at their annual dinner.

But Spike and his crew of zanies will be back to start a two-week run at the National a week from tonight. His "Musical Depreciation Revue" will feature his radio characters, including Doodles Weaver, Helen Grayco, Trumpeter George Rock, the Gardner Twins, Ina Souez and their assortment of wash boards, fog-horns and whistles.

The Jones tour across the country this winter has been making theater history. A two-week stay at Nevada's Flamingo Club brought $120,000 through the ticket window. A projected three-week stay in Chicago lasted three months and last Sunday's visit to Baltimore attracted a day's gross of $10,000.

Cornell to Do 'Antony' At Ford's in Baltimore

Katharine Cornell will present her production of "Antony and Cleopatra" by William Shakespeare, direct from its record-breaking run in New York, for one week at Ford's Theater, Baltimore, starting Monday evening, March 22.

Opposite her is Godfrey Tearle, the British Shakespearean star. This is his first appearance in a classic play in this country.

The featured players are Kent Smith as Enobarbus, Lenore Ulric as Charmian, Ralph Clanton as Octavius Caesar, Ivan Simpson as Lepidus, and Joseph Holland as Pompey. Guthrie McClintic staged the tragedy.

The settings, which sweep from Egypt to Rome and back again, were designed by Leo Kerz. Valentina designed the women's costumes and John Boyt the men's. Paul Nordoff, the Pulitzer Prize winner, who executed a similar commission for Miss Cornell's "Romeo and Juliet," composed the incidental music.

G. W.'s Play Opens Friday

Edith Hamilton's translation of the "Agamemnon" of Aeschylus, the first play of the trilogy from which Eugene O'Neill adapted "Mourning Becomes Electra," will be presented by the George Washington University Players, with the collaboration of the Art and Dance departments of the university, Friday and Saturday nights in Lisner Auditorium.

Miss Hamilton, in cutting and adapting her translation for the University Players, has eliminated the long choral odes in Aeschylus' original, and placed the emphasis on dramatic action.

Dr. Natalie E. White of the university speech department, is directing the tragedy.

Cooperating with the Players, the university's modern dance group, directed by Miss Elizabeth Burtner, will present a special ballet depicting Agamemnon's triumphant return from the Trojan War. Professor Donald Kline of the Art department will design the setting.

One-Act Finals Set This Week

"Play Time," the finals of the Junior One-Act Play Tournament of the D. C. Recreation Department, will be presented by the Children's Theater of Washington Friday and Saturday, at Coolidge High School.

Over 200 children are participating in this annual contest of the Neighborhood Centers. Twenty-six different playgrounds are in rehearsal.

The junior finals, 13 to 18 years, will be Friday night at 8. The sub-junior finals, 8 to 12 years, will be on Saturday afternoon at 2:30. All performances will be in the Coolidge High School auditorium.

Films Jump on Indian Bandwagon

Hollywood, March 6 (AP).—It didn't take Hollywood long to jump on the Indian bandwagon.

News that impoverished Navajos in Arizona and New Mexico faced a winter of hunger and privation inspired immediate relief measures here, and also inspired Producer Jeffrey Bernerd to announce that his next picture will be "Return of the Navajo."

He said that he will go to the Indian country next month to gather story material, and that he is trying to get Anthony Quinn to head the cast. Quinn played the Indian in Bernerd's "Black Gold."

Hollywood, March 6 (AP).—An 18-foot sloop owned by Film Actor Kenny O'Morrison has been registered with Lloyds of London and has its own flag. He considers it one of the smallest vessels under registration.

The flag is red and yellow, international code colors for the letter "O." Built of teakwood, the craft has a galley and sleeps two. Asked why he registered it, O'Morrison said:

"Sheer conceit."

Stage and Screen Show Times

STAGE

National—"The Chocolate Soldier," Billy Gilbert in Oscar Straus' operetta, tomorrow night at 8:30.

Gayety—Burlesque continuous from 12 noon to 5 p. m. and 8:30 p. m.

Trans-Lux—Short subjects and news reels continuous from 10:15 a. m. to 12 midnight.

Coming Attractions

Warner—"Saigon," Alan Ladd and Veronica Lake encounter the mysterious East, opens Thursday.

Palace—"Sleep, My Love," Claudette Colbert and Robert Cummings explain what happens when you take to sleeping pills, to follow the current "A Double Life."

Capitol—"Tenth Avenue Angel," with Margaret O'Brien is the film, but the attraction is Horace Heidt on the stage, starting Thursday.

RKO-Keith's—"The Senator Was Indiscreet," William Powell as a Presidency-minded Senator who unfortunately kept a diary, opens Wednesday.

Metropolitan—"Panhandle," Texas—where else for such a title?—with Rod Cameron and Cathy Downs, opening Thursday.

Columbia—"The Song of Bernadette," Jennifer Jones and Vincent Price revive their popular legend, opening Thursday.

Hippodrome—"Tawny Pipit," a widely praised story of British village life, probably opens Saturday.

Little—"The Barber of Seville," an Italian film from the Rossini opera, follows "Johnny Frenchman."

Howard to Offer Ruth Draper; Also Rice Play

Howard University has a full theatrical week. Ruth Draper will make one of her rare Washington appearances there Tuesday night and, the same evening, the University Players will open a four-night run in Elmer Rice's famous play, "The Adding Machine," at Spaulding Hall.

Miss Draper has completed seasons in London and New York this winter. She will be playing the same one-woman sketches she used in both theater capitals.

Her appearance at Howard is being sponsored by the Women's League of the university. Andrew Rankin Chapel will be the setting for Tuesday night's performance at 8:30.

Elmer Rice's drama has become a classic since its first production in 1923 by the Theater Guild. It is a satire on the modern mechanized world, in which Mr. Zero passes, after his death, to a heaven that employs him on a giant adding machine.

Dr. Anne Cooke is directing the 23 players, with Robert Brown in the leading role.

You're an Actress And Acrobat, Too!

Hollywood, March 6 (AP).—"You don't have to be an actress in this business," says Janet Blair. "You have to be a blasted acrobat."

Cary Grant had to learn to ice skate for "The Bishop's Wife." Esther Williams is having to learn to ski for "Duchess of Idaho." And so on ad nauseam.

"Now I've had to take up the finer points of rough-and-tumble fighting," says the tiny, bone-frail Janet, "and just look at me."

Janet's hands and arms were scratched as if she had run pell-mell through a bramble patch. Her fingernails were broken off down to the quick. And she swore she had bruises where she couldn't show them.

She collected the minor injuries during a slapstick chase scene in "The Fuller Brush Man." The bruises were inflicted sliding down a bannister. "They made me slide down sideways," she says.

There may be no connection, but Janet is contemplating quitting the studio (Columbia) when her contract expires in April.

Ice Cycles to Close With 2 Shows Today

"Ice Cycles of 1948" concludes its second Washington visit with two performances today at Uline Arena.

Produced by the creators of "Ice Follies" and "Ice-Capades," the revue includes Ann Robinson and Robin Lee in a company of 80 skaters.

Today's matinee will be at 2:30, the final evening performance at 8:30.

Jeff Donnell Wins Role

Jeff Donnell will enact the role of Mary, Cary Grant's secretary, in "Mr. Blandings Builds His Dream House."

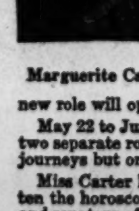
WELL KNOWN ASTROLOGER
MAKES PREDICTIONS FOR YEAR



Marguerite Carter

Marguerite Carter, one of the greatest true students of the stars and their influence on your birth date has written for leading magazines and newspapers covering this country, Canada and England. Leading newspapers have carried the article that follows covering your birthdate and what the year ahead may hold for you. Read it!

March 20 to April 20 (Aries)—"Attention will be focused on financial plans. Opportunities to gain will come through something new."

April 21 to May 22 (Taurus)—"Attention will be centered on home conditions. This is the ending of some old family condition. A new role will open before you as though you had been reborn."

May 22 to June 22 (Gemini)—"A time of decision. You will have two separate roadways which will open. There will be several short journeys but one will be long. Romantic experiences!"

Miss Carter has literally led hundreds to success. She has written the horoscopes of prominent movie stars as well as governors and senators of various states and outstanding men from all walks of life. This year will be a time of important decisions in your life. You can make it a transformation toward the deepest desires of your heart.

Your most valuable asset is your chance to turn your life toward the future you desire in the year ahead.

Miss Carter will send your personalized forecast for one complete year covering the trends financially and all important changes indicated. Make this year—your year. Send your complete birthday, month, date and year—the hour you were born (if known) state where you were born, with $1.00 for the greatest help you personally have ever known. If you wish Miss Carter's Personalized Notations which will answer the questions you have in mind, without your asking them include one additional dollar. Address:

Concert for Italian Aid Scheduled for Tuesday

THIS is the week of the tremendous opera concert for Italian Aid, with Albanese, Roman, Stevens, Baum, Merrill, and Baccaloni singing their heads off. See pictures and program for complete details, but don't miss it. The biggest show of the season.

Events of the week include the return of Georges Enesco to conduct the National Symphony; the Marine Band Orchestra's performance of Aaron Copland's The Quiet City, a beautiful score which the National Symphony has never played for the silliest reason on earth; a wonderful program from Karl Doktor and Erich Itor Kahn Friday at the Library of Congress; and Schoenberg's Variations on a Recitative in today's Washington Cathedral organ recital by Marilyn Mason.

When John Charles Thomas joins the Washington Choral Society on March 16, he will sing for the first time, Walter Damrosch's Abraham Lincoln Song. Based on Whitman's "O Captain, My Captain," the work is for chorus, baritone, and orchestra. The choral society will also sing works of Bach, Della Joio, Faning, and Tanyef.

Miss Julia Schelling is giving eight lectures on opera, the second of which is set for next Thursday, at the YWCA. Sister of the late Ernest Schelling, the lecturer is one of the best qualified persons in the country to discuss opera. P. H.

Break for Short Tenors

Met's New 'Ring' Sets Give Wagner a Boost

By W. G. Rogers

NEW YORK, March 6 (AP).—How can a pint-size basso be made to look like a giant on the operatic stage? How can characters be whisked into or out of sight in a twinkling, or changed into beasts? How can a 5-foot tenor make love to a 6-foot soprano without looking foolish?

These are no problems to the millions who hear their Metropolitan Opera on the air. But they're a big part of the show to the people who attend "Met" performances here.

For months the "Met" worked out solutions for these things in preparation for redesigning and restaging the four-part Wagner Ring cycle. The two men busiest at it were Lee Simonson, distinguished theatrical designer, and Dr. Herbert Graf, an authority on Wagnerian stagecraft.

The four operas required 12 new sets. They show the heights above the Rhine, beyond which Valhalla mounts to the sky; the gloomy subterranean caverns of Alberich, the hairy Nibelung; and several outlandish or romantic places in between.

Like every other operatic stage in this country, the "Met" is inadequately equpped for the Ring cycle. Opened in the 1880's, the big opera house has its golden horseshoe and gold curtains, but it has practical drawbacks. There isn't enough storage space. The deepest trap, for running Erda and other characters up into sight, is 3 feet. It can't be deeper because the subway interferes.

Pre-Simonson sets were built on one level. Fafner and Fasolt, the giants in "Das Rheingold," stalked on stage in clumsy boots like stilts; the gnomes Alberich and Mime broke their backs staying bent over like dwarfs. Worst of all, Siegmund and Siegfried played on the same level as Bruennhilde. Since the "Met's" Bruennhilde is Helen Traubel, the only tenor who can even look her size is Melchior, who isn't always available.

So Simonson ran his stage upward, like a flight of stairs. As long as Alberich and Mime stay on the bottom level, they really seem like gnomes while Joel Berglund (Wotan) and Set Svanholm (Siegfried) stand a few steps above them. As long as Fafner and Fasolt make their dramatic entrance high up on the right, and remain there, they don't have to wear such thick lifts on their boots to look like the awesome giants Wagner intended them to be.

New Trimmer For Paper Is Light, Safe

The possibility of accidentally slicing off fingers is eliminated in a new light-weight paper trimmer soon to be placed on the market by a New York firm.

In place of the conventional heavy cutting blade, the new Safe-T-Trimmer has blades only an inch apart, which move only a little more than an inch during cutting operations. They are operated by hand pressure on the calibrated platen that holds the paper to be trimmed.

The platen is coordinately ruled for print sizes up to 8x10 inches, but affords a full 11¼ inches of actual cutting length. Light in weight, the trimmer has rubber feet to prevent scratching polished surfaces. It can be hung on a wall and operated from that position. The device is expected to sell for $10.95, the manufacturers said.

Bumper Crop of Pianists

Sandor, List, Istomin, the still untested Pressler and others.

But the piano is not being played as beautifully as it used to be, categorical though that remark be. The reasons for this important and unhappy fact are both physical and spiritual. Some of the prime physical reasons are set forth in Charles O'Connell's recent book, "The Other Side of the Record," when he says, "Piano makers have not in a generation contributed a single basic or significant improvement in piano tone. They have concentrated upon the development of lighter and faster action which in itself results in some sacrifice of tone, and in this development they have succeeded. In so doing they have put into the hands of the contemporary composer a medium for the easy exploitation of the piano's most obvious and most vulgar qualities—its powers of rhythm, velocity and dynamics."

Forget Its Beauty

TO PUT the matter positively, pianists today, as a rule, seem to forget that the chief beauty of their instrument is its ability to sing, or to quote O'Connell again, "its emotional expressiveness, generated and communicated primarily through the quality of tone."

It is quite as possible to make a better living playing the piano badly as it is to make more money singing badly rather than well. Igor Stravinsky's Poetics of Music, on "performance," reminds us that "bad interpreters should not make us forget the good ones . . . noting, however, that the bad ones are in the majority and the virtuosos who serve music faithfully and loyally are much rarer than those who in order to get settled . . . make music serve them."

Take our pianists of today and yesterday: Horowitz approaches Rachmaninoff, yet is far from that great artist when it comes to infusing human gentleness into those quiet measures of Beethoven or Chopin that made a Rachmaninoff concert notable.

And who have we to match the sheer poetry of a Bauer or Gabrilowitsch? Precisely, who plays Schumann and Brahms as did those giants? Arrau at times, and Gieseking. Serkin, too, in his limited repertoire, is often magnificent.

How to Start?

THE RECITALS of Casadesus, Gieseking, Novaes, Hess and Horowitz, in our opinion, usually give one the inner satisfaction of having heard great music interpreted in the spirit of the composer. But the spectacle of concert after concert where next to nothing happens is dismal. More than dismal, it raises many questions for the younger students and artists of the piano today.

How to start a career, either amateur or professional, in the piano-playing world—what to strive to learn—what to avoid—what repertoire—how can one judge one's own playing?

It is a safe assumption that there are more piano teachers in Washington, and in every other city, than teachers of any other instrument. Accredited schools, and the recommendation of friends and musicians, can place one on the track of a capable teacher, in almost any price range. (It is often necessary for a highly gifted young teacher to charge less in starting a teaching career than the fee of an established though perhaps no more competent pedagogue.)

Not to Be Beaten

BUT BE sure you find a teacher who believes that the piano is an instrument capable of giving back every bit of affection you put into it, and not an object to be beaten. Be sure he or she thinks that technique is a prime requisite for any kind of playing, but only as a means to an end. There is nothing musical about a brilliant technique. It is the use to which one puts sure technical equipment that counts, and it is on this point that one is judged.

Speed, volume, fireworks—these are not the highest ends of music. Cultivate the inquiring mind that is not content with the same 100 pieces played by every other pianist. Would it not pay to check on the piano compositions of Haydn? Chopin was one of the greatest of all composers for piano, but there are many others.

And the body of American works for piano is expanding so rapidly, and at such a high level of excellence that it is worth as much attention as any other repertoire today.

Should Get About

NOR DO you want to belong to that insulated group of musicians known as "instrumentalists." For they are those who know only the literature of their own narrow sphere. Every pianist ought to make a habit of playing with other musicians, either accompanying singers, or in chamber music ensembles. The world is not going to marvel because you play the Grieg concerto, but a number of people, including yourself, will be much happier if you work out a fine performance of a quartet by Faure, or Schubert, or Robert Palmer. (If you don't know who Palmer is, write in and ask.)

Learn to express beauty in sound on the piano; give your audience something fresh and worthwhile to hear, and there will be people who want to hear you.

This week's nine pianists: Robbert Casadesus, this afternoon, Constitution Hall; Agi Jambor, tonight, Cafritz Auditorium; Lois Kaplan, tonight, National Gallery; Grace Harrington, tomorrow evening, Phillips Gallery; Luboshutz and Nemenoff, Thursday evening, Constitution Hall; Erich Itor Kahn, Friday evening, Library of Congress; Mark Fax, Friday evening, Howard University, and Earle Donoho, daily through Wednesday, at the Capitol Theater.

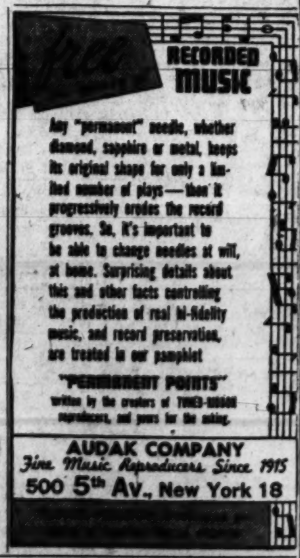
Frank Asper to Play Here Tomorrow

Dr. Frank W. Asper, renowned organist of the Mormon Tabernacle in Salt Lake City, will play a recital tomorrow evening at 8 p. m., in the Washington Chapel, 16th st. at Columbia rd. nw.

His concert tmorrow night will include music by Marcello, Bach, Handel, Franck, Mulet, and others.



RECORDED MUSIC

Any "permanent" needle, whether diamond, sapphire or metal, keeps its original shape for only a limited number of plays—then it progressively erodes the record grooves. So, it's important to be able to change needles at will, at home. Surprising details about this and other facts controlling the production of real hi-fidelity music, and record preservation, are treated in our pamphlet

Taking Pictures

There's a Lighting Gadget For Every Photo Purpose

By Ollie Atkins

Here is Lancelot Sukert of the National Photographic Society showing how the true zealot leaves no effort unbended when he's after a snapshot. Sukert was "shot" when the local N. P. S. unit visited the Botanic Gardens recently

A DISCUSSION of photographic lighting brings on a horde of trade names, sizes and purposes of lamps, respective advantages of screw bases and bayonet bases, speed and time flashes, monochrome and color lamps.

There are lamps for general lighting in the studio, bulbs for spotlights and for home portrait equipment, enlarger lamps, color photograph bulbs, projection lamps, fluorescent lamps, dark room colored lights, strobe high-speed spark lamps at $38 per tube, flash bulbs with short peaks, long peaks in all shapes and sizes, and projection-type bulbs—which we will not discuss.

All this adds up to the thing we stress in every phase of photography—one must specialize.

The big names in photographic lamp making are General Electric, Wabash and Westinghouse. Professional photographers are split among the three, but I would guess that Wabash is the most popular lamp with amateurs.

* * * *

OFTEN I am asked, "Why do you use a flash bulb in the daytime?" The answer to this is usually, "To be sure I get a picture." However, daytime flashes have a more artistic purpose than merely to assure results on the negative. Their light will cut into heavy sun-cast shadows, giving greater detail in shadow areas, and on these occasions synchro-sun pictures achieve really great results. The picture has the reality of bright sunlight, but has forced into it the detail in shadow areas that the artificial flash provides.

In summertime-scenes involving close-ups with sky background, where a yellow filter would subdue red lips on the subject and require greater exposure, the use of a flash will give perfect illumination in the foreground and cut exposure of the sky to equal the effect of a K-2 or G filter.

Have you ever noticed that flash pictures out-of-doors are often over-exposed of the principal subject and very much under-exposed in the background? To avoid this set your lens aperture to give you a perfect over-all exposure and then with your flash on an extension move it the proper distance from the foreground subject to pull in the background material.

When making portraits in bright sunlight it is wise to have the photoflash illumination not so strong that it will destroy all shadow effect. Tuck a white handkerchief between the bulb and the reflector to subdue the blast of light when working at close ranges.

* * * *

BY far the most popular flash bulb is the "peanut" or No. 5 flash. This lamp is used with a synchronizer which mechanically flashes the lamp while the shutter is open to capture the "peak" of flash light or by the simple "open flash" method. It is a bayonet-type—fitting in the socket similar to an automobile headlight.

Without a mechanical synchronizer the amateur's best bet is the SM flash lamp. It fires the total output of light in 1/200th of a second which effectively stops action of ordinary proportions. Right now SM bulbs are not in abundant supply.

Blue-colored flash bulbs are used with daylight-type color films, and with corrective filters regular flashes may also be used.

Photo flash bulbs are now coated with protective plastic lacquer which tends to prevent shattering of glass on the rare instances when lamps explode.

Exposure of all artificial lighting sources is competently estimated in what are known as guide numbers and supplied on photographic lamp charts and other sources. Guide numbers are simply a mathematical method of determining exposure under normal conditions. The guide number listed for your particular photo lamp is divided by the number of feet between the object photographed and the lamp to give the F number on your lens.

Pictorial Salon Exhibition Set

The fifteenth annual international salon of the Pictorial Photographers of America will be held at the American Museum of Natural History, in New York from April 4 to 18, it was announced last week.

Directors of the salon announced that, while prints larger than 16 by 20 inches are not preferred, there is a particular desire for more entries of prints smaller than the normal salon size. The closing date for entries will be March 12.

Judges will be Dr. D. J. Ruzicka, Helene Sanders and Samuel Grierson.

New Dog Tracks

Morehead City, N. C., March 6.—This coastal resort area will have dog racing for the first time this summer. A track is being erected at Morehead Bluffs, near here.

How to Place Audience for Film Lecture

The proper way to place an audience for a showing of projected slidefilms is explained in a new leaflet issued last week by the Eastman Kodak Company.

The leaflet, "Hints for Slidefilm Projection," demonstrates the seating arrangement for minimum distortion and loss of image brilliance with both beaded and matte screens.

The former permits seats to be placed within 20 degrees of the line from the projector to the center of the screen; while with beaded screens, the angle is increased to 30 degrees.

With double - frame pictures, the projector is placed at a distance slightly greater than four times the width of the screen. With single frame pictures, projector distance is increased to more than eight times screen width.

Audience seats for either screen surface should be situated within the prescribed angles, with the front row two and one-half times screen width in front of the screen, and the last row between five and six times screen width from the screen. The leaflets are available free of charge from the company.

The Washington Post's funnies will be on the air over Station WINX every Sunday starting today at 9:05 a. m. Here is "Uncle Jay" Owen, who will read the comics, running through a quick rehearsal with 3½-year-old Bruce Crawford, son of George Crawford, a WINX announcer or less), the razor company in some desperation announced its grand prize would be a $15,000 solar house—that is, one constructed almost entirely of glass. (Houses have been given away before but no solar houses.) After this flash of genius, Eversharp-Shick's inspiration ran out rapidly. The second and third prizes were respectively a Buick convertible and a mink coat, both standard items in these things.

Naughty, Because

Wackiest Prize

ONE OF THE wackiest of grand prizes was offered last year by Bob Burns in a contest for stories about relatives. The prize was a week's fishing trip with Burns aboard a $4000 cabin cruiser. After the fishing trip, the winner got the cruiser.

Among other notable "because" contests is one started last week by Paul Whiteman (total prizes $22,500) on his daily disc jockey show. Each day for four weeks a tune will be played which all listeners will be requested to guess and then write a letter of—yup!—25 words or less starting: "I like Blank because it reminds me of . . ."

"Bride and Groom" is waving $10,000 in cash around for letters explaining why listeners like "Bride and Groom," and Lever Brothers, who are way out in front of all the cash givers at the moment, are offering $100,000 in 329 prizes for letters of 25 words or less explaining why listeners like any of six Lever Brothers products.

The "because" sentence has become such a widespread nuisance that the conductor of a program on WHN in New York in a quixotic mood asked listeners to write in the sentence "I like 'Varsity Magazine' because . . ." without finishing it. Just because. He judged the entries by some mysterious standards of his own and awarded the winners record albums.

Reports About Stamp Gambling Exaggerated

By William M. Stuart

REPORTS that stamp gambling is a growing craze involving millions are greatly exaggerated. It started with the announcement that during the fiscal year 1947 the Philatelic Agency recorded sales of United States stamps amounting to $3,500,000. Dealing in stamps is profitable, of course, not only to the Government, but to stamp dealers and collectors as well. The amount spent on first day sales and at postoffices represents a large sum, to be sure, but it certainly could not be considered a "gambling" danger involving millions.

Investors in mint stamps have always been criticized because they are not collectors. Large accumulations of mint stamps are acquired by many, but to charge that investors are buying commemoratives simply to resell at fancy prices is fantastic, to say the least. Stamp "gambling," according to recent news stories, would imply that large investments in mint sheets have reached an alarming stage. All such stories have been circulated by those unfamiliar with the true situation.

The Postoffice Department has announced that the first flight of Irish Airlines from New York to Dublin, scheduled for departure from New York on March 18, has been postponed and is not expected to take place until some time in May.

AN auction was held at the meeting of the Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P.A., Tuesday evening in Pythian Temple. Ellery Denison acted as auctioneer. At the meeting of the club Tuesday in Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw., there will be an exhibition of Easter Seals now being circulated for the Society of Crippled Children.

The Silver Spring Philatelic Society will meet Thursday evening in the board room of the County Building. All stamp collectors in Silver Spring are invited.

Philatelic service will be provided at the postoffice and Air Field of New York for covers carried by the first flight to Delhi, India, on F. A. M. route 18 flown by Pan American Airways on March 13. There will be a special cachet. Air mail postage is 25 cents a half ounce and covers must reach postoffice or air field in New York not later than March 11.

Robson Lowe will arrive in Washington on March 31 and will be at the Willard until 9 a. m., April 2, where he will be pleased to meet his old friends.

Air parcel post will be inaugurated between the United States and 21 foreign countries effective March 15. The countries are: Austria, Belgian Congo, Bermuda, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Egypt, Eire (Ireland), Finland, Gold Coast Colony, Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Greece, Iceland, Italy, Netherlands, Newfoundland, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland, Tunisia, Turkey and the Union of South Africa.

EUGENE WULFEKUHLER, JR., Box 2, Ottumwa, Iowa, has been appointed chairman of the publicity committee of the Confederate Stamp Alliance. In the Bulletin, No. 18, just issued there is another serial by August Dietz, sr., of Richmond, Va., on "Confederate Counterfeits." Copies of the Bulletin will be mailed to all who apply to Mr. Wulfekuhler, jr. Among the members are the following Washington collectors: Dr. Griffith G. Frazier, Ewin L. Davis, Lieut. Col. Crawford L. Donohugh, David Kohn, G. Ross Popkins, Lowell J. Ragatz and Karl Stecher.

Senator Thomas of Oklahoma has introduced in the Senate a resolution authorizing the issuance of a special stamp in honor of the Five Civilized Tribes of Indians in Oklahoma.

The Capital Precancel Club will meet at the home of Joseph H. Weimer, 3150 16th st. nw., tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock.

Alexander Halperson of the Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., has received two first day covers with the 10 values of the new Austrian construction job, the designs being most attractive. The covers were mailed, first day, from Vienna on February 18. The covers were by air mail registered.

New Brahms Album Is A Fair Job

BRAHMS: Symphony No. 2 in D Major. New York Philharmonic under Rodzinski. Columbia 725. $7.10.

Since the time this album was made, Rodzinski has left the New York orchestra, done much to rebuild the Chicago Symphony, and now is to leave that group. His powers as conductor and refiner of orchestras is well illustrated in this set. There are warmhearted passages, such as the whole second movement, where the orchestral voices move in beautiful fashion. But there are places like the introduction of the last movement where the music seems hard-pressed.

We did not need a new recording of this work, with Columbia's own beautiful version by Beecham and the London Philharmonic, and Victor's San Francisco-Monteux, or Philadelphia-Ormandy. Yet having a new set, we have the old question: which to buy? I like them in this order: Beecham, Rodzinski, Monteux.

MASSENET: Scenes Alsaciennes. Minneapolis Symphony, under Mitropoulos. Columbia 723. $4.60. This is an excellent recording technically. Of the music I can only quote the late Lawrence Gilman on Massenet:

> "This intrepid composer, gifted with the spiritual distinction of a butler, the compassionate understanding of a telephone girl, and the expressive capacity of an amorous tomtit . . ." Mr. Gilman takes fresh breath and goes on, "Poor Massenet, that male milliner of music. The music is a prodigy of vacuous ineptitude. Its impotence is breathtaking."

Gilman was not referring to Massenet's Scenes Alsaciennes, but he might well have been.

SCHUMANN: Symphony No. 3 ("Rhenish"). Minneapolis Symphony under Mitropoulos. Victor 11. $6.

Frederick Stock and Bruno Walter have hitherto been my models for conducting this glowing score. Now I must add, to my frank surprise, Dmitri Mitropoulos.

This is by far the best recording, technically, which Victor has given him and his orchestra, and it is also the best interpretative job I have heard from them. This is a surprise to me, because the standard repertoire, especially in the late romantic school, has not generally been the Greek conductor's forte.

The first three movements are brilliant, their sonorities ideally blended, and the melodic line kept moving in that way so necessary for Schumann. The fourth movement is marked with unusual breadth, and comes off better than in any previous recording. Only in the last movement do things seem to fall apart. The music loses shape, and sounds driven but not triumphant. Even so, this is a remarkable set. P. H.

Waiter, Son of Cook Have Good Shows

Two artists, one a waiter and the other the son of a cook, are having successful shows in New York. Walter Philipp, employed in a New York delicatessen, is showing heads of clowns at the Artists Gallery; every painting was sold on the opening day and some to famous collectors, said Gallery President Hugh Stix. Constantine Abanavas, of Greek descent, is exhibiting "a cycle of religious paintings" at Contemporary Arts.

The New York Museum of Modern Art, which has been opened Thursday evenings to admit people whose working hours made daytime visits impossible, finds the attendance too slight to justify the expense; from now on the only hours are noon to 7 Mondays through Saturdays, and 1 to 7 Sundays.

Petrillo Ukase Promises Fewer Screwball Ditties

NEW YORK, Feb. 28 (U.P.)—There shone a faint ray of hope today for millions of American sufferers, cringing victims of that Frankenstein of popular music—the screwball song.

You know, the insane ditty that went: "Screet, geet, patchareet, lobu, lobu, galumph!" And songs like "Mairzie Doats," "Chickory Chick," "Itty Bitty Fishes," and that serenade for the simple-minded, "Open the Door, Richard."

The concensus of music publishing houses today is such novelty songs have a far smaller chance of acceptance than before James C. Petrillo's union clamped down a ban on making recordings.

The secret of the overnight The secret of the overnight success of "Screet, Geet" and the sive type of composition being played again and again and again on juke boxes and recorded radio shows. It was a matter of sheer repetition, pounding it in until housewives, caught off guard, found themselves unable to stop muttering "screet, geet, patchareet" while dusting off the table.

The trend now, the music houses say, is definitely toward revival of the really good songs of the last several decades.

The recording companies, of course, have a two-year backlog of records—mostly old familiar songs but with a number of tunes from broadway shows not yet staged and other new ones written by composers whose past successes indicate that their new songs should do well.

The publishers believe that the whole pattern of popular music may be turning back to the days when a song was accepted slowly but held its popularity for years instead of weeks.

And that means no "screet, geet." You could lead a nation to mass suicide playing that song for years.

Pastor, Actor Put 'Oomph' in Sunday School

BRONXVILLE, N. Y., March 6 (AP).—A pastor and a radio actor have teamed up to make Sunday school lessons more interesting for youngsters here.

They are the Rev. Howard L. Halter of the Bronxville Community Chapel and Lon Clark, who plays "Nick Carter" on the Mutual Network.

They started by producing scriptual dramatizations, using church staff members and Sunday school children as talent. The programs were recorded on a tape recorder. Later, Clark enlisted the help of fellow radio thespians to give the dramatizations a professional touch. Now special pictures are projected while the transcriptions are being played.

Pastor Halter says the wholehearted enthusiasm of the children answered any questions he might have had as to whether this streamlined form of religious education would be accepted.

"Before studying for the ministry I was all set to go into advertising," he explains. "Now we are just putting a little of what I learned into practical use for religious education."

Train Passengers Get 'Individualized' Radios

Chicago, March 6 (AP).—Individually controlled radio speakers in the ceiling of new railroad cars being delivered by Pullman-Standard Car Mfg. Co. to the Rock Island Lines provide an answer to the problem of who wants to hear what in radio fare.

To give passengers entertainment that appeals to them, engineers have installed amplifiers that limit the sound to the area immediately below. Because of the distribution of the speakers and the fact that they may be adjusted separately for tone or turned off entirely, travelers have a choice of listening or not.

Nets Ban Ingle Disc As Immoral

HOLLYWOOD, March 6 (U.P.)—Radio networks have barred Red Ingle's latest record as immoral and insulting to their biggest sponsors, the band leader claimed today.

Ingle, who drove the country crazy with "Timtayshun," has popped up with a catchy little ditty on "Cigareets, Whuskey, and Wild, Wild, Wimmen." He and his "Natural Seven" corn it up good, with drums and tambourines and all the hand-clapping and bellowing of a corner revival meetin'.

"Evangelist" Ingle boomed out with a preachment against "John Barleycorn, nicotine, and the temptations of Eve."

He sent the record to all the networks. The censors took one quick listen and paled. Never, they ruled, would "Cigareets, Whuskey, and Wild, Wild Wimmen" tinkle forth on their networks.

"Why not?" demanded Red.

The lyrics, reproved the censors. Take that verse (reprinted by permission of the Tim Spencer Music Publishers):

> "Once I was happy and had a good wife—with plenty of money to last me for life,
> "But I met a gal and we went on a spree—she taught me to smoke and to drink whuskee-e-e-e-e."

"Immoral," ruled the censors. "Sinful and wicked."

But what really hit them was the next verse:

> "The cigareet is a blot on the whole human race.
> "A man is a monkey with one in his face."

What their cigarette sponsors would say when they heard that, the censors didn't even like to think about. And if they broadcast "Buhleeve me, dear bruther—it's a fire at one end and a fool on t'uther" . . . well . . .

They didn't like all the "whiskies" Ingle scattered through his record, either. Networks have a policy against hard liquor advertising. They don't like records about it any better.

The ban means Ingle's latest masterpiece won't go out on coast-to-coast programs.

"But the independent disc jockeys and the juke boxes can pick it up," he beamed. "And with this ban we'll all get rich! The Capital Record Co. is dee-lighted."

He's a little miffed, though, at the way the censors reacted to his "revival" ditty.

"Shucks," drawled Red. "Here I am crusadin'—and they ban me. Ain't it wonderful?"

'Radio Cavalcade' To Tell Airwaves' Tale

Hollywood, March 6 (AP).—Radio's growth in the United States will be told on the screen in "Radio Cavalcade." Jerrold T. Brandt and Columbia Pictures Corp. will film the picture, with the Nation's four chief broadcasting networks cooperating.

Brandt announced he had obtained from the armed forces radio service screen rights to "command performance," the radio show produced for GIs abroad.

Negro Vote Strongly Felt In Schools

By Fred M. Hechinger

WEST PALM BEACH, FLA., March 6.—You can look from one end of a bus to the other down here and survey the "white" and the "colored" sections. But if you want a survey of the local schools, you must cross from one side of the "tracks" to the other.

It was amazingly difficult to find anyone who could direct me to the "Colored Industrial High School." Two secretaries and a telephone operator at the white Central Schools didn't know. A policeman shrugged his shoulders and was sorry. Finally a cab driver took me there.

"Industrial High" is a misnomer, for the school includes all grades. There is an adequate campus, well-kept and pleasant. The buildings are of the conventional school style. They show the decay which comes from overcrowding, insufficient personnel and lack of funds for repairs.

Fifteen hundred students are a heavy load for these facilities. The staircases show the strain. They are perfectly safe, but the steps are worn and an occasional rung is missing in the banister. At Central Schools the principals had roomy offices and reception rooms. Dr. Stewart, head of Industrial High, has a cubbyhole into which his own desk and that of his secretary are squeezed, leaving enough room for two or three thin visitors.

Ulysses B. Kinsey, administrative assistant to the principal, took me around the grounds. His and the school's pride is a bungalow off the campus. It was recently acquired and furnished as the "model home," a domestic science laboratory.

Cooking Laboratory

BACK on the campus, we went to the cooking laboratory, only recently furnished. It consists of six completely equipped, self-contained kitchen units. Even with classes of close to 40 girls almost all pupils get a frequent chance to participate in the cooking and washing process under the supervision of an expert teacher, trained at Columbia University.

Kinsey, who aside from his administrative duties teaches government and civics, made it clear that the laboratory represents the high spot at Industrial High. It seemed obvious that equality of facilities—long an alleged substitute for equality—could not be said to exist. I was told that the yearly educational expenditure per Negro child was $68. The white equivalent is $129.

Almost two years ago a State law decreed that teachers must receive equal pay, regardless of color. While many of the colored teachers have benefited from that measure, the practice of "downgrading" them into lower categories is still evident. Out of 61 teachers at Industrial High only 16 are in pay group 3 and none in 4 or 5, although the highest academic qualifications are represented. When I asked a prominent white educator concerning the caliber of the Negro instructors, he offered excellent testimony.

While teachers are theoretically "graded" by a citizens' "rating committee," it appears that the superintendent has considerable personal power in the final decision.

Morale High

IN SPITE of these grievances, teacher morale seems surprisingly high. The reason is probably that considerable progress has been made and more is expected. "The change came over two years ago," said a dynamic, young educator and political leader. "We made our people realize that they could use their democratic power to better their conditions. There are 30,000 voters in this community, and 10,000 of these are Negroes. No politician—whatever his prejudices—can afford to overlook one third of the electorate if they know how to throw the weight of their vote."

This part of the community has come to be education-conscious enough to act as a citizen-pressure group for better schools. Its influence in the selection of the next superintendent makes it almost certain that a progressive educator will be chosen. When I asked the almost sure-fire candidate (his name must be withheld for political reasons) concerning the status of the Negro schools, he answered without hesitation that they were badly in need of better facilities and must be given every aid.

Undoubtedly there is a hard road ahead. Kinsey said such technical courses as radar, aviation and film techniques (to mention just a few) remain white monopolies. Inevitably the inferior level of educational opportunities backfires against the colored community. "They don't teach us what they blame us for not knowing," one educator summed up the white attitude.

Aside from the sting of personal degradation, the wastefulness of discrimination is obvious to all colored educators here. At the same time they are aware of the realistic need for limited, attainable objectives. Therefore they rely completely on their voting-block power within the Democratic machine and reject the radical lures, including the Wallace third party.

Among the most serious complaints is the lack of junior college facilities for Negroes. It was pointed out to me that the legality of the white Junior College of West Palm Beach can be seriously questioned as long as that institution is publicly supported and has no colored counterpart.

Generally, however, there is peaceful emphasis on democratic evolution and good public relations. Mr. Kinsey recalled the surprise of one school board member who had come to Industrial High for the first time in his 50-odd years at West Palm Beach. "You're really running a good school," he exclaimed—and he has been a supporter of the institution ever since.

Ship Expert Lends Hand On Scenes for 'Mourning'

CAPTAIN Leo Nolan knows what it's like to stand out to sea under the crack and snap of canvas, well remembers the salty thrill of following the trade winds down to Rio and Costa Rica in a sturdy clipper ship. The Alden Bessie, the John C. Fremont, the North Star—Nolan shipped on them all, in his younger days.

Few people today realize that it was as recently as the beginning of World War I that most of the old clippers stopped operating, some even having been in use as late as 1935, when the North Star last glided out of San Francisco, bound for Australia with gear for one of Byrd's early Antarctic expeditions.

For all of his memories, Captain Nolan is no graybeard. Now a burly 47, he's one of Hollywood's chief experts on nautical matters, and it was Captain Nolan who designed the clipper Flying Trades for R-K-O Radio Pictures' "Mourning Becomes Electra."

A good many of the dark doings in "Mourning Becomes Electra" unfold on the Flying Trades; it is there that Katina Paxinou hastens for her secret trysts with Leo Genn, there that Genn is coldly stalked and murdered by Rosalind Russell and Michael Redgrave.

Building the ship so that she was accurate in every detail was a labor of love for Nolan; he was paid a handsome fee, of course, for making sure that the Flying Trades was authentic down to her last trim halyard, but the pleasure that he got out of recreating a true clipper undoubtedly outweighs any of the practical considerations of the job.

Nolan first turned out a 25-foot model, with the help of the R-K-O property department, then called in what amounted to a regular construction gange to help him build a full-sized ship. The Flying Trades never got closer to the sea than a gigantic sound stage in Culver City, but it was built with as much care as if it were going right into service on the old New York-San Francisco run—down around the Horn, and hang onto your hats. The master's cabin of the ship is a duplicate of the one in the old John C. Fremont.

Captain Nolan has been standing the Hollywood watch for some years, keeping a weather eye on such productions as "Old Ironsides" and William S. Hart's "Shark Munro," and working with both the older and the younger Douglas Fairbanks on "The Black Pirate" and "Sinbad the Sailor."

Today, Captain Nolan spends most of his spare time in his Palos Verdes home on the California shore, his spyglass to his eye, searching the horizon rather wistfully for sails. He doesn't find many.

Action Urged To Bolster School Plans

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

THE UNITED STATES OFFICE OF EDUCATION yesterday called for Congressional action on three fronts to strengthen the Nation's educational program.

National security requires Federal aid to education, Federal scholarships, and an expansion of the Office of Education to enable it to provide "needed leadership and assistance to schools and colleges," the office stated.

The recommendations were contained in the 1947 annual report, prepared under the direction of John W. Studebaker, United States Commissioner of Education. The report, sent to the President and Congress on Friday, was made public yesterday.

"To strengthen education is to contribute mightily to a healthy economy, improved physical and mental health, and understanding of democracy, and a greater sense of personal responsibility for its success," the report declared.

"The achievement, in the interest of the national security, of a strengthened educational program throughout the country cannot be solely the responsibility of the several individual States. A national objective implies a national responsibility for leadership and assistance."

Efforts Reviewed

REVIEWING "year after year" attempts by groups of citizens to secure "Federal financial assistance to assure a reasonable national minimum of educational opportunity in every State and community," the report said:

"The annual cost would be trifling in comparison with what the Nation now pays in wasted human talent for the lack of universally strong schools and school systems; or in comparison with the economic dividends that would accrue from what the United States Chamber of Commerce terms 'Education—an Investment in People.'"

On Federal scholarships the report points out that "national conservation of our human resources is imperative in any integrated national security program."

Success of the GI education program "argues for the development before 1950, when that program tapers off, of a permanent program of Federal scholarship grants to be administered in the interest of the national need for trained leadership . . . in all fields of learning and open to 'all who can qualify.'"

Top Accomplishment

SUMMARIZING educational progress during the past year, the report states that "probably the most significant single accomplishment" of the office "was the leadership given in preparing the Nation's high schools to redirect their efforts."

"Clearly, they must face the technological age and concede to its demands—by orientating youth psychologically as well as vocationally, to the workaday world as they will find it upon leaving school.

"In thus realistically directing the majority of youth toward jobs that are no less essential to the world's work for being routine and unglamorous, the school will fulfill its duty—long overlooked—of recognizing the dignity and necessity of all types of labor."

Enrollments in Federally-aided vocational classes increased by nearly 300,000 students over the previous year, the report declared.

Colleges and universities experienced the greatest growth ever recorded in any one year in any country, the report said.

The estimated enrollment of 2,078,095 students attending 1700 schools in the fall of 1946 was double the enrollment of the previous year. Expenditures during the school year 1946-47 were more than a billion dollars, an all time high, the report showed.

Aid for Salzberg

Washington, Pa., March 6.—Using the slogan "SOS" (Supplies for Overseas Students), students at Washington and Jefferson College have begun a campaign for money and clothing to be sent to students at the University of Salzburg, in the old Austrian Province of Salzburg.

Several members of the student body, under the leadership of Chaplain Howard F. Gehart, former Army Chaplain, are attempting to raise $1000 in cash and other contributions to purchase supplies for the purpose stated.

JUNGLE GYM, they call this contraption in the United States. These children of Army personnel at a school in Tokyo find themselves quite at home on it

Oxford Profs Repay Yale Hospitality

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 6 (AP).—Ten Yale University undergraduates will study at Oxford University next summer because Yale cared for the children of Oxford faculty members during the war.

The stipend of 150 pounds (about $600) given to each of the 10 Yale men comes from a fund of $100,000 accumulated largely from the contributions of English families who wanted to pay for the care given their children here.

After Dunkirk, the Yale faculty committee for receiving Oxford and Cambridge Children, Inc., arranged for 136 wives and children of Oxford dons to live with the families of Yale faculty members, alumni and friends. These refugees were permitted to bring only a limited amount of money.

To repay Yale for its hospitality, the Oxford evacuation trust fund was formed. The scholarships cover cost of transportation to and from England, tuition, board and lodging from July 2 through August 13.

Student Group Seeks to Retain Exchange Ships

Madison, Wis., March 6—The National Student Association is urging passage of a resolution in Congress which will extend the authority of the Maritime Commission to sell, charter and operate vessels until July 1, 1949. Under present legislation the commission's authority expires April 1.

NSA wants ships available for exchange-student projects and European travel this summer. Many American students are planning to study and travel in Europe but unless the ships are available most of them will be unable to go.

The national office of NSA here is urging its member student governments to push action on their campuses for the passage of the resolution. The association is asking them to write Representative Alvin F. Weichel, Republican, of Ohio, chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee. Students have also been asked to write to their Congressmen for favorable action on the resolutions.

Heads Alabama U.

University, Ala., March 6.—Dr. John M. Gallalee, for 35 years a member of the Alabama University engineering faculty, has been elected eighteenth president of the university.

He succeeds Dr. R. R. Paty, who resigned on January 1, 1947, to become chancellor of the University of Georgia system.

Virginia 'U' Opening School To Keep 'Em Home, Aid South

By Dan Shumate

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., March 6.—Training future Southern business leaders who will stay home and help pull the South even with the rest of the Nation in standard of living is the chief objective of the Graduate School of Commerce and Business Administration now being established at the University of Virginia.

Raising the Southern living standard from its present low level, about seven-tenths of the national standard, will require not only more business and industrial expansion, but also better trained business executives, men who can compete with those of the North and the West on equal terms.

Many young Southerners have been going to universities in the North and West for advanced business training in the last two decades. More than 300 Southerners are at this time enrolled in the largest New England graduate business school (Harvard). These young men have gone from all over the South. Heaviest current losers of "mental topsoil" are Texas, Virginia, Maryland, Florida, the District of Columbia, North Carolina, Georgia and Tennessee.

Often Handicapped

SOUTHERNERS who stay at home and work their way to top executive posts in regional business and industry often are handicapped in expanding their enterprises and in meeting national competition because they do not understand or have not even heard of advanced methods of business and research developed and applied in other areas.

A new attack on the problem of training and keeping Southern business brains in the South is being prepared at the University of Virginia in the form of the first graduate school of business in this entire section. This new school is one of the immediate objectives of the University of Virginia's $7,800,000 Development Fund, of which Fleet Admiral William F. Halsey, an alumnus, is national chairman.

Dr. Robert D. Calkins, director of the general education board and formerly dean of Columbia University's Graduate School of Business, will come to the University next Saturday to confer with and advise administrative officials and alumni in supporting the business school as an immediate fund objective.

Dr. Calkins' formula for improving the situation calls for not only more capital facilities and power per worker, but also for "the best direction and management, and the most enterprising and effective methods."

Broad Program

THE program mapped out for the new school includes not only technical training in business methods but also basic economic research, study of current business problems, particularly as they affect the South, advisory conferences with national leaders, and assistance or special training for active businessmen who wish to bring their particular problems to the school for expert analysis and advice.

Stewardess Flies 5000 Miles A Week and Studies, Too

TRAVELING more than 5000 miles a week going to and from classes may sound a little far fetched. However, that is just what American Airlines' Stewardess Ruth Jorgenson is doing while attending the University of Tulsa and studying for her master's degree in English literature.

Ruth attends classes in Tulsa and does her homework in Los Angeles, Washington, New York, Chicago and San Francisco.

A veteran of more than half a million miles in flight, Ruth's unusual study habits started last fall when she was transferred to Tulsa. "I have free time between flights and on stopovers to study," Ruth explains. "The University of Tulsa has made it possible for me to continue my work even though my routine is a bit unusual."

Ruth is out of town three days of every five. Whenever a flight and an examination conflict, Ruth's chief stewardess gives her permission to exchange flights with some of the other girls.

"I manage to attend more than half the classes and compensate for missing the rest by writing papers and doing independent study," Ruth said. "Other students help me with classnotes I have missed. The University of Tulsa has been most helpful. Dr. C. I. Pontius, the president, calls it 'the human equation,' and I have been able to make a perfect adjustment between flights and studies."

Miss Jorgensen carries her books on the planes and does most of her studying in libraries, hotel rooms, park benches and airport offices. Ruth also finds her passengers of great help in her studies. Presidents, deans and professors from many universities have been interested in her unusual study habits, including the dean of the University of Copenhagen.

Ruth Jorgensen studies in San Francisco with the Golden Gate Bridge as a background. Between classes, she flies 5000 miles a week as an airline stewardess

Ruth has been flying for three years. After the spring semester, she has only to complete her comprehensive examinations and write her thesis (probably on Edmund Spenser) and she can tack on "M. A." alongside her wings.

At the Bridge Table

Press Club Tournament Opens Next Thursday

By Marian H. Barre

SOMETHING special among trophies goes in competition Thursday—it is a heavy, beautifully designed sterling silver cup given to the National Press Club by former Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones.

A two-session championship will decide the fate of the trophy, winners obtaining it for one year's custody. The first round will be played Thursday evening; finals two weeks later, on March 25. Paul E. Golden will direct and the field is restricted to members and invited guests.

Another famous trophy belonging to the Press Club was recently retired after 15 annual competitions. This is the cup donated by Ely Culbertson. It was won by Dr. A. F. O'Donnell, who played with Mrs. E. P. Cotter in the February matches.

The emphasis is on trophies because bridge champs did without them during the war when their cost was donated to the War Orphans' Scholarship Fund. The Washington Bridge League has acquired four new permanent prizes for its coming city championships. They were purchased by C. C. Johnson, chairman of the committee. No ACBL unit owns a finer trophy collection than the WBL. Chief among its treasures is the Woodward Cup, which, duly inscribed, was presented to its rightful custodians, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Duffy of New Bern, N. C.

The presentation was made at the Richmond Tourney last weekend. A flock of Washingtonians attended; here is the local record:

Mrs. F. W. Moorman and J. R. McGhee were runners-up in the opens after winning the initial session, Miller Roberts and George Dickerman finished third—this pair topped the final field. Mrs. F. Eberson and W. A. Poissant also made the honor list. In the team game the District line-up of Cotter, White, Murray, and Willis led in the first half; they were third at the finish, a board off two tied Virginia foursomes. The defenders came in fourth; this was Thurtell's team. Moore, Benedict, Johnson, and Boyd took fifth awards.

Besides those mentioned, about 20 other local players were present, including our Mr. Golden, on a busman's holiday assisting Director A. M. Sobel of the ACBL.

NEXT tourney is the Lehigh Valley annual at Allentown, Pa., March 12 to 14. And then comes a new Virginia offering, the City of Norfolk Championships on the 19th, 20th and 21st.

The ranking event at home this week is the master-point monthly duplicate sponsored by Capital City Chess Club on Saturday evening at Hotel Gordon.

Mrs. William Cheeks announces that she has resumed management of the Rubber Bridge Club at 2010 R st. nw. She will be assisted by Mrs. F. W. Moorman, one of the ranking younger distaff players.

With five Tuesdays in March, the Federal Bridge League settled down to uninterrupted weekly team games at Pierce Hall, with a pair section in play concurrently. The league's master-point awards in February were shared by Miller Roberts-Dr. A. F. O'Donnell, Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Steinberg, Mrs. J. A. Dearing-Mrs. Henry Walker, Colonel and Mrs. T. Willis.

Runner-up points went to Mr. and Mrs. W. M. McIntyre, Mrs. C. W. Zimmer-Miss Jessie Bryant, Miner Ellis-Warren Bedell, L. Camire-C. Geier.

At the bimonthly charity game sponsored by the Women's Auxiliary, Mrs. H. G. Campbell and Mrs. H. S. Klein led the north-south field by the enormous margin of 34 points, which was more than three boards. Winners east-west were Mrs. Marianne Boschan and Mrs. Dora Schwartz, with a 9-point lead. Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Dormandy, D. G. S. Spellman and M. Bartosik were runners-up.

The game was played on February 28 at Euclid Studios, Mrs. D. E. Stephan directing. Mrs. Schwartz was committee chairman.

Speed Limit Is Only 20 In Bermuda are with coral roads, flowering gardens, sun bathing—and tennis, golf, fishing, sailing.

Belmont Manor, Ravello Gardens—Inverurie, lie along the harbor like a necklace. They are all made over since the war years, and the amenities of gentle living are still evident in a fast-changing world. Speed is still a lost art in Bermuda.

Belmont Manor has an 18-hole championship golf course, where eight tournaments are on schedule. The Grecian swimming pool offers a sanded beach for sun bathing and swimming at the noon hour—jolly as an aperitif. And you can have that, too—in the grill or the new Fascination Cocktail Lounge.

IN BERMUDA autos are limited to 15 miles per hour in built-up areas, 20 in open country. The cars look like toys to visiting Americans.

There are no night clubs, but dancing, always a favorite among Bermudians, is popular at several hotels.

THERE are innumerable historic places to visit. The colony was settled in 1609 by a party under command of Sir George Somers, which was shipwrecked on its way to Virginia. For many years the islands' inhabitants lived by whaling, agriculture, and seafaring. Since 1900, the growth of the tourist trade has dwarfed the colony's other means of livelihood.

The colony's House of Parliament is well worth a visit. All the traditional "pomp and ceremony" is in evidence and is reminiscent of a visit to the House of Commons in London, except that everything is in miniature.

Use of Radar Expanding on Great Lakes Ships

Cleveland, March 6 (AP).—Ships cruising the Great Lakes with their huge cargoes of iron ore this year will use about three times as many radar sets as last year, shippers estimated today. That means, they said, that about 35 vessels should have the equipment that gives warning of navigational dangers. More sets are on order.

What this will represent in terms of additional trips and increased tonnage is still to be figured out, but company officials said there is little doubt of a stepped-up efficiency. They expect to haul more than 80 million tons of iron ore this year.

The Lake Carriers Association has been conducting a radar school for officers and to date 70 have taken the three-day course.

Airline Traffic Grows in Norway

Oslo, March 6 (AP).—Statistics for 1947 show that air traffic to and from Norwegian airports steadily increased.

A total of 52,268 planes started or landed at Norwegian airfields during the year. Oslo's two aerodromes, Fornebu and Gardermoen, were used by 20,788 planes, of which 4333 were airliners.

Calls of military planes are not included in the figures.

It Will Be "Very Sporty"

New Nine-Hole Golf Course Ready by Memorial Day

MEMORIAL DAY a new nine-hole golf course at the Minnesota ave. and E st. entrance to Dupont Park will be added to the District's four public-owned links.

S. G. Loeffler, who operates the courses for the Interior Department, describes it as "very sporty." A temporary clubhouse will be ready when the course is opened and a permanent house will be completed in July.

Fees for this course, as for three others for use by white residents, are weekdays 25 cents for nine holes and 40 cents for 18. On Saturdays, Sundays and holidays the cost is 40 cents for nine holes and 75 cents for 18.

The three other courses are Rock Creek, an 18-hole layout at 16th and Underwood sts. nw.; East Potomac, 32 holes in East Potomac Park and Anacostia, 18 holes in the parkway between the Sousa and Eleventh Street bridges.

Langston, a nine-hole course for Negroes at Benning rd. and the Anacostia River, costs 20 cents to play on weekdays and 35 cents on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

Last year more than a half-million admissions were paid to play the four courses.

Clubs are for rent at 20 cents a club at all courses and a bag costs an additional 20 cents. All have refreshment stands and sell balls, clubs, tee, and other supplies. A pro generally is available for private lessons at two dollars a half hour.

All courses have free putting greens and East Potomac has a driving range where it costs 50 cents for a bucket of balls. East Potomac also has a miniature course where for 35 cents you can try 18 holes. The fee includes putter, ball, and score card.

IN TROUBLE

. . . even as you and I

The Bannockburn course at Glen Echo, Md., charges a dollar on weekdays and two dollars on weekends and holidays, but the fee permits you to play as many holes as you wish. After 4 p. m. prices are cut in half.

The Green Brier driving range in Rockville charges 50 cents for 35 balls and a dollar for 75 balls. Practice on the putting green costs 25 cents and a pro is available for lessons at two dollars a half hour. ELSIE CARPER.

Pacific Air Center

Four international airlines now use the Honolulu airport. They are Pan American World Airways, Philippine Air Lines, Australian National Airways and China National Air Corp. United Air Lines, a domestic carrier, also has its terminus in Honolulu.

Hostels Fit 'Touring' to the Moderate Purse

YOUNG people and families interested in visiting the country around Washington by foot, bike, bus or car, and staying at the six hostels in the Potomac Loop, should apply at the Potomac Area American Youth Hostels, 462 Indiana ave. nw. Trips are arranged and monthly schedules planned for swimming, hiking, farming, fishing, folk dancing, photography, games.

The Potomac Area AYH, a member of the Community Chest, has a minimum staff to plan trips, locate new hostels, keep hostels in repair, improve them by work trips, provide responsible houseparents and leaders and schedule events. Its monthly AYH News bulletin of scheduled events is available on application.

The only "tripping" equipment needed is a sheet, plate, knife, fork, spoon and cup. Cooking utensils and blankets are supplied. Thirty-five cents pays for a night's lodging, including fuel. Food is purchased and prepared by the hosteler himself.

A Teen Favorite

FAMILIES who cannot afford commercial accommodations may find through hosteling a way to give the whole family a vacation in the country. But the average hosteler is a boy or girl, 15 years and over, whose pocketbook is slender. Hostels answer the urge to seek the unknown. They provide a roof, a place to cook, a bed and houseparents to act as hosts and chaperones.

Hosteling brings together people with common interests and often diverse backgrounds. Different nationalities and social levels mingle on a common footing and learn to know each other. Early to bed and early to rise is the rule. The hosteler makes his own bed, washes dishes and pans, sweeps and leaves the hostel spic and span for the next comer.

Hoteling originated in Europe and spread to this country in 1933. There are now about 175 hostels scattered over the country. Six of them are in the Potomac Loop, sufficiently close together to permit a tour of 177 miles. For the hiker, Crow's Nest Hostel in the Catoctin Mountains and Mercer Mill Hostel in the Bull Run Mountains, with their fascinating trails and broad views, are particularly appealing.

Greenwood Youth Hostel, located on a 300-acre estate dating back 200 years, affords both historical background and opportunity to study modern farming first-hand. Hostelers often contribute to work of the farm by clearing rocks from the fields, driving the tractor, husking corn and wood cutting.

Self-Propulsion

THE Potomac Loop offers miles of interesting travel over cement roads and country lanes. It passes vast estates and farms, traverses sections rich in historical lore, and sometimes affords long stretches of mountain views.

Hosteling is a sport for all lovers of the outdoors. And hosteling is possible at minimum cost not alone in the National Capital Area but throughout this country and abroad.

The hosteler navigates under his own locomotion whenever possible. This is the purpose and ideal of hosteling.

Air Safety Record

Hawaiian Airlines, Ltd., now operates 50 scheduled flights daily among the five principal islands of the Territory of Hawaii. Last year they carried more than 250,000 passengers. In 18 years of operation not one passenger has been injured.

Whistle Stopping

Daily Flights Link D. C., Atlantic City

THERE'S a great mass of material here about Atlantic City, from which I feel obliged to glean a few jewels. The thought of those poor publicity people sweating over those steaming typewriters reduces me. And reducing is what I need the least of. Eastern Air Lines, to get on with this, fixes this bureau through the pince-nez and reminds it firmly that Washington and Atlantic City now are linked by three regularly scheduled EAL flights each day: at 7:27 a. m. and 4:25 and 5 p. m. . . . Lou Cunningham, True Blue Lou, they call him, apparently was at a loss for words when he wrote this one: "Atlantic City is anticipating another record-breaking invasion of guests at Easter time." Tsk, Lou . . . Florence R. Raikes of the Hotel Traymore (A. C.) doesn't exactly burn up the league with this one: "Elaborate plans are being made for the Easter holidays. . . ." Must be pretty tough. Anyhow, Flo says there will be chorusing and lighted candles and processioning on the night before Easter.

COLONIAL AIRLINES, speaking of Easter, is shipping great, heavy lily blooms up here from Bermuda . . . Pennsylvania, which demurely announces that "the Keystone State is a vacationland that cannot be surpassed anywhere (does that say anywhere?) for diversity, scenery, history and recreation," has an exhibit at the Outdoor Show in the D. C. Armory . . . Northwest Airlines has $500 waiting for some sharp name-thinker-upper. You dig up a name for NA's fleet of Martin 2-0-2's, submit the brainstorm, with a 20-word statement telling why you honored it, to Director of Advertising, Northwest Airlines, 1885 University ave, St. Paul, Minn., on or before March 15. Then put your feet up and wait for the check. . . . Wildwood, N. J., is winding up its Sunday advertising punch to throw about next Sunday . . . A motorcade sponsored by Shenandoah Valley, Inc., has completed a 2399-mile trip from Natural Bridge, Va. through North and South Carolina, Georgia and Florida. The idea seems to have been to advertise the "Valley of the Virginias" and far be it from me not to get in my two cents worth.

THE WEST VIRGINIA State basketball tournament starts tomorrow at Buckhannon, and applications for all State park cabin reservations open on Thursday. Write to Division of State Parks, Conservation Commission, Charleston, 5 West Va. . . . And while we're in WV: a young lady I know from White Sulphur Springs was in Florida recently and picked all eight winners at a dog track one day. But she didn't have any dough down. Mama said nix.

IF YOU NEED MONEY for a vacation and don't mind going in hock up to your earlobes, try the "Traveloan" plan. You get an application at any railroad station, file it with the railroad people and they do the rest—provided your credit is established, you have the ability to pay, and haven't been proscribed by the Thomas Committee. Loans are financed by commercial banks, for which the railroads act as agents, and are repaid in 12 installments at 5 per cent. . . . United Air Lines has fixed up a deal with Irish Air Lines by which travelers may fly from different points in the U. S. to Eire, England and the continent without troubling to make separate reservations.

A WORD to the wise, they say, is just as hard to get anybody to listen to as any other word. This bright mot gotten off the chest, it behooves me to caution all the members that there is a dour bulletin abroad from the Lake Erie International Vacational Conference of Cleveland. "The vacation industry must realize," this gloomy missive says, "that the bloom is off, the honeymoon is over, the lush days of easy picking are gone . . . The turning point has been reached. There will be less vacation money in circulation this year and the customers will be definitely 'price and money' conscious . . . All forms of recreation are making a determined drive for dollars." Well, well! Think I'll just sit back and wait for bids . . . The same mail brings a note from the National Federation of American Shipping protesting a labor practice called "overtime-on-overtime." I don't know what that is, but I wonder if the American Newspaper Guild has heard about it?

You Can Drive to Alaska Without Red Tape in '48

INTERESTED in a vacation motor trip to Alaska?

This will be the first summer in which tourists may go rolling up the Alaska Highway to Fairbanks as they please, without red tape.

Addition of road patrols, service stations, and camp grounds with sheltered cook stoves and picnic tables has enabled Canada to abandon the permit system that was in force for the route last year.

Four-Fifths in Canada

CANADIANS now call this pioneer artery the Northwest Highway. It is known also as the Alcan, the Alaska-Canada, the International Highway, and "the Road." It was constructed in seven months of 1942 to supply airfields on the war-urgent flying route from the States to Alaska. Some 10,000 U. S. Army Engineers and 6000 United States and Canadian civil workers laid it at the average rate of 8 miles a day.

Southern end of the road is at the railhead village of Dawson Creek, 450 twisting miles northwest of Edmonton, Alberta. The gravel roadway crosses the Peace River farming plains, plunges through long stretches of rugged forest land, crosses or skirts four of Canada's chief mountain ranges, and bridges 200 streams in its 1220 Canadian and 300 Alaskan miles to Fairbanks.

Hardships Temper Pleasures

THROUGHOUT the war, military transports kept the highway's dust and gravel flying with joint defense projects of the United States and Canada. In accordance with prior agreements, the Dominion government in April, 1946, took control of the Canadian part of the route along with airfields, telephone lines, and other war-built facilities.

Since taking over, Royal Canadian Engineers with civilian aid have kept their Northwest Highway open the year around. Snowplows push away winter snows as fast as they fall. Tourists were banned throughout 1946, however, because service stops were few.

Even in 1947, there were 100-mile stretches without roadside service of any sort. But tourists applying well in advance and carrying specified extra gasoline, tools, parts, tires, and food rations could obtain permits to make the run. In July, 1947, about 600 cars crossed the Alaskan border.

Scenery beggars description at many points. One is where the highway skirts the shores of Kluane Lake in the Canadian Yukon, close to the Alaskan border. Grades are gentle. Maximum altitude, near Summit Lake in the Rockies, is only 4212 feet. Midsummer heat reaches close to 100 degrees.

Scenery—yes. But pleasure jaunters are warned not to expect ideal motoring conditions. Corduroy stretches, gravel and heavy dust can make riding far from pleasant, can play havoc with tires and motors, and cut down daily mileage average. Mosquitoes and deer flies are abundant summer liabilities.

Auto Rates Drop in France

CAR rental rates for American travelers in France have dropped more than 25 per cent since devaluation of the franc, the American Automobile Association reports. The AAA's international travel department operates a "drive yourself" program abroad.

Newly manufactured cars, which may be rented by the day, week or month include these models: Peugeot, Renault and Simca 6 horsepower sedans; Citroen 11 h. p. sedans, and Ford 13 h.p. sedans. Rates range from $6 to $8 a day; $35 to $53 a week, and $162 to $222 a month.

Former rental rates were $9.25 to $10.25 a day; $60 to $68 a week, and $250 to $282 a month. Mileage allowance of 37½ miles daily remains unchanged. Gas and oil, which are available to Americans, is not included in the rental fee.

Americans may use rented French cars for travel to Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg, Switzerland, Monaco and Spain. International driving licenses, as well as applications for car rentals, are issued in this country by AAA clubs. Payment for car rentals, according to a French regulation, must be made in U. S. currency.

Maine Bears Are Tardy Getting to Bed

NATURE, wildlife authorities, and Maine's big black bears are all mixed up this winter. The bruins, which should have crawled into their dens and commenced the long winter sleep two months ago, are still wallowing about through the snow-choked forests.

Wardens, trappers and lumberjacks report seeing bears roaming about in nearly all parts of the State. In some sections they are chasing and attacking deer. Some have been shot for the handsome black pelts and the bounty. A group of men in Charleston recently tracked down and killed a female and three cubs and a large male bear.

Never before have the animals been seen in the winter. Everybody is wondering and making guesses as to why they haven't hibernated. They also are wondering how they are getting food enough to keep them alive, and what will happen to the young that are usually born some time in February.

The female gives birth to from one to three, usually two, very small cubs while in the stupor of hibernation in the den. Will the young be born in the snow this year and freeze to death or will there be any young born at all? One guess is as good as another.

Some feel that perhaps because of a very large bear population the housing shortage that is plaguing the folks in the cities and towns is also being felt in the realm of the bear.

W. Earle Bradbury, deputy commissioner of the Department of Inland Fisheries and Game, says it can't be because the bears couldn't find the necessary amount of prehibernation food, because food was abundant last fall and the animals now roaming through the woods are very fat and sleek.

Bradbury, a veteran woodsman, and other authorities are just as puzzled as the next guy over this mystery of why Maine's bears won't go to bed.

Traffic is Down

The electric railways of the United States carried about 15.3 billion passengers in 1922, but only about 8.5 billion in 1940.

And Needs More

The United States has more than 1,757,000 miles of surfaced highways.
